At the end of the court was the triumph of the decorators art. It was a representation in golden challe cloth of the golden gate at the world's fair. Here Victor Roberts' celebrated band held forth during the evening, playing the promenade music between dances. The golden gate was constructed high above the heads of the participants in the ballroom on a platform extending from the first gallery for 50 feet out into the court.

ILLUMINATIONS.

The Display at the National Capital Surpassed Any Former Display.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—The illuminations Thursday night surpassed any former display in Washington and the fireworks were exceptionally fine. For the first time in the history of the government a general order issued by the retiring cabinet officers caused every electric and gas light in the great department buildings to be lighted with brilliant results. The classic roof lines of the treasury were outlined with incandescent bulbs, a huge American shield ornamented the state department facade and from the highest elevation of the war department a 60 foot garrison flag floated aflame against the black sky illuminated by the powerful beams of searchlights. Other searchlights brought out the grandeur of the Washington monument and the capitol. A feature of the elaborate fireworks was a balloon ascension from which national colors picked out in fire was suspended above the city.

Greece is Ready for War.

PARIS, March 5.—Le Jour publishes a dispatch from its correspondent at Athens containing a report of an interview with King George, of Greece, in which his majesty declares that Greece is ready for war with Turkey and will yield to no admonition from the powers. The king is reported to have added that the powers might blockade Greece, but in the interior they would be powerless. The Greeks, he said, were fully prepared to fight to the death, and the Macedonians were eager for revolt.

Six More Warships for Spain.

MADRID, March 5.—At a meeting of the cabinet an extraordinary credit was agreed to for the purpose of fitting out six additional warships.

Warlike Preparatins.

LONDON, March 5.—A dispatch from Salonika says that the Turkish military authorities there are making extensive warlike preparations. An immense force of artillery, with great quantities of ammunition, clothing, etc., has arrived at Salonica, and been forwarded to the frontier.

To Mobilize the Mediterranean Squadron

PARIS, March 5.—It is reported that the government is making preparations to order the mobilization of the Mediterranean reserve squadron, which will be sent to the Levant under command of Adm. Humann.

THE SENATE.

Without Dissent, Confirms the McKinley Cabinet—Other Interesting Information From the Capitol of the Nation.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—President McKinley Friday sent to the senate the following nominations:

John Sherman of Ohio, to be secretary of state.

Lyman J. Gage of Illinois, to be secretary of the treasury.

Russell A. Alger of Michigan, to be secretary of war.

Joseph McKenna of California, to be attorney general.

James A. Gary of Maryland, to be postmaster general.

John D. Long of Massachusetts, to be secretary of the navy.

Cornelius N. Bliss of New York, to be secretary of the interior.

James Wilson of Iowa, to be secretary of agriculture.

Immediately upon the receipt of the cabinet nominations at 12:45 the senate went into executive session.

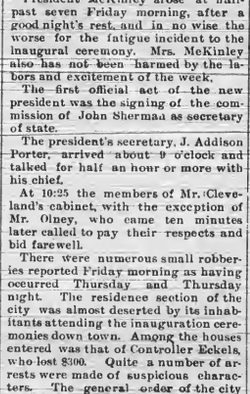
JAMES A. GARY.

The nomination of ex-Senator Sherman to be secretary of state was confirmed off hand without the formality of a reference to any committee. This was done as an act of courtesy to an ex-senator, and in conformity with the customs of the senate under similar conditions. The other nominations for the cabinet were referred to the proper committees, which went into session at once for their consideration.

The entire cabinet was confirmed. There was no objection raised to any of the nominees.

Ex-Congressman Bellamy Storer, of Cincinnati, has been tendered and accepted the office of first assistant secretary of state, now filled by Mr. Rockhill, of Maryland.

The president Friday afternoon issued a proclamation calling an extra session of congress, to convene March 15.



President McKinley arose at half-past seven Friday morning, after a good night's rest, and in no wise the worse for the fatigue incident to the inaugural ceremony. Mrs. McKinley also has not been harmed by the labors and excitement of the week.

The first official act of the new president was the signing of the commission of John Sherman as secretary of state.

The president's secretary, J. Addison Porter, arrived about 9 o'clock and talked for half an hour or more with his chief.

At 10:25 the members of Mr. Cleveland's cabinet, with the exception of Mr. Olney, who came ten minutes later called to pay their respects and bid farewell.

There were numerous small robberies reported Friday morning as having occurred Thursday and Thursday night. The residence section of the city was almost deserted by its inhabitants attending the inauguration ceremonies down town. Among the houses entered was that of Controller Eckels, who lost $300. Quite a number of arrests were made of suspicious characters. The general order of the city was good.

BELLAMY STORER.

Senator Blanchard, of Louisiana, whose term of office expired at noon Thursday, did not long remain a private citizen. On reaching his hotel after the adjournment of the senate, and after witnessing the inaugural parade, he was handed a dispatch from Gov. Foster, of Louisiana, announcing his appointment as associate justice of the supreme court of that state. This tribunal is composed of five judges, and is the court of highest judiciary in the state. It is a position of great honor and dignity, with a salary equal to that of senator.

At 11 o'clock the members of the 23d Ohio, Maj. McKinley's regiment, 150 in number, called and were received in the east room. The meeting was an impressive one. Troop A, of Cleveland, O., the president's escort of Thursday, was also received.

Consul General Lee Heard From.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—Secretary Olney has just received the following cablegram from Consul General Lee at Havana: "All quiet. No excitement here now. I hope to see prompt trial of all Americans imprisoned. Those found innocent to be released and those guilty out of the island." This dispatch, which came Friday afternoon in cipher, indicates a most important change of attitude on the part of the military authorites in Cuba under orders from Madrid, as guilty Americans, on conviction, are to be expelled from the island, instead of being otherwise punished.

FIFTY-FOURTH CONGRESS

Second Session.

WASHINGTON, March 1.—SENATE—The senate Saturday gave almost the entire day to the post office bill. The debate on the post office bill was mainly on the question of an investigation into the cost of carrying the mails on the railroads. It brought out much criticism of the alleged extravagant charges for this mail carriage. The senate sat until midnight. The senate held a session Sunday afternoon.

HOUSE—The house, after five hours' struggle Saturday, passed the anti-railroad ticket scalping bill by a vote of 142 to 51. The adversaries of the measure resorted to filibustering tactics, but they were defeated by an overwhelming majority. The Indian appropriation bill was sent to conference. The senate amendments to the bill to allow the bonding of distilled spirits in bond were agreed to.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—SENATE—The senate Monday in the space in about one hour and an hour passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill, carrying $7,644,677, being an excess of $1,655,000 over the bill, as it passed the house. Half of the amount is to be paid out of the treasury and half out of the revenues of the District of Columbia. Then the naval bill was taken up. It carries $35,728,231, a little over three and a half millions more than the bill contained when it left the house. Two million and a half were added for the purpose of establishing a government armor factory.

HOUSE—The house Monday passed a number of bills of a private character, defeated the economic post bill, discussed and left pending the bill to prohibit the extensive publication by newspapers and periodicals the details of the doings of prize fighters and accounts of prize fights. The last named measure was warmly discussed, and a motion to lay it on the table was agreed to. Mr. Aldrich (rep., Ill.) demanded the yeas and nays on the question. His request was carried, one-fifth of those voting on the motion to table, voting for a roll call.

WASHINGTON, March 3.—SENATE—Bills passed: For the prevention of the introduction and spread of contagous diseases in the United States; fortification bill, appropriating $9,717,141. The house amendments to the senate international money conference bill were concurred in, without a division. The remainder of the session was occupied by the general deficiency, which appropriates $10,334,930, nearly $2,000,000 more than was in the bill as it passed the house. At 6:30 a recess was taken until 8 p. m.

HOUSE—A concurrent resolution was passed authorizing the printing of 10,000 copies of the hearings before the committee on banking and currency. A motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill for a settlement by suit or compromise of the claims of the United States against various states on account of defaulted interest on Indian trust funds was defeated. Mr. Aldrich (R., Ill.) endeavored to bring up the bill prohibiting the transmission of papers containing illustrated accounts of prize fighting, but the house voted 7 to 33 to take a recess. The evening session had not adjourned at 2 o'clock Wednesday morning.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—SENATE—The business of the senate Wednesday was principally in connection with the conference reports. The first to be presented was the appropriation bill for the District of Columbia. It was not a final report, however, as the conferees had failed to reach an agreement on the series of senate amendments appropriating various sums for the charitable institutions of the city. The partial report was agreed to, and a further conference was ordered. The next business in committee was on the bill to amend the laws relating to navigations. The conference report, finally was made on the post office appropriation bill and was agreed to.

HOUSE—When the house reassembled at 10:30 o'clock, Mr. Sherman (rep. N. Y.) called up the conference report on the Indian bill, which the senate rejected Tuesday. When the house took a recess at 5:40, it was understood that the conferees had agreed as to all the amendments except two. A hotly contested fight was made to secure concurrence in the senate amendment to the general deficiency bill providing for payment of Bowman act claims for supplies furnished the union army, adjudicated by the court of claims, but it failed. In accordance with the arrangement made Tuesday the house considered President Cleveland's veto of the immigration bill, and by a vote of 193 to 37 decided to pass the bill, the objections of the president notwithstanding. Final action was taken upon the bills to amend the tariff law so as to authorize the sale to the highest bidder of forfeited smoking opium, to amend the navigation laws, revise and amend the patent laws.

WASHINGTON, March 5.—SENATE—The formal proceedings of the senate continued through the morning. A further disagreement on the deficiency bill was reported, and it was ordered back to conference. At 10 o'clock the venerable Senator Morrill, of Vermont, offered resolutions expressing the appreciation of the senate for the able and impartial discharge of the duties of presiding officer by Mr. Stevenson. There was unanimous and hearty agreement to the resolutions. At 10:30 the formal proceedings were fast nearing an end, and on motion of Mr. Hoar the usual resolution was adopted for a committee of two senators to wait on President Cleveland and inform him that the senate had concluded its labors and was ready to adjourn. Senators Hoar and Price were appointed as the committee. Mr. Hoar announced that the committee of congress had waited on the president and that he had asked them to convey his congratulations on the close of their labors. On motion of Mr. Cockrell it was agreed that the daily sessions shall begin at 12. Thereupon, at 12:10 p. m., the senate adjourned until Friday.

HOUSE—The house was still in the legislative day of Tuesday when it adjourned without day. The closing hours were uneventful. The statesmen had worked all night to get the sundry civil, Indian and agricultural bills to the president, only to have them pocket vetoed, while the general deficiency failed of passage because the house refused to subscribe to the half million of Bowman claims which the senate insisted upon. The only feature of the closing throb of life was the enthusiastic reception accorded Speaker Reed and the unanimous standing vote of thanks tendered him.

WASHINGTON March 6.—SENATE—In executive session Friday the senate confirmed McKinley's cabinet appointments, as follows: John Sherman, of Ohio, to be secretary of state. Lyman J. Gage, of Illinois, to be secretary of the treasury; Russell A. Alger, of Michigan, to be secretary of war; Joseph McKenna, of California, to be attorney general; James A. Gary, of Maryland, to be postmaster general; John D. Long, of Massachusetts, to be secretary of the navy; Cornelius N. Bliss, of New York, to be secretary of the interior; James Wilson, of Iowa, to be secretary of agriculture.

A Cyclone at Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 5.—A brief but terrific cyclone struck Nashville Friday, doing considerable damage. The spire of the McKendree church, possibly the largest and wealthiest Southern Methodist congregation in the Union, was completely wrecked.

The "Pocketed" Bills.

WASHINGTON, March 6.—The "pocketed" bills of the session of congress ending Friday, which failed to become laws because not signed by the president (exclusive of the four great appropriation bills already mentioned), were 45 in number, of which 18 were private pension and relief bills, 12 bills to correct military records, 6 of individuals and four were legal legislation for the District of Columbia. The measures of general importance that reached the president and failed were the sundry civil, agricultural and Indian appropriation, the deficiency bill not reaching the white house at all.

PICKED UP ON BROADWAY.

A True Incident.—A woman was picked up in the street in an unconscious condition and hurried to the nearest hospital. On examination her body was found to be covered with sores caused by the hypodermic injection of morphine.

This mere wreck of a woman had once held an honorable and lucrative position in a large publishing house in New York. Her health began to fail. Instead of taking rest and medical treatment, she resorted to the stimulus of morphine.

The hospital physicians discovered that her primary trouble was an affection of the womb, which could readily have been cured in the first stages.

If, when she had felt those severe pains in the back, the terrible headaches, the constant sense of fullness, soreness and pain in the pelvic region, she had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, it would have dissolved and passed off that polypus in the womb, and to-day she would have been a well woman sitting in her office.

Why will women let themselves go in this way? It seems passing strange that a woman like this one, so highly educated, and so well placed, should have depended on morphine, instead of seeking a radical cure.

There is no excuse for any woman who suffers—she need not go without help. Mrs. Pinkham stands ready to help any woman; her address is Lynn, Mass. Write to her; it will cost you nothing. In the meantime get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at the nearest drug store. The following letter from one of your sisters will encourage you:

MRS. BERTHA LEHRMAN, No. 1 Erie St., 27th Ward, Pittsburg, Pa., writes to Mrs. Pinkham: "I can hardly find words with which to thank you for what you have done for me. I suffered nearly seven years with backache and sideache, leucorrhœa, and the worst forms of womb troubles.

"Doctors failed to do me any good. I have taken four bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and one box of Liver Pills, and used one package of Sanative Wash, and now can say I am well and have been steadily gaining flesh; am stouter and heartier now than I have been for years. I am recommending your Vegetable Compound to my friends. Again I thank you for the good health I am enjoying."

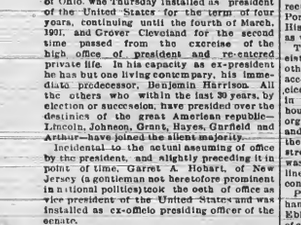
INAUGURATED

McKinley and Hobart Installed in Office,

One as President, the Other Vice President of a Great Nation.

The Inaugural Parade Was a Gorgeous Spectacle.



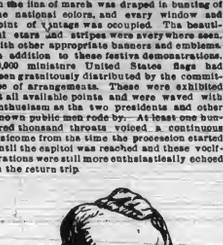
The New President Favors a Commission to Revise Monetary Laws.

He Recommends a Moderate Increase in the Tariff—Urges Speedy Action by the Senate Upon the Arbitration Treaty—Calls an Extra Session of Congress to Meet on March 15.

WASHINGTON, March 4.—William McKinley, of Ohio, was Thursday installed as president of the United States for the term of four years, continuing until the fourth of March, 1901, and Grover Cleveland for the second time passed from the exercise of the high office of president and re-entered private life. In his capacity as ex-president he has now the unique distinction of being immediate predecessor, Benjamin Harrison. All the others who within the last 30 years, by election or succession, have presided over the destinies of the great American republic—Lincoln, Johnson, Grant, Hayes, Garfield and Arthur—have joined the silent majority.

Incidental to the orderly assuming of office by the president, and slightly preceding it in point of time, Garret A. Hobart, of New Jersey (a gentleman not heretofore prominent in national politics) took the oath of office as vice president of the United States and was installed as ex-officio presiding officer of the senate.

The proceedings of the day were characterized by all the imposing spectacular effects and demonstration of popular interest which have become a growing feature of inaugural ceremonies, as the nation has advanced in population and wealth. Between forty and fifty thousand men formed in procession, partly military, partly civic, and escorted the retiring president and president-elect to and from the capitol. At least 20,000 people witnessed the administration of the oath of office on the eastern portico of the capitol and listened or attempted to listen to the delivery of the new president's brief inaugural address, and at night a gorgeous state ball at which the president and vice president will be present will close proceedings.



GEN. HORACE PORTER.
Grand Marshal Inaugural Parade.

The graceful interchange of courtesies between the outgoing and incoming officials, which has only twice been intermitted—once when Bluff John Adams pettishly slunk away and slipped out at the white house at daylight on the fourth of March to avoid shaking hands with his hated federalist successor, the illustrious Thomas Jefferson, and once within living memory when Gen. Grant, because of his strained personal relations with Andrew Johnson, drove in his buggy from the old war department to the capitol, accompanied only by Gen. John A. Rawlins, his chief of staff—were on this occasion exercised to the full extent. Mr. Cleveland and Mr. McKinley rode side by side to and from the capitol. They had dined together at the white house the day before, and they lunched in each other's company on the day in which they transferred the government of this great nation, the one to the other. An additional air of cordiality was infused into the proceedings by the similarity of hotween the views entertained by the retiring president and his cabinet on the financial questions and those upon which the successful candidate of the republican party was elected. Mr. Cleveland in truth felt more gratification probably in installing at the capitol as his successor the leader of an opposing political party than he would have had in escorting under like cumstances the leader chosen by his own political associates as their candidate for the presidency. This innovation on the usually closely drawn partisan lines of American politics gave added piquancy to the proceedings.

Repeated but unsuccessful efforts have been made of late years to change by legislation the date of the inauguration ceremony to a later period of the season, so as to avoid the uncertainties and frequent inclemencies of climate which prevail in Washington in the early part of March.

The decorations of the city were exceedingly effective with but one notable exception. That was the treasury department, the majestic outlines of which were disfigured in violation of all rules of taste. Each of the graceful fluted columns of the eastern facade on 15th street, was partially swaddled in ungraceful pantalets, falling short of the pediments, exactly after the fashion of Uncle Sam's trousers as depicted in the comic papers, and over the entablatures at each end, and also over the main eastern entrance, the shield and eagle of the United States were daubed upon a hideous yellow back-ground, the whole forming a tawdry combination which a third rate circus would have scorned to display. Everywhere else, however, the scene effect was fine, and even the bad taste displayed in the treasury draplngs was in part obliterated by the animated concourse of employes and their families and guests who occupied the temporary seats which, piled tier above tier, reached half way up the side of the building and entirely covered the garden at the south end, looking down Pennsylvania avenue. The pavilion in front of the white house, from which President McKinley reviewed the returning procession was a thing of beauty—an architectural creation of white and gold, strongly resembling in its apparently substantial pillars and its general outlines the portico of historic Arlington, and conveying no impression that it was simply a flimsy structure of wood erected for a day.

All street car traffic was, of course, suspended along the route of the procession; the sidewalks were roped off and were so crowded with people that locomotion was impracticable. Mounted police prevented any one from attempting to break through the "trochs." It seemed as if Washington's normal population of 200,000 had been swelled by more than an equal number of visiting strangers, and that all were out to see the sights. Every building on the line of march was draped in bunting of the national colors, and every window and point of vantage was occupied. The beautiful stars and stripes were in every where seen with other appropriate banners and emblems. In addition to these festive demonstrations, 50,000 miniature United States flags had been generously distributed by the committee of arrangements. These were exhibited at all available points and were waved with enthusiasm as the two presidents and other known public men rode by. At least one hundred thousand throats voiced a continuous welcome from the time the procession started until the capitol was reached and these ovations were still more enthusiastically echoed in the return trip.

HON. ASA S. BUSHNELL.
Marshal Second Division.

The grand marshal entrusted with the direction of today's pageant was Gen. Horace Porter, formerly of the staff of Gen. Grant. His organizing skill had been tested in peace as well as in war.

The escort, largely military, but also consisting of governors of different states and other distinguished guests of honor which accompanied the president and president-elect to the capitol, naturally formed in the immediate vicinity of the white house, the executive mansion. The civic organizations which followed the president and ex-president on their return journey from the capitol to the white house were formed on streets adjacent to the capitol grounds. All was so arranged that each division fell into line at the appointed time without delay or confusion.

President-elect McKinley, who had left his handsomely fitted-up suite of rooms at the Ebbitt house sufficiently early to be in his old of ceremony on the retiring president, was driven to the white house, escorted by the senate committee appointed for the purpose, where, in one of the handsome state apartments, he was received and welcomed by President Cleveland and his cabinet. Then the two presidents descended the white house steps and together the first entered a four-horse carriage. Mr. Cleveland sitting to the right, and amid the booming of canon, the clatter of cavalry, the deep, hoarse rumble of artillery and the resonant tramp of many columns of infantry and the blare of innumerable bands, the march to the capitol began. Then another four-horse carriage following the ex-president rode Vice-President-Elect Hobart and the senators deputed to escort him to the scene of his future duties. Then in a long stream of carriages came other distinguished guests. The president's personal escort was troop A, of Cleveland, O., 80 cavalrymen mounted on cool blooded horses and still more cool headed, a detachment of grizzled veterans from the Twenty-third Ohio volunteers, Maj McKinley's old regiment.

Gen. Nelson Miles, commanding the United States army, and Rear Adm. George Brown, ranking officer of the navy, in full uniform, rode immediately after the presidential party. The second brigade of the first division consisted of the smartly drilled and handsomely equipped national guard of the District of Columbia. A more brilliant and inspiring scene than this part of the pageant presented could hardly be pictured.

The second division of the par do was not secondary to the first in public interest, except that it lacked the presence of presidents to be had a president that had been. In lieu thereof it presented to the admiring plaudits of the crowd the governors of ten great states, each escorted by a gorgeously uniformed staff and detachments from the national guards of their states.

At the head of the division a fitting honor to the state from which the president-elect was chosen rode Gov. Asa S Bushnell, of Ohio, as marshal. Then followed Gov. Hastings, of Pennsylvania; Gov. Lowndes, of Maryland; Gov. Black, of New York; Gov. Grant, of Vermont; Gov. Tanner, of Illinois; Gov. Drake, of Iowa, and Gov. Scofield, of Wisconsin.

At the head of the third and last division of the military parade rode one-armed Gen. O. O. Howard and after him marched the grizzled veterans of the G. A. R., many of whom had served under him in Gettysburg and Chattanooga.

The eight justices of the supreme court of the United States, robed in silk gowns, but wearing the same distinguished guests. The president's personal escort was troop A, of Cleveland, O., 80 cavalrymen mounted on cool blooded horses and still more cool headed, a detachment of grizzled veterans from the Twenty-third Ohio volunteers, Maj McKinley's old regiment.

Gen. Nelson Miles, commanding the United States army, and Rear Adm. George Brown, ranking officer of the navy, in full uniform, rode immediately after the presidential party. The second brigade of the first division consisted of the smartly drilled and handsomely equipped national guard of the District of Columbia. In lieu thereof it presented to the admiring plaudits of the crowd the governors of ten great states, each escorted by a gorgeously uniformed staff and detachments from the national guards of their states.

At the head of the division a fitting honor to the state from which the president-elect was chosen rode Gov. Asa S Bushnell, of Ohio, as marshal. Then followed Gov. Hastings, of Pennsylvania; Gov. Lowndes, of Maryland; Gov. Black, of New York; Gov. Grant, of Vermont; Gov. Tanner, of Illinois; Gov. Drake, of Iowa, and Gov. Scofield, of Wisconsin.

At the head of the third and last division of the military parade rode one-armed Gen. O. O. Howard and after him marched the grizzled veterans of the G. A. R., many of whom had served under him in Gettysburg and Chattanooga.

The eight justices of the supreme court of the United States, robed in silk gowns, but wearing the same unfinished guests. The president's personal escort was troop A, of Cleveland, O., 80 cavalrymen mounted on cool blooded horses and still more cool headed, a detachment of grizzled veterans from the Twenty-third Ohio volunteers, Maj McKinley's old regiment.

NOTICE.

Our prices have always been the lowest for several reasons, viz.: It is only one of several branches of business; that we have no rents to pay; we pay no agents; we keep no extra men or teams; that we keep the largest stock and haul from the factory in large loads when we have nothing else to do; that we pay cash and get all discounts; that from the cheapest to the most expensive we are enabled to give and do give the very lowest prices. Long lines of wire fence down Ashbyfork creek were destroyed by the flood last Thursday night. In some instances the posts were torn out of the ground, and Saturday the water course was about as formidable a trocha as any constructed by Capt. General Weyler in Cuba.

A Magnificent Road.

It is a revelation to most people to know that such railway equipment exists south of the Ohio river as that of the Queen and Crescent Route. The block system; electric equipments such as track signals, electric headlights and crossing gongs; together with a perfectly lined rock-ballasted roadbed, all provide for the swift and safe movement of passenger trains of the most luxurious pattern. The Vestibule Limited leaves Chattanooga over the Queen and Crescent Route daily, on schedules which each year are made a little shorter, through scenery which is unsurpassed. Solid trains to Cincinnati, 9½ hours. Through Pullmans to Louisville ten hours.

The "Tackey Party" given by Mr. and Mrs. Tim Westbay on Tuesday night of last week, was attended by a very large crowd. Dancing was the principal amusement. The Burlington string band furnished the music, and it was first-class. The ladies looked uncommonly well robed in attire selected from their wardrobes of many years ago. Some of the men wore comical costumes, while the looks of others would have made Jesse James, or any of his followers, envious. The party was a roaring success and enjoyed by all who attended.

Some say that Gunpowder creek was higher last Friday than it was ever known to be. At Limaburg it required considerable work on the part of Robert Rouse, proprietor of the sawmill, to save the lumber which was stacked up about the mill. At Joseph Weaver's the water reached the boiler in the mill, and the creek looked like a full grown river. Some who lived on the low land along the creek, were driven from their houses, which, for a while, looked like they would leave for a trip down the Ohio river.

The Queen & Crescent change time Sunday, February 28th, Schedules between Cincinnati and Lexington are shortened up on several trains. The Blue Grass Vestibule leaves Cincinnati at 4.00 p. m., Junction City 8.20 p. m. Train No. 3, leaving Cincinnati at 8.00 p. m. reaches Lexington 10.35 p. m. North bound Train No. 6 leaves Somerset 12:10 instead of 12.25 p. m., Lexington 2.55 and arrives Cincinnati 6:05 p. m. Other trains practically unchanged.

That Wallace Garrison is no longer a member of the firm and has nothing whatever to do with our business, he having sold his entire interest in the business to us. GEN. GARCIA

Defeats a Spanish Column Near Manzanillo.

Remainder of the Troops Dispersed in Great Disorder—The Spanish Commander, Gen. Vara del Rey, Narrowly Escapes Capture.

NEW YORK, March 8.—A special dispatch to the Sun from Manzanillo, February 27, via Havana, says: The Spanish column of Gen Vara del Rey, 2,000 men strong, was defeated and dispersed two days ago by the Cuban forces under command of Gen. Calixto Garcia. More than 1,000 Spaniards were left dead on the estate Costomada, and the remaining part of the column entered Manzanillo in the greatest disorder, proving how serious the defeat was.

In spite of the art of snatching victory from defeat, in which the Spanish officials' reports so greatly excel, Gen. Vara del Rey is obliged to confess his disaster, though finding an excuse in the superior numbers of the Cubans and the advantage of their position. In his report, known at Manzanillo, though probably it will not be published in Havana, he says that his column was only 1,500 men strong and he estimates the Cubans at over 3,000. The Spanish dead, he says, were 500, and he adds, that notwithstanding he was obliged to retire, the losses of the insurgents were severe.

The battle turned against the Spaniards when Gen. Vara del Rey tried to cross on his way to Manzanillo, the river Buey, notwithstanding the heavy fire from the Cuban rifles and two cannon, one a 12-pounder, which caused terrible slaughter.

While crossing the river all was disorder and confusion among the Spaniards, and they could not reply to the volleys of their foes. Nearly all their horses were drowned and they had to abandon the more important part of the convoy they were escorting. A small bridge of wood of which they availed themselves broke down, and with it the Spanish cannon sank to the bottom of the river. Other cannon were left on shore and were captured by the Cubans.

On the other side of the river Gen. Vara del Rey found another Cuban column waiting for him. In the state of panic and confusion to which his troops had been reduced the Cubans could easily complete their victory.

Vara del Rey himself narrowly escaped being captured, and he owes his salvation to a Spanish captain named Quintero, who bravely protected him with some hundred soldiers from a sudden cavalry attack by the insurgents.

In this situation the Spaniards decided to abandon the remainder of the convoy which they succeeded in taking across the river and they hastened their march to Manzanillo. As the object of the Cubans was to seize the convoy, the fight ended there. It lasted eight hours. The Spaniards took two hours to cross the river and they behaved with great courage during all the battle. Not a single Spanish soldier deserted. All who did not reach Manzanillo were left, killed or wounded on the field.

The battle was directed by Gen. Calixto Garcia in person, though the great success he obtained was in great part due to the skill of his chief-of-staff, Col. Mario Menocal, who received information about the path which Vara del Rey had decided to follow. He planned the battle, placing the Cubans on both sides of the river Buey. Garcia took command of the first body and Col. Menocal of the second, which made the last and decisive attack on the other side of the river. The Cubans captured 80 rifles, one cannon and 500,000 rounds of ammunition, besides a large stock of provisions for the town of Manzanillo.

Gen. Garcia controls the province of Santiago de Cuba so far that even in the fortified towns and seaports, where the Spaniards still hold out, his orders are still obeyed. Only after paying regular contributions to the insurgent army are the merchants of these towns able to import and sell their goods. Bayamo is still in the handt of the Spaniards but the Cubans freely communicate with the town, and the garrison dare not make any sally against the numerous insurgent bands which swarm around the place.

LORD MAYOR

Gives a Farewell Banquet to Ambassador Thomas Bayard.

A Score of Ladies Were in the Gallery, the Guests of the Lord Mayoress—Mr. Bayard Makes a Speech Upholding Salisbury's Cretan Policy.

LONDON, March 3.—The farewell banquet given by Rt. Hon. George Faudel-Phillips, lord mayor of London, in honor of Ambassador Bayard, took place Tuesday night in the Egyptian hall, the principal part of the mansion house, the official residence of the lord mayor. The occasion was the last, but one, public appearance of Mr. Bayard in England. Altogether over 350 guests were assembled. The lord mayor sat at the head of the table with Mr. Bayard on his right.

There was a score of ladies in the gallery, the guests of the lady mayoress.

Mr. Bayard made a lenghty speech, the only point of which was his statement that he upheld Lord Salisbury's Cretan policy.

After loving cups had been passed around toasts to the royal family and the president of the United States were honored. The lord mayor then toasted Ambassador Bayard, whom he greeted not only as the distinguished representative from the greatest republic the world had ever seen, but as a Briton in blood who had shown alofty appreciation of English institntions. He recognized in him an eminent jurist, a polished dipiomat, a charming scholar and an accomplished orator.

When Mr. Bayard rose to reply he was vigorously cheered. He spoke with evident emotion. He dwelt upon the representative, unpartisan nature of the assembly and said he did not receive the tribute they offered him as a personal one. The importance of the gathering lay in the fact that hosts and guests alike stood for the vast bodies of people of each country who were interested in each other. He regretted that he was not more capable to voice what he felt. He believed he was chosen four years ago by a patriotic executive to portray what ought to be the proper relation between the United States and Great Britain. His best energies had been directed to the fulfilment of his trust.

Mr. Bayard dwelt at length upon the kindred duties of the United States and Great Britain as the pioneers of human progress, based upon liberty and upon the consequent necessity of fostering such mutual relations as would enable them best to fulfill those duties. He alluded to the vanished glories of the Mediterranean nations, which were formerly the countries for the world's civilization, but which now presented the ghosts thereof.

This object lesson was never plainer than at the present moment when the peace of Europe was in jeopardy through lack of those qualities of force and purposes forming the living grandeur of his country and that of his listeners. (Cheers.) He spoke of the presence of the illustrious statesman who had proven his power and sense of proportion in humane action in affairs.

Talk reference to Lord Salisbury was loudly cheered.

Continuing, Mr. Bayard said he declared in the presence of those who were perfectly able to contradict him that there was not a question between the peoples of the United States and Great Britain that justified a serious controversy of any kind. (Cheers). He could not see a question of international danger or of difficulty so long as the natural impulses of the two nations were not soured and perverted.

It was to prevent such souring and perversion that he had to come to England, and he had labored continually towards this end.

The ambassador referred appreciatively to the Anglo-American arbitration treaty and said that unexpected causes might for a time prevent the acceptance of the treaty, but could not doubt but that the arrangement would be ultimately made.

In conclusion he asked his hearers to keep a corner of their hearts for him and he then bade them farewell.

Mr. Bayard was cheered repeatedly as he took his seat.

Lord Salisbury then spoke. He regretted that Mr. Bayard's term of office had ended. He referred to Mr. Bayard's remark that the impulses of the American and British people being soured or perverted. Lord Salisbury said that the danger did not lie in official circles. If the unofficial people were kept in order the official people would never make war. At the present time organized government had distinctly lost force and public opinion had gained power. Therefore it was increasingly important that public opinion should be rightly guided. It was in shaping the future that the advance of the world lay.

Lords Peel, Herschell and Halsbury also spoke.

Evans May Be Pension Commissioner.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., March 3.—It is stated here on what is considered authority that H. Clay Evans has received the appointment of commissioner of pensions, and that he will accept. Mr. Evans was summoned to Washington by wire leaving Monday morning, 24 hours ahead of the time he had fixed to go.

Death-Dealing Tornadoes Predicted.

ST. LOUIS, March 3.—This city has been enveloped in a dense fog during the past ten hours, and at noon Tuesday a heavy rain storm prevailed.

Rev. Ira Hicks, the well-known weather prophet, in his review Tuesday said: "I hope the public will take warning and prepare for fierce storms this month. If all signs do not fail, we shall have some death-dealing tornadoes in this latitude during March. April and May will also be stormy months, and the prudent will have their cyclone cellars ready for immediate occupancy."

EVACUATION

Of Crete by the Grecian Troops is an Impossibility.

Greece Sends a Reply to the Ultimatum of the Powers.

The Government Will Call Out the Last Two Classes of Reserves—The Crown Prince Leaves for Trikhala Tuesday —A Turkish War Vessel Chased.

NEW YORK, March 8.—A special cable dispatch to the Herald from Athens says:

Quite a warlike aspect is visible all over the squares and the streets of the capitol. Reservists are hurrying from all parts of the kingdom. Several batteries and one regiment of cavalry have left for the frontier.

The government intends to call out the last two classes of reserves.

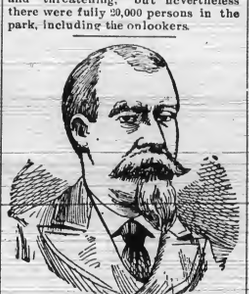
The Crown Prince Constantine leaves on Monday for Trikhala in Thessaly, taking chief command of the troops there.

The government will Monday submit a reply to the collective note of the powers.

A Turkish warship, while attempting to land troops and provisions at Douro, in the Gulf of Arta, was chased by the Greek revenue cutter Afroissa, being unable to escape she ran ashore and only 15 of her crew were saved.

The British ironclad Anson, from Malta, has arrived at the Pireus. The British cruiser Blanche and the battleship Nile have left the port.

LONDON, March 8.—A dispatch to the Central News from Athens gives the following summary reply to the ultimatum of the powers which Greece handed to the diplomats Monday when the time expires in which a reply can be made.



It will recall that Greece in 1896, in deference to the wish of the powers used her influence with the Cretans to induce them to accept reforms offered by Turkey. It will point that the continued unsettled state of the island is proof of the futility of the measures of reform.

With regard to the autonomy of the island the reply will state that it is for the Cretans to decide whether they will accept or not.

It will reply that the evacuation of Crete by Greece is impossible, because peace, to restore which Greek troops and war ships were sent to the island, remains seriously disturbed.

LONDON, March 8.—A large radical meeting was held in Hyde Park Sunday to give voice to the feeling in favor of Greece, which generally obtains among the masses of England. Among the speakers were Joseph Havelock Wilson, M. P., for Middlesborough, and Edward J. Morton, M. P., for Devonport Resolutions were adopted amid much enthusiasm expressing sympathy with the Cretan Christians in their struggle for freedom, congratulating Greece upon her firm resolve to protect the Cretans, and protesting against the coercion of Greece by the powers. One of the resolutions urges Lord Salisbury to refuse to disgrace the British fleet by lending it to support the Turks.

The weather was not favorable for a large outdoor gathering, it being dull and threatening, but nevertheless there were fully 20,000 persons in the park, including the onlookers.

TRADE REVIEW.

The Gradual Improvement in Business Continues—There is a Better Demand for Most Products on the Whole.

NEW YORK, March 6.—R. G. Dun & Co. says, Saturday, in their weekly review of trade:

The slow and gradual improvement observed for some time has continued during the past week and without material check. There is a better demand for most products on the whole, with continuance of speculative buying in some, notably in wool, because of expected duties. Meanwhile money markets continue as easy and undisturbed as if there never had been any anxiety about the gold reserve, and fairly large sales of stocks on London account during the week, because of international anxieties, have made no perceptible difference in American markets.

Reports of probable seeds abroad have helped speculation in wheat somewhat, but it has risen three cents, though the price is still lower than two weeks ago. Western receipts of wheat are still small, 1,559,381 bushels, against 2,301,633 last year, and the Atlantic exports, flour included, were for the week 1,333,413 bushels, against 1,541,135 last year, but the corn exports continue so heavy as to compensate largely, if not wholly for any decrease in wheat, amounting for the week to 2,779,974 bushels, gulf ports not included, against 1,014,390 last year. Reckoning half a bushel of corn for one bushel of wheat, the grain supply of other countries continues much larger than a year ago. Cotton has declined an eighth, and with good reason, for, although receipts from plantations fall off, the decrease is not greater than the decrease in consumption, owing to the stoppage of mills.

The demand for wool was diminished, though only a little, and sales are quite a third more than the full consumption of all mills if all were at work. But the speculative buying continues. Although some mills have gone into operation, the course of the market has not favored great activity, but it may be said that for goods of the higher grades there is a better demand than heretofore.

The boot and shoe industry can reckon a good many more shops at work, and shipments have been as large for the past four weeks as in any previous year. The market for materials has not changed to any important extent. While the demand for Bessemer pig has sustained the recent advance to $10.75 per ton at Pittsburgh and grey forge is still quoted at $9.40 there, and there is also less cutting of prices to get more business in finished products, the general range of prices still continues very low. Wire nails have been advanced by very heavy buying to $10.40 per keg, without change in cut nails, which are dull and there is less evidence of eastern mills selling rails below $30, except for export, some sales of that character having been made at $18.

Failures for the week have been 240 in the United States against 285 last year, and 59 in Canada against 68 last year.

ANOTHER FLOOD.

Five Inches of Rainfall in 18 Hours at Cincinnati—Ohio River Rising — Bad Railway Washouts—Houses Swept Away.

CINCINNATI, March 6.—There has never been a precedent in the history of the local weather bureau for the amount of the rainfall. Capt. Bassler and his full staff were busily engaged all day. Their books show that there has never before been a similar record. The weather bureau telephone was in almost continuous use, and the attaches were kept busily engaged answering inquiries. At noon Friday the rainfall since 6:30 p. m. Thursday amounted to five inches.

An unprecedented local flood is on. Houses are being swept away. A bad wreck is reported on the B. & O. at Hill's Station near Loveland.

The newspaper train on the B. & O. S. W. is wrecked at Cochran, Ind. Engine and tender plunge into the ditch. Millcreek on a rampage. Spring Grove avenue bridge in danger. The avenue flooded. Gardeners' truck patches and hot beds are being swept away.

Death and disaster follow in the wake of the mad rush of water. The losses will reach into the hundreds of thousands.

The river at 3 o'clock was 41 feet 1 inch and rising at the rate of 7 inches at hour.

The damage along the Big Four railroad is very heavy and all travel between Trautman's station and the city is completely cut off. At Trautman's there has been a land slide which has carried away the railroad tracks in some places and completely covered them at other points. Many of the houses are threatened.

Anderson's Ferry is completely inundated and the loss will be heavier than was caused by the recent high water. A number of houses are in danger of being washed away and the situation at this point is really appalling.

All the houses on the river front are threatened and the residents are fearful that a great calamity is about to overcome them.

Robbed His Employer.

ST. LOUIS, March 6.—Wm. C. Dockler, alias Howard, was arrested here Friday evening upon a request from Chief of Police Corner, of Cleveland, O. While employed by the Strang Surgical Instrument Co., of Cleveland, Dockler plundered his employers and fled to this city, where he sold the stolen goods. The prisoner will go back to Cleveland without requisition.

The Wabash River on a High.

VINCENNES, Ind., March 6.—The worst rain storm in many years visited this section Thursday. Four and one-half inches of rain fell between dusk and dark. The Wabash river rose six and one-half feet during the night. All trains are delayed.

Whole Train Ditched.

SPENCERVILLE, O., March 6.—The Chicago & Erie R. R. suffered an extensive freight wreck at Elgin Friday afternoon. Seventeen cars and the engine of east-bound through freight are in a ditch on account of the roadbed being washed away by floods.

MARTHA'S PATIENCE.

BY LUCY WHEELOCK.

"Martha! Martha! What does keep you so long?" called a querulous voice from the doorway of a little white cottage which stood at the end of the village street.

It was a hot July day, and Martha, who had stopped to rest in the shade of the willow trees, drew a little sigh of discomfort as she hastened to fill the big white pitcher at the spring.

"I wish I could stop just a minute to get cooled off," she said to herself, as she hastened across the sunny, dusty street.

"Well!" complained Aunt Patty, as she took the pitcher, "did you stop to dig a new spring? It took you long enough."

"I just waited a minute to cool off under the willows," said the girl, meekly. "It's so hot!"

"Hot! And you never thought of me, I suppose, ready to perish with thirst," said her aunt, peevishly. "It's always the way; no matter what becomes of an old woman like me."

"Oh, Aunt Patty," said Martha, in the same subdued voice; "I didn't think you would care."

"Oh, I dare say not," was the reply, "you don't stop to think about anything but dawdling; but you won't have much time for that now, if you expect to have your father's dinner by noon. It's 11 o'clock already. And don't forget to have a mess of those late peas," added Aunt Patty, as she hobbled off into the cool sitting-room, leaving Martha alone in the hot kitchen.

"Oh, dear," sighed the girl, wiping her flushed face, "whatever shall I do? She wants peas again, and how can I stop to pick them? There are the pies to finish and the potatoes to wash! I wonder where Tom is?" and she flew to the door and looked up the long, shady street, calling Tom's name at the top of her voice.

"Let me play I am Tom," said a pleasant voice in the next yard, and Mrs. Drew's summer boarder came to the fence.

"Is it peas you want? Oh, I see the basin! I'm a master-hand at peas."

"Oh, Mrs. Vance," said Martha, in confusion, "you mustn't, indeed. It's so hot in the garden!"

"Not in the shade of the plum tree," said the lady, "and I am longing for a chance to get into your nice garden again."

Before Martha could find words to remonstrate, she had taken the dish and was half way down the walk.

Martha hurried back to her pies and was putting the last one in the oven, when the kindly voice spoke again in the doorway: "Now bring me a dish, and I'll sit here on the step and shell the peas for you."

"What a busy little woman!" said Mrs. Vance, presently, as Martha went flying from kitchen to pantry. "Is it hard work sometimes?"

"Oh, I don't mind," was the answer, "when it isn't so dreadfully hot. Oh, there's Aunt Patty calling," and she ran to see what was wanted.

"Don't hold the door open and let all the heat in," cried Aunt Patty, fretfully. "I only wanted to charge you not to forget the nutmeg on the custard pies. They were just spoiled the last time."

"She means patience to have her perfect work in you," said Mrs. Vance as Martha closed the door. "I have always had a fancy for your patron saint, Martha, and I know how how much more difficult it is to be an active saint than a listening one, especially in warm weather."

"I always felt sorry for poor Martha," said the young girl, pausing in her work. "I suppose she would rather have been sitting down listening; but somebody had to get the supper."

"But the legends tell us that she did most glorious deeds for the Lord afterwards when she became a missionary, and she has been the patroness of good housekeepers ever since. You must come over and sit under the trees with me this afternoon when your work is done, and I will read you some of the tales Mrs. Jameson gives us of her holy life."

Thus Martha's acquaintance with the summer boarder began, and it grew to be the brightest thing in her poor barren life.

The pleasant conversation under the elm trees, the fresh papers and magazines opened a new world to this hungering soul.

There was not much that was inspiring in Martha Bradley's life. The death of her mother two years before, when Martha was only 14, had obliged her to leave school and take upon her shoulders all the care and work of the little household.

"Don't neglect Aunt Patty," was one of her mother's parting injunctions. "She has been like my own mother to me ever since I was a helpless child, and now that she is old and sick and feeble, I could not die easy to think that anybody could ever be unkind to her. Promise me to be patient and bear everything, Mattie."

Martha promised, and never had she broken her word, however trying and exacting Aunt Patty might be.

"I like to think of the robins that Tom caught last year," she said once to Mrs. Vance. "He shut two half-grown birds up in a cage, and one of them beat and beat itself against the wires, and in the morning it was dead on the bottom of the cage, and the other one never struggled a bit, but just hung its head and moped on the perch. Tom felt so sorry when he saw the dead one, that he opened the cage and let the mate go, and it flew straight up toward the sun and sang the gladdest song. I wonder if he knew the trees and the sunshine were waiting for it, even when it was in the cage. I think that is why it was so patient."

"And do you want to spread your wings, too, and fly into the sunshine?" asked Mrs. Vance. "Well, never forget the patient bird. Wait a little longer and your turn will come, too."

"But I don't know what to do," said the girl, sadly. "I thought that now I had so many books, I could read a little evenings; but Aunt Patty can't bear to see me reading. She thinks it is a waste of time. It's of no use for me to try to think of anything but mending and pillow-cases."

"But, my little friend," said good Mrs. Vance, "you can make mending and pillow-cases beautiful. You can have the most lovely thoughts all the time, while the sweet flowers of patience are growing up in your heart."

"Patience again," laughed Martha, adding, soberly, "it's what my mother told me, too. Well, if that's beautiful, I'll try to have one beautiful thing about me."

But Martha's great trial was yet to come.

Mrs. Vance had planned a grand excursion and picnic for one of the last days of her visit, and Martha had been dreaming for a week of this day in the woods, a whole, free day.

Her busy fingers were setting the last stitches in a new muslin dress for the occasion, and she gave a sigh of satisfaction as she held it out at arms' length to behold it.

"Vanity, vanity!" said Aunt Patty, crisply. "I hope you don't forget about the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit."

"No, Aunt Patty," said Martha, absently, her mind filled with happy thoughts of the next day's pleasures.

"I do believe," said Aunt Patty a few hours later, "that one of my bad spells is coming on. The heat has gone to my head. I guess you'd better make me a little composition tea and I'll go to bed."

The tea did not prove efficacious, and the fever grew worse toward night, and poor Martha was kept up all night to bathe the hot head and bring cooling drinks.

The vision of the cool woods grew dimmer and dimmer, but when the morning sunlight flooded the room, she ventured to say:

"Would you mind, Aunt Patty, if I got old Mrs. Brent to stay with you to-day? I do so want to go the picnic. It is Mrs. Vance's last day."

"You know Mrs. Brant drives me wild," was the answer; "but go, of course. I can stay alone and you can think of me lying here alone and dying maybe. But then you'll be well rid of me. I shan't trouble you much longer."

"Oh, don't talk so," said the girl, with tears in her eyes, as the last gleam of the vision faded away and left her with an aching head, tired feet, and a long, dreary day in the sickroom stretching out before her.

Another vision came to her. It was of a tired, faded face, which she remembered so well, transfigured in some way by a heavenly glory, and a voice which seemed like an angel's repeated: "Promise me to be patient and bear everything," and then she thought of the bird as it flew away from the cage, and it seemed to be singing, "Patience, patience."

"I am sorry you missed your merry-making to-day, Mattie," said Mr. Bradley, when he came home to dinner, "and I rather think you need to be out in the open air now and then. You've been looking a little pale lately."

"It's only the warm weather," replied Martha, "and it's nearly over now. It's almost the middle of September."

"Yes, yes," said Mr. Bradley, slowly, "so it is. You've been a good girl, Mattie, and I don't want you to wear out. I'll come home early to-night, and you must take a walk up the river to Cousin Barbara's and see if she can't come down here for a few weeks to spell you a little."

And so the afternoon was not so long after all, and Aunt Patty had a good nap, which gave Martha an opportunity for an undisturbed hour with her precious books.

"It hasn't been such a bad day after all," she said to Mrs. Vance, as she bade her good-night at the fence, "I had a real nice read and a walk, and I could almost see what you were doing, the sky was so clear."

"I believe I smell the flowers already," cried Mrs. Vance; "of patience, I mean," she explained, as Martha looked wonderingly at her.

A week later Mr. Bradley came into the kitchen with a letter in his hand.

"How would you like to go to the city to school this fall?" he asked.

"Oh, father," cried Martha, "how could I? What do you mean?"

"Why, here's a letter from Mrs. Vance," he replied, slowly, "asking me to send you to her for the year. She's taken a fancy to you, it seems, and wants to have you make her a long visit, and she promises to find a good school for you. There's something about giving a bird a chance to use its wings, which I can't make out, maybe you can."

Martha's face beamed with joy as she read the pleasant words, but a shadow came over it as she said:

"But, Aunt Patty, I can't leave her. Oh, dear, I should like to go!"

"Oh, Barbara and I will take good care of Aunt Patty, and she'll prize you all the more when you come back," replied her father, heartily.

"Do you suppose she will be willing to let me go?" asked the girl, eagerly.

"Don't worry about Aunt Patty," said a voice from the next room. "I don't want to stand between you and happiness, child, and when you gave up your picnic so pleasantly last week, I made up my mind it was about time for me to sacrifice something, too."

"It will be a cross for me to give you up, I don't deny; but I say 'go.'"

"Yes," said Mr. Bradley, "we can't allow our Martha to wear out with much serving and look pale and tired, and so we shall send her off next week."

And happy Martha went up to her room to read again the precious note to herself, which ended thus:

"The flowers are growing finely; but I think they need a little more sunshine. We will try to find it."—Churchman.

PRODIGAL'S RETURN.

The Ring of the Almighty's Forgiveness on Every Hand,

And Wine Glowing in Large Cups From Ten Thousand Sacraments—The Table Reaches Across Seas, and Its Guests Are the Redeemed of Earth—Dr. Talmage's Sermon.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was Luke xv., 23: Bring hither the fatted calf and kill it.

In all ages of the world it has been customary to celebrate joyful events by festivity. The signing of treaties, the proclamation of peace, the inauguration of presidents, the coronation of kings, the Christmas, the marriage. However much on other days of the year our table may have stinted supply, on Thanksgiving day there must be something bounteous. And all the comfortable homes of Christendom have at some celebrated joyful events had banquet and festivity. Something has happened on the old homestead greater than anything that has ever happened before. A favorite son, whom the world supposed would become a vagabond and outlaw forever, has got tired of sight-seeing and has returned to his father's house. The world said he never would come back. The old man always said his son would come back. He had been looking for him day after day and year after year. He knew he would come back. Now, having returned to his father's house, the father proclaims celebration. There is in the paddock a calf that has been kept up and fed to utmost capacity, so as to be ready for some occasion of joy that might come along. Ah! there never would be a grander day on the old homestead than this day. Let the butchers do their work, and the housekeepers bring in to the table the smoking meat. The musicians will take their places and the gay groups will move up and down the floor. All the friends and neighbors are gathered in, and an extra supply is sent out to the table of the servants. The father presides at the table and says grace, and thanks God that his long-absent boy is home again. Oh! how they missed him, how glad they are to have him back.

One brother stands pouting at the back door and says: "This is a great ado about nothing; this bad boy should have been chastised instead of greeted; veal is too good for him!" But the father says: "Nothing is too good, nothing is good enough." There sits the young man, glad at the hearty reception, but a shadow of sorrow flitted across his brow at the remembrance of the trouble he had seen. All ready now. Let the covers lift. Music. He was dead and he is alive again! He was lost and is found. By such bold imagery does the Bible set forth the merrymaking when a soni comes home to God.

First of all there is the new convert's joy. It is no tame thing to become a Christian. The most tremendous moment in a man's life is when he surrenders himself to God. The grandest time on the father's homestead is when the boy comes back. Among the great throng who in the parlors of our church professed Christ one night was a young man who next morning rang my doorbell and said: "Sir, I can not contain myself with the joy I feel; I came here this morning to express it I have found more joy in five minutes in serving God than in all the years of my prodigality, and I came to say so." You have seen perhaps a man running for his temporal liberty and the officers of the law after him, and you saw him escape, or afterward you hear the judge had pardoned him, and how great was the glee of that rescued man; but it is a very tame thing that compared with the running for one's everlasting life, the terrors of the law after him, and Christ coming in to pardon and bless and rescue save.

You remember John Bunyan in his great story tells how the pilgrim put his fingers to his ears and ran, crying: "Life, life, eternal life!" A poor car driver some time ago, after years having had to struggle to support his family, suddenly was informed that a large inheritance was his, and there was a joy amounting to bewilderment; but that is a small thing compared with the experience of one when he has put in his hands the title deed to the joys, the raptures, the splendors of Heaven, and he can truly say, "Its mansions are mine, its temples are mine, its songs are mine, its God is mine!" Oh, it is no tame thing to become a Christian. It is a merry-making. It is the killing of the fatted calf. It is a jubilee. You know the Bible never compares it to a funeral, but always compares it to something delightful. It is more apt to be compared to a banquet than anything else. It is compared in the Bible to water, bright, flashing water, to the morning, roseate, fireworked mountain-transfigured morning. I wish I could to-day take all the Bible expressions about pardon, and peace, and life, and comfort, and hope, and Heaven, and twist them into one garland and put it on the brow of the humblest child of God in this assemblage, and cry: "Wear it, wear it now, wear it forever; son of God, daughter of the Lord God Almighty." Oh, the joy of the new convert. Oh, the gladness of the Christian service. You have seen sometimes a man in a religious assembly get up and give his experience. Well, Paul gave his experience. He arose in the presence of two churches, the church on earth and the church in Heaven, and said: "Now this is my experience; sorrowful, yet always rejoicing; poor, yet making many rich; having nothing, yet possessing all things." If the people in this house knew the joys of the Christian religion they would all pass over into the kingdom of God the next moment. When Daniel Sandeman was dying of cholera, his attendant said, "Have you much pain?" "Oh," he replied, "since I found the Lord I have never found any pain except sin." Then they said to him, "Would you like to send a message to your friends?" "Yes, I would; tell them that only last night the love of Jesus came rushing into my soul like the surges of the sea, and I had to cry out, 'Stop, Lord, it is enough; stop, Lord, enough!'" Oh, the joys of this Christian religion. Just pass over from those tame joys in which you are indulging, joys of this world, into the raptures of the gospel. The world can not satisfy you, you have found that out. Alexander longing for world's to conquer, and yet drowned in his own bottle; Byron whipped by disquietudes around the world; Voltaire cursing his own soul while the streets of Paris were applauding him; Henry VIII. consuming with hatred against poor Thomas a-Becket—all illustrations of the fact that this world can not make a man happy. The very man who poisoned the pommel of the saddle on which Queen Elizabeth rode, shouted in the street "God save the Queen!" One moment the world applauds, and the next moment the world anathematizes. Oh, come over into this greater joy, this sublime solace, this magnificent beatitude. The night after the battle of Shiloh, and there were thousands of wounded on the field, and the ambulances had not come, one Christian soldier lying there a-dying under the starlight, began to sing!

There is a land of pure delight

And when he came to the next line there were scores of voices singing:

Where saints immortal reign.

The song was caught up all through the fields among the wounded until it was said there were at least 10,000 wounded men uniting their voices as they came to the verse:

There everlasting spring abides
And never-withering flowers:
'Tis but a narrow stream divides
This heavenly land from ours.

Oh, it is a great religion to live by, and a great religion to die by. There is only one heart throb between you and that religion. Just look into the face of your pardoning God and surrender yourself for time and for eternity, and He is yours, and Heaven is yours, and all is yours. Some of you, like the young man of the text, have gone far astray. I know not the history, but you know it, you know it. When a young man went forth into life, the legend says, his guardian angel went forth with him, and waving him into a field the guardian angel swept a circle clear around where the young man stood. It was a circle of virtue and honor, and he must not step beyond that circle. Armed foes came down, but were obliged to halt at the circle. They could not pass. But one day a temptress, with diamonded hand, stretched forth and crossed that circle with the hand, and the tempted soul took it, and by that one fell grip was brought beyond the circle and died. Some of you have stepped beyond that circle. Would you not like this day, by the grace of God, to step back? This, I say to you, is your hour of salvation. There was in the closing hours of Queen Anne what is called the clock scene. Flat down on the pillow in helpless sickness, she could not move her head or move her hand. She was waiting for the hour when the ministers of state should gather in angry contest, and worried and worn out by the coming hour, and in momentary absence of the nurse, in the power, the strange power which delirium sometimes gives one, she arose and stood in front of the clock, and stood there watching the clock when the nurse returned. The nurse said: "Do you see anything peculiar about that clock?" She made no answer, but soon died. There is a clock scene in every history. If some of you would rise from the bed of lethargy and come out from your delirium of sin and look on the clock of your destiny this moment, you would see and hear something you have not seen or heard before, and every tick of the minute, and every stroke of the hour, and every swing of the pendulum, would say, "Now, now, now, now!" Oh, come home to your Father's house. Come home, oh prodical, from the wilderness. Come home, come home!

But I notice that when the prodigal came there was the father's joy. He did not greet him with any formal "How do you do?" He did not come out and say, "You are unfit to enter; go and wash in the trough by the well and then you can come in;" we have had enough trouble with you." Ah, no! When the proprietor of that estate proclaimed festival, it was an outburst of a father's love and a father's joy. God is your father. I have not much sympathy with the description of God I sometimes hear, as though he was a Turkish sultan, hard and unsympathetic, and listening not to the cry of his subjects. A man told me he saw in one of the eastern lands a king riding along, and two men were in altercation, and one charged the other with having eaten his rice, and the king said: "Then slay the man, and by post-mortem examination find whether he has eaten the rice." And he was slain. Ah! the cruelty of a scene like that. Our God is not a sultan, not a despot, but a Father—kind, loving, forgiving, and he makes all heaven ring again when a prodigal comes back. "I have no pleasure," He says, "in the death of him that dieth." All may be saved. If a man does not get to Heaven, it is because he will not go there. No difference the color, no difference the history, no difference the antecedents, no difference the surroundings, no difference the sin. When the white horses of Christ's victory are brought out to celebrate the eternal triumph, you may ride one of them, and as God is greater than all, His joy is greater, and when a soul comes back, there is in his heart the surging of an infinite ocean of gladness; and to express that gladness it takes all the rivers of pleasure, all the thrones of pomp and all the ages of eternity. It is a joy deeper than all depth and higher than all height, and wider than all width, and vaster than all immensity. It overtops, it undergirds, it outweighs all the united splendor and joy of the universe, and who can tell what God's joy is? You remember reading the story of a king, who on some great day of festivity scattered silver and gold among the people, who sent valuable presents to his courtiers; but methinks, when a soul comes back, God is so glad that to express His joy He flings out new worlds into space, and kindles up new suns, and rolls among the white-robed anthems of the redeemed a greater hallelujah, while with a voice that reverberates among the mountains of frankincense and is echoed back from the everlasting gates He cries: "This, my son, was dead, and he is alive again!"

At the opening of the exposition in New Orleans I saw a Mexican flutist, and he played the solo, and then afterward the eight or ten bands of music, accompanied by the great organ came in; but the sound of that one flute as compared with all the orchestras was greater than all the combined joy of the universe when compared with the resounding heart of Almighty God. For ten years a father went three times a day to the depot. His son went off in aggravating circumstances, but the father said: "He will come back." The strain was too much and his mind parted, and three times a day the father went. In the early morning he watched the train, its arrival, the stepping out of the passengers, and then the departure of the train. At noon he was there again watching the advance of the train, watching the departure. At night he was there again, watching the coming, watching the goers, for 10 years. He was sure his son would come back. God has been watching and waiting for some of you, my brothers, 10 years, 20 years, 30 years, 40 years, perhaps 50 years, waiting, waiting, watching, watching, and if now the prodigal should come home, what a scene of gladness and festivity, and how the great Father's heart would rejoice at your coming home. You will come, some of you, will you not? You will, you will.

I notice also that when a prodigal comes home there is the joy of ministers of religion. Oh, it is a grand thing to preach this Gospel. I know there has been a great deal said about the trials and the hardships of the Christian ministry. I wish some body would write a good, rousing book about the joy of the Christian ministry. Since I entered the profession I have seen more of the goodness of God than I will be able to celebrate in all eternity. I know some boast about their equilibrium, and they do not break down with emotion, but I confess to you plainly that when I see a man coming to God and giving up his sin I feel in body, mind and soul a transport. When I see a man bound hand and foot in evil habits emancipated, I rejoice over it as though it were my own emancipation.

When in one communion service such throngs of young and old stood up and in the presence of Heaven and earth and hell attested their allegiance to Jesus Christ, I felt a joy something akin to that which the Apostle describes when he says: "Whether in the body I can not tell, or out of the body I can not tell: God knoweth." Oh, have not ministers a right to rejoice when a prodigal comes home? They blew the trumpet, and ought they not to be glad of the gathering of the host? They pointed to the full supply and ought they not to rejoice when thirsty souls plunge as the hart for the water brooks? They came forth saying: "All things are now ready"—ought they not to rejoice when the prodigal sits down at the banquet? Life insurance men will tell you that ministers of religion, as a class, live longer than any other. It is the statistics of all those who calculate upon human longevity that ministers of religion as a class, live longer than any other. Why is it? There is more draft upon the nervous system than in any other profession, and their toil is most exhausting. I have seen ministers kept on miserable stipends by parsimonious congregations who wondered at the dullness of the sermon when the men of God were perplexed almost to death by questions of livelihood and had not enough nutritious food to keep any fire in their temperament. No fuel, no fire. I have sometimes seen the inside of the life of many of the American clergymen, never accepting their hospitality because they can not afford it; but I have seen them struggle on with salaries of five or six hundred dollars a year—the average less than that—their struggle well depicted by the western missionary, who says in a letter: "Thank you for the last remittance; until it came we had not any meat in our house for one year, and all last winter, although it was a severe winter, our children wore their summer clothes." And these men of God I find in different parts of the land struggling against annoyance and exasperations innumerable; some of them week after week entertaining agents who have maps or lightning rods to sell, and submitting themselves to all styles of annoyance, and yet without complaint and cheerful of soul. How do you account for the fact that these life insurance men tell us that ministers, as a class, live longer than any other? It is because of the joy of their work; the joy of the harvest field, the joy of greeting prodigals home to their Father's house. Oh, we are in sympathy with all innocent hilarities. We can enjoy a hearty song and we can be merry with the merriest; but those of us who have toiled in the service are ready to testify that all these joys are tame compared with the satisfaction of seeing men enter the Kingdom of God. The great eras of every ministry are the outpourings of the Holy Ghost, and I thank God I have seen 16 of them, Thank God, thank God!

THOMAS MORRIS, addressing the Stratfordshire, Eng., iron and steel managers, mentioned having in his possession drawn wire worth $4.32 a pound, or more than $8,600 per ton. Hairspring wire is worth $400,000 per ton, and the barbed wire used by dentists in tooth nerve extraction, $2,150,000 per ton. The basic material of all is ordinary cheap ore.

A Woman Who Was Utterly Broken Down Restored to Health and Weight.

From the New Era, Greensburg, Ind.

A New Era reporter recently had the privilege of partaking of a bounteous noonday repast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kenady, near Hope, Ind., a few miles across the line in Bartholomew Co. At the table sat the eight year-old daughter of this happy couple, who had just returned from school. It was raining at the time and consequently her clothing was damp. She complained of achings and pains all over her body.

"Arthur," said Mrs. Kenady, "as soon as you finish your dinner I want you to go over to the drug store and get a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. The rheumatism is setting in on Lucy as sure as you're living, and I wish to stop it at once in its early stages, and save a long sickness and physicians' expense."

The mother got the child good and warm and had her remove her wet clothes, and then she related her peculiar experience with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She said:

"I had him get those pills for Lucy because I know they will cure her, for they cured me, as all my neighbors will tell you.

"After the birth of my youngest child here, about two years ago, I was completely broken down. I took medicine from the physician who had attended me through my confinement, but grew worse and worse until I could scarcely go about at all. I tried other doctors, with about the same result. Pains would shoot all through my body, and the least exertion or mere bending over would cause me to have smothering spells, and the suffering was terrible—almost unbearable. I thought it was caused by my heart, as often had fainting spells. When everything else had failed to relieve me and I had given up all hopes of recovery, I chanced to read some testimonials in the New Era and in Indianapolis News, and the suffering of the people who made the statements were so similiar to mine, that when I read that they had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I at once resolved to try the medicine. I procured a box and took the pills according to directions, and soon felt much better, and could go about with ease. When I had finished six boxes, never missing a dose after each meal, I was cured. I have taken them since, when I felt badly, and I now feel as well as ever.

"It is a pleasure now to do my work. When I began taking the medicine I weighed 109 pounds, now I tip the beam at 133. I can eat anything that comes along, and sleep like a log. Before I used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills I could scarcely eat anything or sleep at all. I had no appetite and what I ate wouldn't stay on my stomach. I feel that the medicine saved me from an untimely grave, and wouldn't care to be where I could not get it. I suffered the last of a box a few days ago for sick headache, and hasn't been troubled since. That is why we are without them."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

But also appeal to a means of relief of the torture—if physical—which produces the groan. Rheumatism is a prolific source of agony in its acute inflammatory or chronic forms. But it may be annihilated at its birth with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which, unlike the poisons in minute doses often prescribed for it, is perfectly safe. In malarial, kidney, bilious, dyspeptic or nervous ailments the Bitters is a certain source of relief.

HIS IS THE TIME of year .. .. when men .. and women .. become weakened by .. the weather, and run down generally. .. .. The first parts that the weather affects are the kidneys. The urea is not thrown off, but is forced back upon the lungs, and disease results—caused by weakness of the kidneys.

HERE IS ONLY ONE SURE WAY known to medical men for promptly checking troubles of the kidneys and restoring these great organs to health and strength, and that is by the use of Warner's Safe Cure

It has stood the test of time; it has saved thousands of lives; it has restored millions of sufferers to health; it has done what was never done, never attempted before; it has made men stronger and healthier; it has made .. women brighter and happier; .. it stands alone in all these qualities. Do you not think it would be wise for you to use it and thus avoid the dangers of the season? Insist upon having it.

Pill Clothes.

The good pill has a good coat. The pill coat serves two purposes; it protects the pill, enabling it to retain all its remedial value, and it disguises the taste for the palate. Some pill coats are too heavy; they will not dissolve in the stomach, and the pills they cover pass through the system as harmless as a bread pellet. Other coats are too light, and permit the speedy deterioration of the pill. After 30 years exposure, Ayer's Sugar Coated Pills have been found as effective as if just fresh from the laboratory. It's a good pill with a good coat. Ask your druggist for Stanford Interior Journal: J. W. Cochran gave us a sample of the coffee raised by Elder Jacob Newland, of Garrard. CROP AND STOCK.

Job Johnson, of Belfast, Ireland, has purchased from a Woodford county farmer a peculiarly marked —bay and white—horse for $5,000.

The Berlin correspondent of the Augusta Chronicle says: "On the farm of H. B. Moran, about 1 mile southeast of here, is a great number of cedar trees. In these trees robins rendezvous for the night in immense numbers. The trees are simply covered with them, and hundreds of them are killed each evening. Long before night they begin to swarm in droves of thousands, making a very loud noise. They have been roosting there for six or eight weeks, and the people have come from miles around to see them."

The Rose Hill correspondent of the Harrodsburg Sayings says: "The crows are killing Mr. Peter Foster's lambs. During the past week he has had several hands watching his sheep and many of the winged 'murderers' have been slain. Those who have noticed say the bird linger about on a tree until the lamb lies down and then flying lights on the lamb's back and pecks its eyes out. It is the first time we ever heard of crows killing sheep, but we understand that many have been killed this way lately."

A Nelson county man thinks he has found a coal mine. The Bardstown Record says: "Mr. Robert D. Thornbury informs the Record that coal has been discovered on the farm of Mr. Riley Cecil, in the Gethsemane neighborhood. The coal is said to be of excellent quality, strongly resembling the Pittsburg product, and was discovered by two of Mr. Cecil's sons, who were digging up slate to fill a washout. The probabilities are that there is a large vein of the mineral on the farm, and Mr. Cecil is to be congratulated on so valuable a discovery.

FROM CARROLL COUNTY.

[News]

Dr. W. S. Golden and J. B. McDonald, are candidates to represent Carroll and Gallatin counties in the next General Assembly.

Mrs. Lucy Smith is the Democratic nominee for county superintendent of public schools in this county.

After the waters subside it will be seen that damage to bridges and pikes will cost the county several thousand dollars.

It is to be regretted that so much money was spent on "floaters." It would be well for the candidates hereafter to form a combination and not let these human leeches "bleed" them. It is becoming so that a poor man has but small chance.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier]

Williamstown is jogging along with only three saloons, the smallest number the town has reaped its harvest from in a good long time.

Farmers have had no opportunity as yet to sow tobacco seed. Wet weather is putting them behind.

The saloon keepers in Grant county are all broke up and at "loggerheads" about paying their attorney fees in the local option contest, and the two branches of the W. C. T. U. of Williamstown won't drink clear water out of the same bowl.

Measles are running riot over Williamstown like fire over a stubble. There are at the present time more than 100 cases in town and the end is not yet.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 17, 1897. NO. 21.

CONGRESS is now in special session.

MR. HANNA has not wired Gov. Bradley lately.

MCKNIGHT, the Louisville bank wrecker, was indicted on ninety-one counts. A conviction on each count would consign him to the penitentiary for about two centuries.

ENGLAND is well pleased with Lyman J. Gage as Secretary of the Treasury. Gage is a gold monometallist, just such as England would select to preside over the American Treasury.

THE Louisville Post is using its best efforts to harmonize the Democrats in this State for the next election. It is encouraging to see the Post trying to undo the mischief it assisted to do last fall.

THE report that Japan had adopted the gold standard turns out to be untrue, and there is no probability that a measure of that nature would have any following in the lawmaking body of the government.

THE Pike county ministers have a hankering after a seat in the legislature, and four or five of them are now announced as candidates for representative. There is plenty of room for good men in the General Assembly.

GORMAN and Quay, who have not been visitors to the White House for many years, called on President McKinley last week. Gorman quarreled with Cleveland and Quay, with Harrison. They may call at pleasure now.

B. W. ADAMS is announced in this impression as a candidate for County Clerk. Mr. Adams is too well known in this county to need introduction, and as he has held the office but a short time the people are disposed to renominate and reelect him without opposition.

A HEAVY rain and wind storm stampeded the large crowd attending the Circuit Court at Owenton on Monday of last week. Even the jury that was trying a case became panic stricken and joined in the pell mell rush for the door; and it was some time before Judge Greene could restore order.

J. W. TATE, the defaulting State Treasurer, has not been heard from for eight years, and, upon the supposition that he is dead, the State will sue the companies in which his life was insured to recover the amount of his policies, the premiums on which his daughter and son-in-law have kept paid up.

THE fifth of June is the day upon which school trustees are elected, a fact that did not occur to the County Committee when it selected that as the day upon which to hold the primary election. A petition is now being circulated, to secure as many signers as possible, to ask the committee to reassemble and change the date of the primary again.

THE sugar trust is jubilant over the certainty of immense profits it will realize under the McKinley administration by means of the one and five-eigth cents duty which the new tariff law will impose on sugar. It estimates that its profits will be $4,000,000 annually. Any law that take from the masses and gives to a class can not redound to the welfare of the country. Why should the people be taxed to contribute millions annually, to an already immensely rich trust or any other trust.

GOV. BRADLEY called the legislature for a sixty days' session, and some question his authority to limit the session. The constitution limits a regular session to sixty days, but is silent as to the length of an extraordinary session. Of course there will be members who will gladly prolong the session beyond sixty days if they can, but the business element in the body will dispatch as rapidly as possible the business laid out for them by the Governor.

GOV. BRADLEY and Attorney General Taylor do not agree in their choice for United States Senator. Taylor is an enthusiastic supporter of Dr. Hunter, while the Governor would rather see the proprietor of hadese elected than Hunter. Dr. Hunter's candidacy may prove disastrous to the friendship of the State officials, but that is not annoying the Doctor, as he claims that each of them owes his political success to him, as it was attained through his successful management of the campaign that resulted in their election.

THE Louisville Commercial says the South has been getting the advantage of the North in the matter of protection, a proposition from which Congressman Wilson, of Louisville, dissents. He says the South has been neglected by the tariff laws of the past, and that he intends to see that in the tariff law now being framed, that southern industries are not discriminated against. Wilson and the Commercial are each Republican authority.

ON the fifteenth day of last September there was $82,000 cash on deposit in banks and on hand in this county, while in Grant county there was $54,000 cash on deposit in banks and on hand. These are exceedingly small amounts of cash with which to transact the business of these two counties; but the most startling feature of the matter is the great discrepancy between the amount of cash listed for taxation as shown by the assessors' books and the amount of individual deposits the cashiers of the several banks in the two counties swear they are carrying.

The official duties of a President are so great and so exacting that he must necessarily depend largely upon his appointees in the Department of Justice, both for the enforcement of the laws now upon the statute books and for suggestions as to additional legislation. If the appointees are thoroughly in earnest they will find immediate work to do and can soon determine whether the trusts are flourishing because of Executive clemency or because of legislative indifference. If, on the other hand, the President's subordinates are friendly to the combinations it will be difficult for him to carry out his promise, no matter how good his intentions may be. The sympathies of a public officer control his conduct, and it is to be hoped that the Executive will surround himself with men whose sympathies are with the people rather than with the trusts. The promise of the President should make even his political opponents withhold criticism until he has a chance to redeem the pledge given. —W. J. Bryan.

ON the last county court day before the primary election in Trimble county, the bleeders made life miserable for the candidates, and according to the News it was almost a "stand and deliver" game they played, and some of the candidates had to hide until the bleeders left the town. The "bleeder" element is not so formidable in Boone as it appears to be in Trimble county, and if the candidates will combine against the few here they will soon disappear. The voter who professes to be a candidate's friend and such profession is founded on a money consideration, is not to be relied on, for nine times out of ten he will make the same promise to any candidate from whom a few cents can be obtained. Under the present system of voting a candidate has no means of knowing that the goods for which he pays is delivered, and the voter who pretends to sell to him may have made the same deal with each of his opponents. The law against the traffic in votes is plain and severe and has never been enforced as it should be. A few prosecutions would do much good.

MR. GAGE, Secretary of the Treasury, is taking a firm stand as a civil service reformer, if he is correctly reported by the New York Evening Post. He says: "I am an uncompromising adherent to the principles of civil service reform, and during my incumbency in the Treasury Department I shall support the civil service law to the very best of my ability. The major number of applications for office which have been presented to me are for positions covered by the civil service law—which makes me devoutly thankful. It really seems extraordinary to me that men throughout the United States whose ability is such that they consider themselves fitted for the holding of responsible government positions seem to be entirely unaware that the operations of the civil service law, as recently broadened, make it absolutely impossible for them to be given the positions to which they aspire. I don't know of any American governmental doctrine that is less understood in general throughout the entire country than the civil service law, but I fancy there may be a general awakening on the subject during the next four years. In so far as the department which I am to assume is concerned, there certainly will be." It is dollars to doughnuts that he takes the back track in less than eighteen months.

WHEN all the duties of County Judge are considered it is recognized as the most important and responsible office in the county, although the salary and perquisites are not equal in amount to the sum several other county officials receive. The office has been elective since the third constitution went into effect. L. L. Youell was the first person elected Judge of the Boone County Court by the popular vote. He went into office in September 1851, and presided until 1854, when he was succeeded by Benjamin Watts, who died in February 1858, near the close of his term. The vacancy resulting from the death of Judge Watts, was filled by N. E. Hawes, who was elected by the Justices of the Peace. At the August election, 1858, Washington Watts was elected County Judge, occupying the bench the full term which expired on the first Monday in September, 1862. Washington Watts' successor was R. F. Coleman, who died during his term, the vacancy being filled by F. A. Boyd, who had but recently moved to Boone from Campbell county. In 1866 Washington Watts was again elected, serving a full term, N. E. Hawes succeeded Washington Watts, and held the office four years, and in 1874, he was succeeded by John S. Phelps, who was succeeded by Cyrus Riddell in 1878. He occupied the office until 1882, when L. H. Dills, who was succeeded by E. H. Baker in 1886, took the office. E. H. Baker held the office until August, 1894, when he resigned, his term of office having been extended to January 1, 1895, by the new constitution. Benjamin Stephens, who had been nominated by the Democrats for election in November, 1895, was elected by the Justices of the Peace to fill the vacancy, and on January 1, 1895, he entered upon the regular term to which he had been elected, it being for three years, the first term under the new constitution being for that length of time.

THE President has committed his administration to astrict observance of the civil service law, and if he does not weaken, he will, in a very short time incur the displeasure of the rank and file of the party a considerable per cent. of which is asking him to do for them what they have done for him. If he expects to shun the officeseekers by taking refuge behind the civil service, he may as well prepare his political epitaph; for he will become more unpopular with his party than Mr. Cleveland is with Democrats. Democrats hope President McKinley will maintain his present position on civil service.

LYMAN J. GAGE, Secretary of the Treasury, is "devoutly thankful" that the civil service prevents him from making appointments in his department. Mr. Gage is a mugwump, and is not particular about putting Republicans in office, consequently he is rejoiced to be able to avail himself of an excuse by which he can avoid the annoyance of officeseekers, and he wants them to know that they need not apply for the pie supposed to be at his disposition.

IT now seems that at least four of the candidates for nomination for county offices will have no opposition, and in their cases it would be well for the county committee to collect from them their prorata share of the expenses of holding the primary election and then declare them the nominees. There is no use of encumbering the ballots with the names of candidates who have no opposition.

THE Graves county candidates conduct their campaign on the war plan to some extent. They have organized a traveling commissary department, and eat and sleep as it suits them. This is a new departure in politics, and a feature that is not likely to become popular, as all many candidates ever expect to get out of an office is board for themselves and horses during their canvass.

THE Louisville Post that aided materially in the election of McKinley, says had his inaugural address been delivered before the election, W. J. Bryan would now be President. The Post has been disappointed in the new President.

WEST VIRGINIA'S treasury is in excellent condition. The State is out of debt, has $1,136,400 in the treasury and $300,000 due from Sheriffs, but how long this will be true of her can not be told.

THE gold bug Democrats want Gov. Mount, of Indiana, to divide the State pie with them.

HON. JOHN P. SALYER, Democratic State Senator, died last Sunday. It seems that the grim reaper is determined that the Democrats shall not elect a United States Senator in Kentucky.

Pension Commissioner Murphy is authority for the statement that the McKinley Inaugural ball cost the government $70,000 in salaries paid to idle employes of the Pension Bureau.

THE credentials of Mr. Wood, who was appointed United States Senator by Gov. Bradley, have been pigeonedholded at Washington. Mr. Wood is not likely to ever warm a seat in the Senate chamber.

IF the legislature will pass a law providing for the relief of the State treasury, and then adjourn sine die, the people of Kentucky will rise up and call the members blessed. Ten days is enough time in which to enact all the necessary laws.

THE manufacturers of woolen goods are buying up large stocks of material, by the manufactory of which they will realize immense profits on their investments. The tariff on wool as imposed by the new tariff bill will produce but a small amount of revenue for several years, if it ever accomplishes the great things claimed for it.

THE gum-shoe statesman, Godfrey Hunter, was nominated for United States Senator, by the Republican caucus at Frankfort, last Friday night, on the first ballot. The other candidates were not in the fight when noses were counted. Hunter's renomination is a bitter dose to Governor Bradley, and some claim the Governor will try to have him defeated, when the balloting begins next Tuesday.

ABOUT twenty Democrats, who ought to be snugly ensconced in Presidential postoffices, find themselves in a very unpleasant predicament just now. They were nominated and confirmed by the Senate, but, owing to delay in getting their bonds approved by the Post Office department, Mr. Cleveland did not sign their commissions. If Mr. McKinley chooses, he can sign these commissions, but it is entirely discretionary with him whether he will do so or nominate Republicans for the places.

THE widow of Dr. Ruiz, whose mysterious death or murder in a Cuban prison caused Consul General Lee to threaten to resign if the late Cleveland administration did not better support his demands upon the Spanish authorities in behalf of American citizens, arrived in Washington this week accompanied by her five children, to try to interest the new administration in her claim for indemnity. She says she has documentary evidence, which she is anxious to lay before Secretary Sherman, proving that Dr. Ruiz was killed in his cell by the prison guards upon the instigation of Weyler's men.

THE Republican Senators and Representatives would like Mr. McKinley's plan of making them choose the men who shall be appointed to offiec from their States much better if he had not allowed it to become generally known. They are willing enough that the men who get the offices should give them credit for securing them, but they do not like the idea of having to be held responsible by the unsuccessful applicants. It was a shrewd dodge on the part of McKinley and its announcement has already brought about a marked falling off in the number of office-seekers who seek to push their claims by personally calling at the White House.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Whole World is Engaged in a Terrific Strife

For and Against the Kingdom of Christ —No Doubt of the Victory of Jehovah's Forces Over the Great Army of Sin and Darkness.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was: Psalms xx., 5: "In the name of God we will set up our banners."

I hate war. In my boyhood we may have read the biography of Alexander or of some revolutionary hero until our young heart beat high and we wished we had been born a hundred years ago, just for the glory of striking down a Hessian. For rusty swords hung up on the rafters and bullets cut out of log houses in which they were lodged during the great strife we had unbounded admiration, or on some public day, clothed in our grandfather's soldiery accouterments, we felt as brave as Garabaldi or Miltiades. We are wiser now, for we make a vast distinction between the poetry and prose of war. The roll of drums and the call of bugles, and the clamping of steeds foaming and pawing for the battle; a hundred thousand muskets glittering among the dancing plumes: "God save the king" waving up from clarionets and trumpets and rung back from deep defiles or the arches of a prostrate city; distant capitals of kingdoms illuminated at the tidings; generals returning home under flaming arches and showering amaranths and the shouts of empires; that is poetry. Chilled and half-blanketed, lying on the wet earth; feet sore with the march and bleeding at the slightest touch; hunger pulling on every fiber of flesh or attempting to satisfy itself with a scanty and spoiled ration; thirst licking up the dew or drinking out of filthy and trampled pool s; thoughts of home and kindred far away while just on the eve of deadly strife, where death may leap on him from any one of a hundred bayonets; the closing in of two armies, now changed to a hundred thousand maniacs; the ground slippery with blood and shattered flesh; fallen ones writhing under the hoofs of unbridled chargers maddened with pain; the dreadfulness of night that comes down when the strife is over; the struggle of the wounded crawling out over the corpses; the long, feverish agony of the crowded barrack and hospital, from whose mattresses the fragments of men send up their groans, the only music of carnage and butchery; desolate homes from which fathers and husbands and brothers and sons went off, without giving any dying message or sending a kiss to the dear ones at home, tumbled into the soldiers' grave trench, and houses in which a few weeks before unbroken family circles rejoiced, now plunged in the great sorrows of widowhood and orphanage; that is prose.

But there is now on the earth a kingdom which has set itself up for conflicts without number. In its march it trampies no grain fields, it sacks no cities, it impoverishes no treasuries, it bereaves no families. The courage and victory of Solferino and Magenta without courage. The kingdom of Christ against the kingdom of Satan. That is the strife now raging. We will offer no armistices; we will make no treaty. Until all the revolting nations of the earth shall submit again to King Emanuel, "In the name of God we will set up our banners."

Every army has its ensigns. Long before the time when David wrote the text they were in use. The hosts of Israel displayed them. The tribe of Benjamin carried a flag with the inscription of a wolf. The tribe of Dan a representation of cherubim. Judah a lion wrought into the ground-work of white, purple, crimson and blue. Such flags from their folds shook fire into the hearts of such numbers as were in the field when Abijah fought against Jehoram, and there were 12,200,000 soldiers, and more than 500,000 were left dead on the field. These ensigns gave heroism to such numbers as were assembled when Asa fought against Zerah, and there were 1,580,000 troops in the battle. The Athenians carried an inscription of the owl, which was their emblem of wisdom. The flags of modern nations are familiar to you all, and many of them so inappropriate for the character of the nations they represent it would be impolite to enumerate them.

These ensigns are streamers borne on the point of a lance and on the top of wooden shafts. They are carried in front and rear of armies. They unroll from the main-top-gallant-masthead of an admiral's flagship to distinguish it among other ships of the same squadron. They are the objects of national pride. The loss of them on the field is ignominious.

The three banners of the Lord's hosts are the banner of proclamation, the banner of recruit and the banner of victory. When a nation feels its rights infringed or its honor insulted, when its citizens have in foreign climes been oppressed and no indemnity has been offered to the inhabitant of the republic or kingdom, a proclamation of war is uttered. On the top of batteries and arsenals and custom houses and revenue offices flags are immediately swung out. All who look upon them realize the fact that uncompromising war is declared. Thus it is that the Church of Jesus Christ, jealous for the honor of its Sovereign, and determined to get back those who have been carried off captive into the bondage of Satan, and intent upon the destruction of those mighty wrongs which have so long cursed the earth, and bent upon the extension of the Saviour's reign of mercy in the name of God sets up its banner of proclamation.

The church makes no assault upon the world. I do not believe that God made a better world than this. It is magnificent in its ruins. Let us stop talking so much against the world. Denounced it very good at the beginning. Though a wandering child of God, I see in it yet the Great Father's lineaments. Though tossed and driven by the storms of 6,000 years, she sails bravely yet, and as at her launching in the beginning, the morning stars sang together and all the sons of God shouted for joy, so at last, when coming into the calm harbor of God's mercy, she shall be greeted by the huzzas of glorified kingdoms. It is not the world against which we contend, but its transgressions. Whatever is obstinate in the will, degrading in passion, harmful in custom, false in friendship, hypocritical in profession—against all this Christ makes onset. From false profession He would tear the mask. From oppression He would snatch the rod. From pride He would rend off the plumes. From revenge He would exorcise the devil. While Christ loved the world so much He died to save it, He hates sin so well that to eradicate the last trace of its pollution He will utterly consume the continents and the oceans. At the gate of Eden the declaration of perpetual enmity was made against the serpent. The tumult round about Mount Sinai was only the roar and flash of God's artillery of wrath against sin. Sodom on fire was only one of God's flaming bulletins announcing hostility. Nineveh and Tyre and Jerusalem in awful ruin mark the track of Jehovah's advancement. They show that God was terribly in earnest when He announced himself a bhorent of all iniquity. They make us believe that though nations belligerent and revengeful may sign articles of peace and come to amicable adjustment, there shall be no cessation of hostilities between the forces of light and the forces of darkness until the kingdoms of this world become the kingdoms of our Lord. Affrighted by no opposition; discouraged by no temporary defeats shrinking from no exposure—every man to his position, while from the top of our schools and churches and seminaries and asylums, "In the name of God we will set up our banners."

Again, it was the custom in ancient times, for the purpose of gathering armies to lift an ensign on the top of some high hill, so all that saw it would feel impelled to rally around it. In more modern times the same plan has been employed for the gathering of an army. Thus it is that the Church of Christ lifts its flag for recruits. The Cross of Jesus is our standard, planted on the hill of Calvary. Other armies demand that persons desiring to enter the lists of war shall be between such and such an age, lest the folly of extreme youth or the infirmity of advantage. But none are too young for Christ's regiment; none can be too old. The hand that is strong enough to bound a ball or trundle a hoop is skilled enough to fight for Christ, while many a hand trembling with old age has grasped the arrow of truth, and with a dim eye close to it, taking aim, has sent its sharp point right through the heart of the King's enemies. Many of you have long ago had your names written on the roll of celestial troops, and you like the service well, although you now bear the scars of multitudinous conflicts and can recount many a long march, and tell of siege guns opened on you that you thought never would be spiked. But there may be some who have not yet enlisted. Your being here implies that you are seriously thinking about it, and your attention makes us hope you are only looking for the standard to be hoisted. Will you not, a hundred of you, with all the aroused enthusiasm of your nature, come bounding into the ranks, while "In the name of God we set up our banner?"

Through natural modesty do you hold back and say, "I will be of no advantage to Christ; I am too awkward to learn the step of the host or to be of any service in the shock of battle?" To you I make the reply. Try it. One hour under Christ's drill and you would so well understand his rules that the first step of your march heavenward would make the gates of hell tremble on their hinges. We may not be as polished and trim as many Christians we have known, and we may not as well understand sharpshooting, but there is rough work which we can all accomplish. We may be axmen, and hew a pathway through the forests. We may be spadesmen, and dig the trenches or throw up the fortifications. We do not care where, we do not care what, if we can only help in the cause of our King and shout as loudly as any of them at the completion of the conquest.

There are non-professors who have a very correct idea of what Christians ought to be. You have seen members of the church who were as proud as Ahab and lied as badly as Ananias, and who were as foul hypocrites as Judas. You abhor all that. You say followers of Christ ought to be honorable, humble and self-denying, and charitable, and patient, and forgiving. Amen! So they ought. Come into the kingdom of Christ, my hearer, and be just that glorious Christian that you have described. Every church has enough stingy men in it to arrest its charities, and enough prond men in it to grieve away the Holy Ghost, and enough lazy men in it to hang on behind till its wheels, like Pharaoh's chariots, drag heavily, and enough worldly men to exhaust the patience of the very elect, and enough nasty men to make appropriate the Bible warning, "Beware of dogs." If any of you men on the outside of the kingdom expect to make such Christians as that, we do not want you to come, for the church has already a million members too many of just that kind. We do not want our ranks crowded with serfs when we can have them filled with zouaves.

There are men now, as in Christ's time, possessed of seven devils. In some instances it seems as though at conversion only six of those evil spirits were cast out, while there remains still one in the heart, the devil of avarice, the devil of lust, or the devil of pride. Men of the world, if you would be transformed and elevated by the power of the Gospel, now is the time to come. It is no mean ensign I lift this hour. It is a time-honored flag. It has been in terrific battle. Draggled in the dust of a Saviour's humiliation from Bethlehem to Calvary. Rent by hell's onset, the spears of a maddened soldiery, and the hands of the men who said, "Let Him be crucified." With this ensign in His bleeding hand the Saviour scaled the heights of our sin. With this he mounted the walls of perdition and amid its very smoke, and flame, and blasphemy He waved His triumph, while demons howled with defeat, and heaven

Thronged his chariot wheels
And bore him to his throne;
Then swept their golden harps and sung,
The glorious work is done

Again, when a grand victory was won, it is customary to announce it by flags floating from public buildings and from trees and from the masts of ships. They are the signal for eulogy and rejoicing and festivity. So the ensign which the church hoists is a banner of victory. There was a time when the religion of Christ was not considered respectable. Men of learning and position frowned upon it. Governments anathematized its supporters. To be a Christian was to be an underling. But mark the difference. Religion has compelled the world's respect. Infidelity, in the tremendous effort it has made to crush it, has complimented its power. And there is not now a civilized nation but in its constitution, or laws, or proclamation, pays homage to the religion of the Cross. In the war of India, when Sir Archibald Campbell found in an hour of danger that the men be ordered to the field were intoxicated, and asked for the pious men whom the Christian Havelock had under his management, he said: "Call out Havelock's saints; they are never drunk, and Havelock is always ready." That Christianity which gathered its first trophies from the fishermen's huts on the shores of Galilee, now has Samsonian strength thrown upon its shoulders and has carried off the gates of science and worldly power. We point not to fortresses and standing armies and navies as the evidence of the church's progress. We point to the men whom Christ has redeemed by His blood. What if arsenals and navy yards do not belong to the church? We do not want them. The weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but spiritual, and mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds. The world and Christ have no idea of the strength and heroism which God will yet let out against the forces of darkness. As yet they have had only one round from the first regiment. The Lord of Hosts will soon appear in the field at the head of its troops. Depend upon it, that when God inspires the soul with a new life he puts in it the principle of "never give up." In all ages of the church there have been those who have had a faith that was almost equal to sight, looking through persecution and reverses with as much expectation as through palpable achievements.

There have been men for Christ who have acted as did the favorite troops of Brien, attacked by Fitzpatrick of Ossory. The wounded soldiers begged that they might enter the fight with the others. They said, "Let stakes be stuck in the ground and suffer each of us, tied to and supported by one of these stakes, to battle in the ranks by the side of a sound man." It is said that 700 or 800 men, pale and emaciated by former wounds, and thus supported by the stakes, struggled through the combat. Thus has it been that multitudes of the children of God, though feeling themselves weak and wounded, perhaps in body, perhaps in estate, perhaps in soul, supported by the staff of God's promise, have warred it up to the hilt in the subjugation of a world of wickedness.

We are mighty in this cause for we have the help of the pious dead. Messengers of salvation from high Heaven, they visit the field. They stand behind us to keep us from ignominious retreat. They go before us to encourage us in the strife. The McCheynes and the Paysons and the Martyns and the Brainerds, and uncounted multitude of the glorified, are our cod jutors. Have you heard the Swiss tradition? The herdsmen say that three great leaders of the helvetic nation, though seemingly dead, are only lying down under the ground in their old-time dress, refreshing themselves with sleep, and that at any time the liberties of their country are in danger, they will immediately spring to their feet and drive back the enemy. May I not have the thought that if ever the church of the blessed Christ shall be threatened with destruction by foes which seem too great for her strength, the Lord himself will not only come to the deliverance, but those great ancients who have seemed to be sleeping among the dead shall immediately hear the trumpet blast of the church militant, and full-armed, spring back to their positions in the ranks of God, with the battle cry, "More than conquerors through Him that loved us." Although we have already much to encourage us in the work of the world's evangelization, yet we must confess that much of our time has been consumed in planting our batteries and getting ready for the conflict. We have not yet begun to preach. We have not yet begun to pray. We have not yet begun to work. On the coasts of heathendom are missionary stations. They have scarcely yet begun to accomplish what they propose. It takes some time to dig the trenches and elevate the standard and direct the great guns. From what I hear they are about ready now. Let but the Great Captain wave the signal, and the ringing of celestial weaponry shall quake every dungeon of hell and sound up among the thrones of Heaven. Pagodas and temples shall tumble under the shock, and besotted nations flying from their idols and superstitions, shouting like the confounded worshipers of Baal, "The Lord, "He is the God! The Lord, He is the God!"

TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL

Nashville's White City Is Rapidly Nearing Completion.

Work Upon the Government Building Now Under Way—Some Amusement Features Which Are Already Secured.

[Special Nashville (Tenn.) Letter.]

The Tennessee Centennial Exposition, the White City that has sprung up in Nashville during the past few weeks, has now assumed an aspect that is beautiful beyond comparison. As winter relaxes its grasp and vernal beauties are apparent, the picture presented is like a glimpse of fairy land, a page from the orient, as though called into being by the magic wand of the genii. The stately buildings, incomparably grand and majestic, of purest white, seem to stand like silver caskets on a base of emerald, and the reflection of the spires and tapering minarets in the pretty lakes is a most entrancing vision. During the past week the colossal statue of Pallas Athenae was placed in position, and it stands, as it did in the Athens of old, immediately in front of the Parthenon, and with finger pointing to the skies, indicates the source of all that is great and good. This wonderful achievement must be classed as a Tennessee production, for the gifted little lady, Miss Aenid Yandell, whose chisel gave it life, is a daughter of the late Dr. Yandell, of Louisville, Ky., who was a Tennessean. The figure is over 40 feet in height, and is magnificently proportioned.

During the past week work has been commenced on the Government building and also upon the Educational building. A track has been laid and ballasted to the site of the Government building and train loads of material, etc., have already been unloaded. When completed it will be a most beautiful structure, of novel and ornate style of architecture and of especially graceful outline. The Negro building is now approaching completion. It is considered by many to be the most beautiful building on the grounds, and it is a revelation. That is to say, its contents will be, for the people who have been accustomed to read of "Another Southern Outrage" in northern and eastern papers, will scarcely believe such work possible by negroes in "the Sunny South."

The grand organ is another thing that will attract great attention, and it will be a most superb instrument. In size it will be one of the largest in the south, being 40 feet wide and 30 feet high, and having 53 stops and 1,847 pipes. The makers, Hook & Hastings, of Boston, built the enormous organs in the music halls in Cincinnati and Boston, and in this instrument will introduce many new features.

The committee on music and amusements has engaged the most noted bands on the continent, and in the amusement line all the up-to-date features will be presented. Among the bands engaged are Bellestadt and Beldenberg's, Gilmore's (now Victor Herbert's), the Counternos—father and son—with their talented organization, Innes' band and several more. Those who are conversant with events transpiring in the musical world will remember that Victor Herbert succeeded the lamented Gilmore as director of the famous Twenty-second regiment band. Innes' band was given the post of honor at the world's fair and at the Atlanta exposition, and is a most complete association of masters of instruments. The other bands are all composed of musicians of a high order of merit, and all the musical features will be of a high order of merit.

Vanity Fair is fast assuming stupendous proportions, and the novelties that will be found within its limits are endless in variety and bewildering in magnificence. The Midway Plaisance and Streets of Cairo were but stepping stones to the Tennessee Vanity Fair. In addition there will be a series of lectures and illustrated addresses in the Educational building, concerts and entertainments in the Auditorium, military pageants, bicycle tournaments, aquatic exhibitions, fireworks, horse and cattle shows, conventions and a long list of attractions that are really of the highest order of merit.

The Hardware Dealers' Magazine plainly sets forth the objects of the Tennessee Centennial in its edition of March 1, when it says: "The New York state commission of the Tennessee Centennial and Industrial exposition are sending circulars to intending exhibitors, and others, relative to the exposition. In the circular at hand the statement is made that the object of the exposition is to make the people of the United States better acquainted with the state of Tennessee; it is not being pushed as a money-making scheme for its promotors. Space is free to exhibitors and power is furnished without extra charge to those requiring it. Nearly all available spaces are taken, but there are a few remaining which are being reserved for especially attractive exhibits. The exposition will be held at Nashville, Tenn., opening May 1 and closing October 31, 1897. That it will surpass the Philadelphia centennial is an assured fact, and it will be very far ahead of Atlanta. When compared with the great world's fair at Chicago, it will be surpassed by it only in certain lines, and will be fully equal to it in all essential particulars."

KNEW TWENTY PRESIDENTS.

Henry Barnard Acquainted with All Except the First Three.

Henry Barnard, who has done more for common education in America perhaps than any other man, celebrated the eighty-sixth anniversary of his birth in Hartford, Conn., his native town, on January 24.

In spite of his four-score years and six Mr. Barnard does not think that he is yet old enough to stop working. He is to be found at his desk in his beautiful library any week day, revising some of the 800 pamphlets he has published on educational subjects. He says that after some 70 years of it work has come to be a habit with him. "It's apt to be so in this climate," he tells his friends.

The high efficiency of our public school system is largely due to the energy and perseverance of Mr. Barnard. He began working to improve it when he was a member of the state legislature from 1837 to 1840, when he suggested the passage of an act providing for the recording of school statistics and their publication by the comptroller. This was followed by other acts, among them one for the better supervision of common schools and one for the building of better schoolhouses.

In 1843 he visited the schools of every state in the union and spoke on education before 17 legislatures. He made the acquaintance of the leading teachers in 60 American cities and corresponded with them for years after.

From 1850 to 1842 he was secretary of the Connecticut state schools, and from 1857 to 1859 president of the University of Wisconsin. Then until 1867 he was busy writing on educational subjects, particularly in his Journal of Education, which he had established in 1855. He also issued in 1866 the American Library of Schools and Education and began to agitate for a national bureau of education.

James A. Garfield was among the first to indorse Mr. Barnard's work. He introduced a bill in congress, effected its passage and Mr. Barnard talked President Johnson into signing it. The president did more than that—he appointed Mr. Barnard commisioner of education.

Through the general interest which from the beginning of his career he excited in his work Mr. Barnard was brought into intimate relations with many public men. He knew personally every president of the United States except the first three. With most of them he was on terms of hearty friendship. —N. Y. Press.

Utilising the Wolf.

His faithful wife strove to comfort the starving humorist. "Take heart," she urged, "and write."

He gazed at the bare, cheerless walls and fireless hearth. "I cannot," he murmured; "even now the wolf is at the door!"

With the words a sudden inspiration darted into his face. Grasping an ax, he crawled through a cellar window, and fell upon the animal from behind.

That night the humorist, after the first steak dinner he had eaten for weeks, wrote 19 cold storage sketches and 88 wolf jokes.—N. Y. Press.

—England has one member of parliament to every 10,250 electors, Ireland one for every 7,177, Scotland one for every 8,974, and Wales one for every 9,613.

—In the great church at Mengo, Uganda, there are over 200 trees to support the roof. Each of these trees took 100 men to drag it up the hill.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—"Sam" Jones, the Georgia evangelist, gets $2,000 and his expenses for his month's revival work in Boston, according to the Transcript.

—It is said of Sidney Lanier that music was to him a necessity. He literally lived in a world of music. He was always hearing melodies, and when he improvised had only to play them.

—Rev. Dr. William Prall, rector of St. John's Episcopal church, Detroit, was married the other day to Miss Helen Lothrop, of Detroit. Dr. Prall was a rising politician of New Jersey a few years ago. He entered the Episcopal ministry, however, and for a time was rector of an Episcopal church in one of the Oranges.

—It is an interesting fact, brought out by the recent anniversary of the Scotch church, that Dr. Vermilye, so long senior pastor of the collegiate church, was at the age of 14 a student at Yale college, by the aid of funds provided by the Scotch church. Dr. Mason, pastor of the Scotch church, taught him Latin and Greek.

—The Boston Transcript says: "Rev. Dr. Isaac Lansing has decided to resign the pastorate of Park Street church, but the society must pay him $3,500 for so doing, in addition to $3,666 which he claims as his salary to March 31. Dr. Lansing does not look upon the amount of money as a bonus, for he declares that the action of the church committee has placed him in an unfavorable light before other societies, which is likely to affect his future prospects seriously."

—The Protestant Episcopal church, or at least a certain section of it, is considering the advisability of employing evangelists or "lay readers" more extensively. Even the conservative Church Standard has been arguing for their employment, suggesting that there is a field where the lay evangelist is specially needed and where the ordained minister cannot take his place. "Common sense," it says, "rebels against the notion, which is without warrant of Holy Scriptures, that the work of evangelization by preaching the Gospel with the living voice is a peculiar prerogative of any order in the church, however sacred."

HOW MARGERY DID IT.

She Had Promised to Be Richard's Wife and That Settled It.

When the girl went to London for a visit her brother recommended that she should pray for a good husband at the most celebrated shrines. While, however, she was supposed to be looking to Heaven and her family searching on earth for a man with just the right "livelihood," Margery's heart chose a husband for her, and her heart made the fatal mistake of choosing without any thought of the real merit conferred by real estate. The foolish girl engaged herself to Richard Calle, a bailiff in the service of her eldest brother. Her family were indignant at the idea of such a marriage. Practical John, the younger, wrote scornfully that if all the others gave their consent he would never give his that his sister should sell mustard and candles at Framlingham, which would probably be the elegant occupation of Dame Calle.

However, if the girl had really promised, the match could not be broken off. If she had given her word to Richard Calle she was bound to marry him. Everything depended on what she had said, and her lover besought her to repeat it boldly. Calle felt sure that when the girl's family knew she had promised they would not dare to interfere. "I suppose they will not damn their souls for us," he wrote, calling her his "true wife before God." The bishop consented to examine Margery to see if her words had really "made matrimony." The girl plucked up courage at the examination, and, after repeating what she had said to her lover, added that "if those words made it not sure," she would make it surer ere she went thence. That settled the matter; her mother could do nothing; Margery had promised, and she must be allowed to fulfill her words.—Lippincott's.

Naturally He Was Pained.

He was on his way downtown and had a seat near the middle of the car. Next to him was a space about large enough for the accommodation of a five-year-old child. He was a good-looking young fellow and neatly but not gaudily dressed. Presently the car stopped and a sweet young girl stepped aboard. Without looking up, the gentleman referred to hunched along an inch or two to make room for her, and she sat down. As she did so their glances met. Then a deathly pallor overspread his features. She, however, did not seem to be affected in the least. She merely permitted her gaze to wander to the signs above the windows on the opposite side of the car, and, while a faint suspicion of color might have been seen to creep into her cheeks, she appeared to be deeply interested in the virtues of somebody's beef extract and the wonderful nutritive powers of Nippleton's baby food. At last his lips parted, a pained expression swept across his features and he said: "Beg your pardon—will you let me get my coat from under you?" She partially arose, and as he gathered the skirts of his garment unto him he knew that his worst fear had been realized. She had sat on his lunch and squashed it.—Cleveland Leader.

Sudden Change of Subject.

Mr. Smallpurse (who has carefully figured up the cost of two theater tickets and the street car fare)—Do you enjoy the drama, Miss Gehall?

Miss Gehall—Oh, very much; but I become entirely worn out every time I go. You see, the play is seldom over before half-past ten, and then it takes fully an hour to get supper at 'Del's,' and after that comes the long ride home, and the hackmen do rattle you so, you know.

"Um—er—what do you think of Browning?"—Philadelphia Times.

M'KINLEY'S POLICY.

A Mistake That is Likely to Prove a Grave One.

Maj. McKinley enters upon the work of performing his contract to restore prosperity. It was understood during the campaign that the promise was to restore prosperity immediately after the election, but when that promise failed of redemption, the major's friends set forth that there had been a mistake about it; that it was unreasonable to expect important results until the newly-elected president was afforded the opportunity to put his policy into force. Accordingly the return of prosperity was postponed until after the inauguration, but we may now look for the opening of the mills, a thing very much more to be desired, as the major put it, than the opening of the mints.

Of course the new president must be given a little time to take his bearings and to get his working force in order. The restoration of prosperity is much more easy in promise than in performance, and it is not fair to be too exacting. Every reasonable person is willing to give the major a chance. Eliminate the partisan view and it will be seen that he is a very worthy gentleman, and that he cuts a pleasing figure in the public gaze. He means well beyond a doubt, and he will be as glad as anybody can be to see better times, leaving aside all consideration of the credit that must accrue to his administration through restoration of prosperity. It is a fact, however, that he seems to be on the point of making a mistake as to the means to be employed to bring about business and industrial improvement. The need for currency reform was admitted during the campaign to be a pressing need, but currency reform appears to be no part of the policy of the new administration, which is laboring under the impression that the safety and well-being of the country depend alone on tariff tinkering. It is widely believed that this is a mistake that is likely to prove a grave one, and it is to be noted that even the logical beneficiaries of the protective policy are protesting against it. It looks, therefore, as if the new administration had chosen the wrong course at the start, and as if the people were to be sacrificed for the sake of the favored few. One thing is clear, at any rate—the money power is serenity itself.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

A PLEDGE AGAINST TRUSTS.

President McKinley's Opposition to Oppressive Combines.

Although an inaugural address means no more than the subsequent conduct of the speaker shows it to mean, something is gained by President McKinley's expression of unqualified opposition to oppressive combines for the regulation of prices or of transportation rates.

This pledge of the president to do all in his power to smash the trusts was not given in the heat of a campaign, when the temptation to catch votes is well-nigh irresistible. It was given in the deliberation of careful preparation for an office intrusted to him by the people. If it means nothing, it stands for a deliberate and wanton intention to deceive.

It is presumed that the president knew the full purport of such a pledge and that it placed upon him the obligation to spare no legitimate exercise of his power and influence in the shaping and execution of laws to protect the people from the oppression of the monopolistic combines. This obligation embraces the approval of all proper legislation to destroy the oppressive combines, to disapprove all legislation tending to favor of in any way to encourage them and to select officials who will enforce anti-trust legislation.

Many of the trusts now in existence received their initial opportunity in the McKinley tariff law. Some are still profiting by tariff legislation. If President McKinley is true to his pledge he will refuse to approve any tariff law which gives profitable opportunity to a trust or in any way favors a trust. Unless the republicans in congress are willing to reflect discredit on the republican administration they will shape legislation in accordance with the promise of the president.

Democrats in congress in the president's anti-trust utterance have a strong weapon with which to combat monopolistic legislation in behalf of the Hanna syndicate. Every tariff tax on an article controlled by a combine may be condemned out of the mouth of Mr. McKinley.—St. Louis Republic.

Deluded Gold Bugs.

The democratic papers which supported McKinley last fall are steadily hugging to their breasts the delusion that they see prosperity on the threshold, and in spite of the fact that they have been fooling themselves this way for months, they are still at it, with undiminished confidence, apparently, in the substantiality of the phantom that fixes their gaze. Of course, the restoration of prosperity as the effect of popular determination to stick to "sound money" is about all the excuse those papers had for going over to the support of the republican candidates, and in view of their eagerness to see this excuse materialize, it is not surprising that they sometimes fancy they are about to grasp it. One would suppose, however, that after a daily disappointment for months they would begin to understand that the thing isn't there.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——Mr. Hanna has got what he wanted, but he paid a tremendous price for it. He has given up his birthright for a mess of pottage. He has surrendered the position of kingmaker for a senatorship, in which it is impossible for him to shine. He has stepped down from the seat of the supreme bossship to the level of the common, wrangling, greedy politician. His political greatness has been exchanged for a membership in the millionaires' club. His apparent triumph is defeat; he has played into the hands of his enemies. Boss Hanna has vanished and a fat man in a senatorial toga appears.—St. Louis Republic.

WHAT MR. BRYAN THINKS.

The Democratic Leader Analyzes McKinley's Inaugural Speech.

In a special communication to the St. Louis Republic regarding President McKinley's inaugural speech William J. Bryan says:

"I have read with much interest those portions of President McKinley's inaugural address which treat of the money question and the trusts. His declaration against trusts and other combinations of capital is encouraging to those who believe that it is the duty of the government to protect the weaker members of society from those who are peculiarly powerful. His words justify us in expecting an aggressive policy, for he promises to recommend new legislation, if new legislation is necessary, as well as to enforce the laws already in existence.

"The official duties of a president are so great and exacting that he must necessarily depend largely upon his appointees in the department of justice, both for the enforcement of the laws now upon the statute books and for suggestions as to additional legislation.

"If the appointees are thoroughly in earnest, they will find immediate work to do and can soon determine whether the trusts are flourishing because of executive clemency or because of legislative indifference. If, on the other hand, the president's subordinates are friendly to the combination, it will be difficult for him to carry out his promise, no matter how good his intentions may be.

"The sympathies of a public officer control his conduct, and it is to be hoped that the executive will surround himself with men whose sympathies are with the people rather than with the trusts. The promise of the president should make even his political opponents withhold criticism until he has a chance to redeem the pledge given.

"I was especially pleased to note the emphasis which he placed upon the demand for equal rights. It is not equality of possessions but equality of rights that the people demand; equality before the law, or, to quote the democratic maxim, 'equal rights to all and special privileges to none.'

"The president recognizes that prevailing conditions are unsatisfactory. He refers to the fact that willing laborers are idle, and that loss is entailed upon useful enterprises.

"He admits that the country is suffering from industrial disturbances and needs speedy relief. By fully making this admission with the financial question, he seems to suggest that the money question is a paramount issue.

"His promise to endeavor constantly to secure international bimetallism is a rebuke to those who think that the gold standard should be maintained because of its own merits. The system which is so bad as to justify an earnest attempt to get rid of it cannot be defended, but his declaration that, bad as it is, it must be endured until help comes from abroad will be discouraging to those who have ceased to expect international cooperation can be secured through persuasion.

"It is humiliating to think that after more than a century of national existence we must depend upon the right of petition instead of relying upon the right to legislate. If any part of our industrial depression is due to the gold standard, then it is certain that to that extent the depression will continue, unless the other great commercial powers of the world join us in restoring bimetallism.

"It is to be regretted that the executive did not define his position more clearly upon the question of paper money. If he had openly advised the retirement of the greenbacks the people could be considering the question, but instead of doing that directly he obscures his purpose by using the phraseology commonly employed in bankers' conventions.

"His reference to 'arrangements,' which are 'temporary in their nature,' and his anxiety to relieve the government from 'the necessity of maintaining so large a gold reserve,' are familiar to those who have watched the effort which the national bankers have made to secure the right to issue all the paper currency of the country. The commission is a favorite scheme of the financiers, but a commission cannot settle so important a question as that now before the people.

"If a commission is appointed, each member will have a fixed opinion before he enters upon the work, and each senator and member of congress will vote his own opinion without regard to the report of the commission.

"Shall we have bank paper or government paper? That is the question suggested, but not directly asked.

"The question must be settled by the people through their elected representatives and commissions will have but little effect.

"WILLIAM J. BRYAN."

TRICK FOR TRICK.

This Woman Had a Great Head for Scheming.

A small boy had thrown a stone through the basement window, and the landlady sent the maid of all work around the corner to a glazier's. There was only one corner of the big sheet of glass broken, but it would have been unsafe to leave it.

"It will be two dollars," the glazier said, looking the job over, and after a little wrangling over the price the landlady told him to go ahead.

When he was gone for the glass the landlady said to the girl:

"You see, I can get a glass for that picture in the dining-room out of this, and will be just that much ahead."

There was a good deal of "cluttering up" about the work, but it was done, finally, the glazier was paid, and went. Ten minutes later the landlady went out to look at the piece of glass that was left, but it was gone.

"He took it with him," the girl said.

"Well, go right over there and bring it back," she said, tartly. "You knew I wanted the glass."

The girl was gone five minutes, and she returned without it.

"He won't give it up. He says according to the rules of the shop that it belongs to him."

"The rules of the shop, indeed! I'll show him," and she put on her bonnet with a little toss which looked bad for the glazier.

But he stood his ground, unexpectedly. There was the glass on the counter, but he stood close over it, protesting:

"It vhas der rules of der shop."

"Well, you'll see, when my husband comes home," she said at last, backing out of the door, but the glazier only smiled.

Sure enough, the husband was bent on having the glass.

"Come over and point it out to me, and I'll fix 'im," he said, doggedly.

The glazier saw them coming, but he was defiant.

"See here," began the husband, "you've stolen a piece of window glass out of my house—"

"No, no; it vhas der rules of der—"

"Hang the rules! Where is the glass?" turning to his wife. She pointed to it lying under a work bench. The husband reached for it and started out of the shop.

In an instant the proprietor was on the sidewalk, dancing on one leg, waving his arms and shouting:

"Police! Police!"

Rather than face the trouble the man laid the glass down and the two left the shop, walking briskly till they turned a corner.

"But just wait!" muttered the little woman.

Two days later there was a ring at the bell which the landlady answered. A boy in a tradesman's blouse was hesitating in the door.

"Mr. Glazingstein wants the hammer he left here the other day."

"O, no," chuckled the landlady, "it's the rules of the shop that I never give hammers back when they are left here."

The boy looked abashed.

"I'll tell you," said the landlady; "you go back and say that when he returns my glass we'll talk about the hammer."

The boy went and in a few minutes he came back with the glass.

"That's more like it," said the landlady, taking the pane from him; "now go back and tell that old skinflint that I haven't seen his old hammer!"

And she hadn't, for a little later she saw the boy come out of a house on the opposite side of the street carrying the missing article.

But the glass is now in a picture frame on her dining-room wall.—Chicago Tribune.

THE FAMILY DINNER.

Too Often Disturbed by Unpleasant Talk.

Why is it that in most households the dinner table becomes a dumping ground for the wholesale plaints of its members? Probably because this is the only meal of the day when the entire family meet together, each one feels it a duty to air a few personal grievances in order to seek consolation from the others.

One of deference to digestion, if for no other reason, dinner table conversation should be of the spiciest, but this fact is lost sight of in the general desire of everybody, from papa down to the youngsters, to serve up only those topics which have marred rather than made the day's happiness.

Hardly has the man of the house finished his carving duties before he falls into an animated financial discussion with his wife. Household expenses are rehashed; bills grumbled over, and the cost of living recalculated with tedious regularity.

Mother, in her turn, eagerly pours into any listening ear her domestic woes. The day's errors below stairs are minutely recorded. She sighs over Bridget's butter waste, declares that the butcher's indifference to her order is becoming intolerable, and so on.

Then the small boy (poor little target for family flaw-picking) comes in for his share of criticism. His failures at school are relentlessly raked up and all sorts of punishments threatened unless there is speedy reform.

If there are guests present this talk of the inner circle is for courtesy's sake given a less personal flavor, but only then. "Good cheer and plenty of it," is not the motto of the average family dinner.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

English Bread Crust for Fowls.

Put a cupful of bread crumbs into half a pint of milk, add a clove of garlic or a small onion not whole, a blade of mace, a lump of butter about the size of a pecan nut, pepper and salt. Let the mixture boil until it thickens to the consistency of drawn butter. The onion and mace are removed when it is put into the sauce tureen. It is much daintier and more wholesome than gravy. Cold boiled ham is always served with roast fowl in England, and those who have so eaten it approve highly of the combination. — N. Y. Times.

A COUNTERFEITER CAUGHT.

The Police of Syracuse Make an Important Capture.

On Monday the 15th Harold Marquisee, of Utica, N. Y., was arrested in Syracuse, N. Y., on a warrant sworn out by the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., charging him with forgery. On the 15th of December Marquisee visited a photo-engraver in Syracuse, saying he was the representative of the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., and arranged for the making of a full set of plates for the direction sheets, labels, etc., of the famous Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. News of this reached the home office, and no time was lost in arranging for his arrest when he should return for the plates. He returned on the 15th, and was accordingly arrested and is now in jail in Syracuse awaiting examination, which occurs on March 2d.

This arrest proves to be an important one. In addition to various plunder, such as medical books, typewriters, rugs, etc., found in Marquisee's trunk when arrested, the police also found counterfeit coin both in the trunk and on his person; and in a search of his apartments in Utica found a complete outfit for counterfeiting consisting of crucibles, bellows, nickel, lead, bismuth, antimony, a small blacksmith forge, a charcoal furnace, and several plaster-of-paris molds. The United States marshals want him just as soon as Dr. Williams' Medicine Co. are through with him, and, no doubt, he will be sentenced for a long period.

In selecting Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for his counterfeiting operations, he showed his knowledge of the proprietary medicine business; for these pills are in such great demand that they are easily sold at any drug store in the United States. His scheme was to work the country druggists and sell his imitations at a discount of from 2 per cent. to 5 per cent., explaining the reduced price by the fact that he had picked them up in small lots and at a discount from jobbers who were overstocked. By working fast and making long jumps, he would have secured many hundreds of dollars in a short time. The proprietors of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are most fortunate to have caught the rogue before he had fairly started, and to have thus kept these spurious goods out of the market.

AN UNEXPECTED HORROR.

Why the Strong Young Englishman Was Laid Low.

The well-known Englishman walked down the landing stage from the steamer on to the dock with a firm and steady step, says the New York World.

He was in the very flush of health. He was in the pink of condition. He had always been eager to visit America. They had told him at home—his traveled friends—how interesting everything was ovah here, don't you know. So he had come.

He had not been in the least seasick, for he was far too healthy. Onlookers said, as soon as they saw him, what a sample of splendid physical manhood he was. So he was.

He was taken to a hotel.

The next morning he was a wreck.

A frightful change had taken place in him. Oh, it was terrible.

Could this shaking paretic be the same fine-looking man of but yesterday?

Yes, it was too true.

He had just been through the American newspapers and had seen the eight different pictures of himself therein.

It had been too, too much!

Every home ought to be made so much like Heaven that the children will not think of Heaven as being far away.—Ram's Horn.

Feeble nerves—severe weather—neuralgia. Soothing cure—St. Jacobs Oil.

The trouble with most of us is that we neglect to do to-morrow what we have put off to-day.—Truth.

Warner's Safe Cure

"It has stood the test of time."

Ironing is hard enough.

Save your strength for that. Make the rest of the washing easy with Pearline. Soak; boil; rinse—that is all there is to it. The clothes are cleaner and whiter than in the old way; colored goods are brighter; flannels are softer and won't shrink.

Use your Pearline just as directed on every package, and you'll get the best results. Don't use more—that only wastes it; don't use less—that only increases your work. Use it alone; no soap with it; nothing but Pearline. 551

"When I Saw your advertisement

I thought that it was probably like the announcements of many other makers of harvesting machinery—big blow and little show; but I'm ready to surrender; go ahead, gentlemen, you're all right; I bought one of your binders last season and it is equal to any claim you ever made for it."

This is the condensed essence of what Mr. Thomas Carney, of Washington Court House, Ohio, has to say about the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator Harvester and Binder. The claims made for McCormick Machines are strong claims. That's because

McCORMICK

Machines are so constructed that strong claims for them are justified. The machine you want will cost you more than the other kind, for the simple reason that it is worth more; that's all — there's no other reason — and in the end you'll be glad you paid the difference, because there's nothing cheaper than the best.

Born—To James Burns and wife on the 4th inst., a boy. Mr. Burns will move on Mrs. J. L. Terrill's place in a few days.

Col. Appleton, who has been sick for some time improves, but slowly. Albert Nixon, who was dangerously sick with Peritonitis has so far recovered as to be able to go around.

But two candidates have so far visited this, the Democratic stronghold of the Petersburg precinct—Watts for Assessor and Adams for Jailer, each canvassed this neighborhood some time ago.

The rain on the 4th and 5th inst., was the heaviest that was ever known to fall here in the same length of time. An immense amount of damage was done, particularly to bridges, culverts, &c. Five or six bad slips occurred on Holman's Hill opposite here, which disfigures its looks considerably.

Dixon, of Limaburg, spent last Sunday with his father, Henry Dixon.—Charles Scott, of Kenton county, is visiting friends here.—J. C. James Rogers' land on the Ohio was damaged two or three hundred dollars, by the recent floods.

T. L. Utz occupied the Baptist pulpit on Sunday last, morning and evening. He reports his father improving.

Mr. Henry Holder will depart in to the realms of bachelorhood, taking unto himself a home but not a wife, and will, in the future, be "at home" at the formerly known Byland farm east of town. It has been reported in several neighborhoods that we are members of the Undertakers' Union. We are not now nor have we ever been. Our prices have always been the lowest for several reasons, viz.: It is only one of several branches of business; that we have no rents to pay; we pay no agents; we keep no extra men or teams; that we keep the largest stock and haul from the factory in large loads when we have nothing else to do; that we pay cash and get all discounts; that from the cheapest to the most expensive we are enabled to give and do give the very lowest prices. Jeff Eddins arose about four o'clock, last Saturday morning, and chanced to discover a light in his meat-house. He at once prepared himself to capture a burglar, and, arming himself with an ugly club, he approached the door to the meat-house very quietly, and when near enough he gave it a violent pull, at the same time assuming a death dealing attitude with his club; but, to his surprise, no bold, bad burglar attempted to dart by him. Just at this time it occurred to Mrs. Eddins that she left the lantern burning in the meat-house the night before, when she went for meat for supper. The excitement of the occasion did not prostrate Jeff, but he has not enjoyed as good an appetite since, and says it is terribly severe on a fellow to nerve himself up for a desperate struggle with a thief, and then to have his plans flustrated so suddenly.

He Will Not Be a Candidate.

To O. J. Rouse, J. B. Goodridge, Geo. Hafer, R. J. Akin, Henry Wolford and others:

Gentlemen:—In answer to the numerous petitions addressed to me requesting that I become a candidate for the nomination for County Attorney, I desire first to express my profound gratitude to you for the confidence you have manifested in me by the cordial and flattering calls, and I confess that I have been strongly tempted to enter the campaign in obedience to the urgent request of my friends, made through the RECORDER, and personally, to me. But after careful consideration of the subject in all of its phases, and after having consulted with friends whose judgment has confirmed my own, I have concluded to decline the call, which was no more expected by me than was it complimentary beyond my merits. True, since my brief residence among you, I have done what I could to promote the success of those principles so dear to the heart of the true Kentuckian, and so necessary to the welfare of the country, but for this labor, I expected to be sufficiently rewarded by living under a government, honestly and economically administered by true Democracy. On the other hand, after a careful observation of the manner in which the Hon. J. M Lassing, the present incumbent of the office of County Attorney, has discharged his duty, I am driven to conclude that the affairs of the county will be guarded faithfully and intelligently, if he be permitted to succeed himself. Were he careless or negligent in the discharge of his official duties, I assure you I would gladly stand and contest with him for the nomination. But, gentlemen, I believe his course has been such as to warrant the Democrats of Boone, to commend his past party and official service by an indorsement for reelection. And now, in conclusion, I desire most sincerely to thank those friends who have complimented me far beyond my deserts by the recently published calls; and with equal sincerity do I thank a much larger number of friends newly acquired though they be, whose generous friendship for me has been so frequently demonstrated, heretofor, in a business way, that there now exists no necessity for me to enter a contest for office.

Very Respct'y, D. E. CASTLEMAN.
Burlington, Ky., March 17, 1897.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Some of our citizens are of the opinion that the late Washington Watts, Judge of the County Court, died on the day his term of office expired; but such is not the case. Washington Watts and N. E. Hawes were coutesting candidates for County Judge in 1870. Mr. Hawes, being successful, went into office on the first Monday in September, 1870, that being the regular county court day. He held the court from the opening to the close of the term that day. Judge Watts was in town, apparently in fine health.

On the first Monday in October Mr. Hawes held the regular term of the court, Judge Watts, being in town that day, apparently as well as usual. It was about 11 o'clock a. m., when he was stricken with apoplexy and fell on the street, from where he was carried to the old County Clerk's office, now the Boone County Deposit Bank, and laid upon a table where he died in a few minutes, never speaking after receiving the stroke.

On the same day a meeting of the Boone County bar and citizens of the county was held to give expression of their appreciation of Judge Watts, his character and services. A committee to prepare resolutions, consisting of Joseph C. Hughes, M. Hamilton, J. A. Wilson, J. W. Calvert and other citizens of the county, was appointed, and suitable and appropriate resolutions were reported and adopted, and will be readily found on the record of the October term, 1870, of County Court. These facts, as to date, are as remembered by the writer, and are corroborated by the court record.

Judge Washington Watts presided in his court with much dignity and more than average legal ability and learning. He was very fond of legal discussions, and was always intensely interested in the legal arguments made by attorneys in his court, and heard, patiently, what the lawyers had to say on questions in dispute, and if not clearly convinced, he would gather up the law and decisions relied on by opposing counsel, and take them home and investigate for himself. He had a well balanced mind and steady nerve, which enabled him to go deeper into intricate legal problems, and rendered a sounder judgment thereon than the average County Judge. His salary was $400 per annum except, possibly, for one or two years when it was $500. Even then as now the County Judge was the poorest paid officer in the county.

At a meeting of the Boone county, Ky., Stockholders in the Southern Building & Loan Association of Knoxville, Tenn., held at Burlington, Ky., March 1st, 1897, it was deemed very important that Boone county stockholders be represented at a general stockholders meeting at Knoxville, Tenn., March 4, called to try to devise some practical plan for reorganization of the Association, or voluntary settlement of its affairs without the intervention of the courts. T. J. Hughes and M. J. Corbin were appointed to represent Boone county at the Knoxville meeting.

REPORT.

We, the delegates, appointed at Burlington to represent the stockholders in Boone county at the general meeting of stockholders of the Southern Building and Loan Association to be held March 4th at Knoxville, Tenn., arriving at that place March 3d a. m. There were about 250 delegates present and about 50,000 shares of stock represented. There was much interest manifested and every point was hotly contested by those opposed to reorganization. However, plans were finally formulated for reorganization which should prove entirely satisfactory and practical. A committee was appointed to investigate the affairs of the company, and after two days of almost incessant work, and after thoroughly investigating the books and accounts of the Association, brought in a report showing that the Southern Buildlu & Loan Association was solvent and that its assets were over $300,000 more than its liabilities. There was also a committee appointed composed of one man from each of seventeen States, whose duty it was to consider plans for reorganization or liquidation. Said committee after being in session for 24 hours, brought in a report favoring reorganization, as the concern was discussed pro and con for several hours, after which a stock vote was taken, resulting in its adoption by something over a three-fourth majority vote. On the following Monday an effort was made to get the Association out of the hands of the court, but Judge Clark not being satisfied as to the solvency of the concern, appointed J. W. Caldwell, of Knoxville, as a Special Master to take testimony and investigate thoroughly as to its solvency and practicability of reorganization, and report to him not later than March 19th.

A full report of the proceedings of the meeting were ordered printed in the minutes and sent to each stockholder.

Respectfully submitted,
T. J. HUGHES.

A Magnificent Road.

It is a revelation to most people to know that such railway equipment exists south of the Ohio river as that of the Queen and Crescent Route. The block system; electric equipments such as track signals, electric headlights and crossing gongs; together with a perfectly lined rock-ballasted roadbed, all provide for the swift and safe movement of passenger trains of the most luxurious pattern. The Vestibule Limited leaves Chattanooga over the Queen and Crescent Route daily, on schedules which each year are made a little shorter, through scenery which is unsurpassed. A German commission has presented a report acknowledging the superiority of American railroads over the continental system.

Uncollected bills have their uses. A bullet was fired at a Chicago man, but his life was saved by a bunch of laundry bills which he had in his coat pocket.

The historic name of William Henry Harrison had been selected for the Harrison baby, but for very excellent reasons the parents decided to call her Elizabeth.

The city editor of the New York Herald has purchased the house of Lillian Russell for $50,000. This puts city editors into a new class. No city editor was ever before able to buy a $50,000 house.

A book has been written on the subliminal self, which is defined as "the self that is out of sight." He must enjoy himself far better than the self that has to hustle after material things and pay all the bills.

The man who opposes good roads in this day and generation is as short-sighted as his ancestor who entered a loud braying protest against the railroad because the cow would be sure to get on the track.

New York's court of appeals has decided that an actual proposal is necessary as a condition precedent to a suit for breach of promise of marriage. The nervous man who loses his voice on such occasions will have to brace up.

Seventeen daily and weekly papers are published in the English language in Japan, and over 100 on the Asiatic continent. In the whole of Asia there is but one paper printed in German. The language of the future is now well outlined.

A North Dakota farmer claims that strips of newspapers soaked in sour milk and fed to hens greatly increase their laying qualities. This explains the flavor of some of the spring chickens. They have not been fed on the right kind of exchanges.

Explorer Nansen told the Londoners that it rests with England to throw light on the almost unvisited wastes of the Antarctic pole. If the doctor can wait until Africa is absorbed he need have no fear that the real estate of Antarctica will suffer for a claimant.

It is estimated that 4,000,000 bunches of bananas were devoured in 1896 by the people of the United States. The fact of such enormous consumption indicates that our countrymen are possessed of wonderfully vigorous digestion, or else entertain a profound contempt for the pains of stomachache.

The Boers claim from England about 700,000 pounds sterling for material damage and 1,000,000 pounds for moral and intellectual damage. Uncle Paul Kreuger must have injured his toe in kicking John Bull out of Boerdom, and there should be some redress for forced contact with visitors who outboor the Boers.

Dr. Grenier, the member of the French parliament who is a convert to Islam, advocates polygamy as a means of checking the decline in the population of France. The doctor's scheme will hardly find favor with the exceedingly thrifty Gauls, a large proportion of whom consider even one wife a too expensive feature of domestic economy.

The marine sanitarium is the latest idea in England for getting the better of the various ailments that beset mankind. An order has been placed for the construction of a large steamship, which will be a floating palace of convenience, comfort and healthfulness, the idea being to carry only invalids and make a cruise of nine months in each year. In the days to come being sick will be a luxury and a pleasure.

At the congress of mothers at Washington Mrs. Ballington Booth said something about the place where the mother would be most at home. She said that should a woman engage in different meetings it was no excuse whatever for her to neglect her children. "A woman who neglects her babe for the public will find in the future the great mistake she has made, and that her work has been to no purpose." It does seem as if the nearer a mother came to her child the more she could do for it.

The New York Sun is raising the question: "Should old bachelors marry?" Certainly they should, and the sooner the better. The best thing in this world to any man of soul is a good wife. A man can scarcely be said to begin to live until he has loved and married. Life in old age is full of dreariness in some upper room of a boarding house. It is no use in saying "marriage is a lottery." There are millions of good women in the land waiting to make homes of comfort and peace and happiness for the millions of bachelors who are hesitating.

One of the loveliest society events in the history of Fiji was the recent wedding of Hokepolambo Tutifruti, governor of Rewa Tui Sawa, to Miss Adi Viukaba, granddaughter of the late King Thakombau. The bride was wrapped in an exquisitely woven mat, and she wore in addition a pink silk pinafore, the gift of the groom, who was dressed in the conventional native costume with an agate nose ring of great value. After the ceremony the guests sat down to a sumptuous wedding feast of 600 cooked pigs, 300 turtles and bananas and yams until they couldn't eat.

FITZ BALKS.

He Emphatically Objects to the Rules of Referee Siler.

The Matter of Rules Was Laid Before Dan Stuart—He Will Meet Fitzsimmons' and Corbett's Managers and Siler and Talk the Matter Over.

CARSON, March 12.—Bob Fitzsimmons has balked on Referee Siler's interpretation of the Queensberry rules. His specific objections are not stated, but he emphatically declares that he will not stand for any such conception of the rules as that outlined by the referee. Corbett, on the contrary, is perfectly satisfied with Siler's decision.

"The referee should have the final say in all contests," was the way Jim put it Thursday afternoon. "When two men are sparring they invariably forget their promise not to hit in the breakaways and one or the other usually gets the worst of it. Sullivan nearly reached my jaw with a right swing as we parted from the first clinch in our battle at New Orleans. It never occurred to me at the time that he had committed a foul and I smashed right back at him in the next breakaway regardless of my promise to the referee. When I fought Jackson we both agreed to hit after a clinch and I never heard an objection from anybody. If Fitz is such a marvel at delivering short range blows he should be thankful for a ruling which might give him an advantage. According to my notion, Siler's ultimatum should be accepted by both of us, and there is no necessity for further talk on the subject. However, if Fitz can show any flaws in the ruling which he thinks might hurt his chances of winning, I will gladly meet him half-way on a reasonable compromise."

The whole matter of rules was laid before Dan Stuart Thursday afternoon, and he invited Martin Julian, representing Fitz, and W. A. Brady, Corbett's manager, to meet George Siler and himself in his office Friday and talk it over.

When Corbett was asked Thursday why he refused to take Fitz's extended hand when the two met on the prison road Wednesday, he bristled up and said: "For this reason: That man has blackguarded me in public and through the press time and again. He has called me a cur, a dub, an invalid and a bluffer. When he proves a portion of his statements, at least, by putting me out on March 17 I will shake with him. Not till then. What is the use of appearing friendly to a man when you are not?"

The Cornishman did not seem to heed the snub he had received. All that caught him was Corbett's display of ill-temper.

"I always thought he was "nutty" declared Bob. "The first punch I give him St. Patrick's day will joggle his brain and he will go to pieces. Didn't he lose his head when Mitchell hit him and ain't I as clever as Mitchell? This is a good thing. I am glad I didn't turn back Wednesday when they told me I was likely to run into the pompadour."

Tickets sold like hot tamales Thursday and at 6 o'clock in the evening the total sales amounted to a trifle under $7,000. A few boxes were thrown together at the arena and a force of painters were put to work numbering the seats.

JUDGE LYNN

Creates a Sensation in the Arbitration Treaty Ratification Meeting—He Bitterly Scores the British Nation.

NEW YORK, March 13.—The citizens' mass meeting, called for the purpose of indorsing the ratification of the arbitration treaty between this country and Great Britain, at Cooper Union Thursday night, through the speech of Civil Justice Waubope Lynn, was turned from a meeting of peace into one of turmoil. For a time it appeared as if the police would have to interfere to restore order. Although the excitement was great, the meeting concluded without any serious disturbance. The trouble started when Judge Lynn captured the meeting by offering an amendment denouncing the resolutions favoring arbitration. President Seth Low refused to put Judge Lynn's amendment to the meeting, and on a vote being taken on the resolutions, although declared carried, they were really voted down.

During Judge Lynn's remarks he bitterly scored the English nation. England, he said, never keeps a pledge; they allow butcheries in Armenia and put down the Greeks. His remarks were loudly cheered.

Sherman's Private Secretary.

WASHINGTON, March 12.—Secretary Sherman Thursday appointed Wm. B. Gaitre, of Marietta, O., as his confidential clerk, at a salary of $1,200 per year. Mr. Gaitre was assistant secretary to Gov. McKinley for several years. Mr. J. Walter Blandford, of the District of Columbia, has been appointed private secretary to Attorney General McKenna, a position he formerly held when Mr. Olney was at the head of that department.

Thanks the United States Senate.

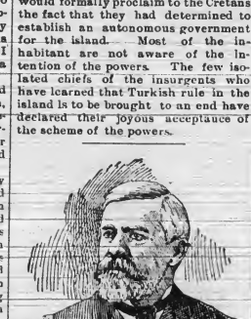
ATHENS, March 12.—M. Skouzes, minister of foreign affairs, has sent a message to Washington thanking the senate for the resolution of sympathy for Greece adopted a few days ago by that body. The publication of the senate's resolution here caused much satisfaction.

George Jackson Threatened.

CHICAGO, March 12.—A special to the Dispatch from Springfield, O., says: George Jackson (colored), cabman, who claims to have driven Pearl Bryan to her death, and whose story was made as strong evidence against Jackson and Walling, is quaking in his boots as the result of a letter he has received signed "Buckeye Regulators." It tells Jackson his coffin is ready and that unless he tells the truth before Jackson and Walling are hanged, the regulators will visit him. Jackson is in jail here awaiting trial for perjury for which he was indicted by the grand jury.

BLOODSHED

At Everek, a Mountain Village in Kaisiereh—Athens Swarming With Enthusiastic Rustic Reserves.



LONDON, March 13.—The correspondent of the Standard at Canea, telegraphs a description given by an eye witness of the evacuation of Kandanos by the Moslems, who have now reached Canea. He says that swarms of wild looking insurgents swooped like kites on the outgoing refugees and seized and hauled off oxen by their horns and tails. They fought desperately with each other to gain possession of the chairs and tables. The insurgents wanted to loot the place and were ready to risk their lives for a sheep or a mule.

CANEA, March 13.—The destitute Mussulman refugees are on the verge of starvation here. Bands of robbers are pillaging the towns and the adjoining country.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 13.—The porte and the foreign diplomats have received news of bloodshed at Everek, a mountain village in Kaisierch. The situation in those regions is most lamentable and rumors are current in this city that a massacre is impending there.

LONDON, March 13.—The Times Saturday publishes a dispatch from Athens saying that the city is swarming with enthusiastic rustic reserves. Two thousand of them were sent to the frontier Friday.

LONDON, March 13.—The Daily News will Saturday publish a dispatch from Canea saying that it would be of the greatest advantage if the powers would formally proclaim to the Cretans the fact that they had determined to establish an autonomous government for the island. Most of the inhabitant are not aware of the intention of the powers. The few isolated chiefs of the insurgents who have learned that Turkish rule in the island is to be brought to an end have declared their joyous acceptance of the scheme of the powers.

ATTEMPTS MADE

To Rescue the Bodies in the Railway Wreck Near Hazelton, Ind.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., March 13.—The rise in the Wabash river continues and the water is within 18 inches of the rails on the Louisville & Nashville bridge between Wabash and Hawthorne, Ill. Farm houses, trees, driftwood and carcasses are lodged against the piers, but the officials say this pressure will not endanger the structure. The service will be abandoned if the water reaches the rails. All trains are delayed. Black river is rising and backwater near Grayville, Ill., causes considerable delay of Peoria, Decatur & Evansville trains, but it is not thought that traffic will be snspended. White river is falling rapidly, but the work of repairing the Evansville & Terre Haute roadbed near Hazelton, Ind., where the Chicago & Nashville limited was wrecked Wednesday, will not begin for some days. The crevasse is now about 250 feet wide and the roar of the water can be plainly heard at Hazelton, a mile distant. Attempts were made to rescue the bodies of Fireman Joseph Boleman, Passenger Herbert Allen, Conductor George A. Sears and the unknown passenger but a report from Hazelton at 8:30 p.m. was that they were not successful. It is believed that the unknown victim was W. H. Lange, traveling salesman for W. B. Phillips, a shirt manufacturer at Fort Wayne, Ind.

Evansville & Terre Haute trains, except a local to Hazelton, are sent via the Evansville & Indianapolis to Washington, Ind., thence to Vincennes via the Big Four and via the Evansville & Terre Haute to Terre Haute.

Arthur Mayhew Electrocuted.

SING SING, N. Y., March 13.—Arthur Mayhew, a Negro, was electrocuted in the prison here at 11:17 Friday morning. Mayhew suffered the death penalty for the alleged brutal murder of Stephen Powell, a prominent and wealthy resident of Hempstead, L. I., March 17, 1896. Powell was waylaid, robbed and murdered. Mayhew died proclaiming his innocence. He made resistance when he reached the chair and had to be forced into it by the keepers, where he struggled until strapped in.

He Took Paris Green.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Samuel Elliott C. Newton, 24 years old, said to be the son of a well-known business man and millionaire of London, committed suicide in the Warwick hotel Friday morning by taking paris green. Newton is said to have gained the displeasure of his father because of his infatuation for and marriage to an actress and was disowned as a consequence.

Water Three Feet in a Church.

VINCENNES, Ind., March 13.—The Wabash is 19.3 feet above low-water mark and is on a standstill at this point. The levee on both sides remains intact and it is thought will stand the pressure. White river is flooding the county. Men row from Vincennes to Lawrenceville in boats. Nearly all the bridges in Lawrence county, Illinois, and Knox county, Indiana, are gone. There is great loss of live stock and grain. It was still raining Friday and another rise is feared. Prospects in the flooded districts are very gloomy. Water stands three feet deep in the St. Thomas Catholic church.

HIGHEST YET

Recorded by the Weather Bureau of the Father of Waters.

At President's Island Nearly All the Live Stock Was Destroyed—At Hen and Chicken Island the Loss of Live Stock Was Equally as Great.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 13.—The Mississippi river was Sunday night higher than recorded by the weather bureau since its establishment here 25 years ago. The rise Sunday was about six inches. Numerous small dikes or private levees around towns and plantations have given way under the pressure from the tremendous volume of water, but no reports of any breaks in government levees have been received. Armed men patrol them the entire distance, however, preparing to give warning by the use of their guns in case of a break. The steamer Bluff City was warned by several shots from these guards a few miles below the city Sunday, because she approached too near the embankments. It was feared the wash from her would go over the top of the levee and softening it, make the way easy for a crevasse. The river at this place is nearly three miles wide, extending inland on the Arkansas side about two miles. There was no loss of life or live stock in the low-lying Arkansas district opposite, owing to the fact that the overflow is of yearly occurrence. The inhabitants, accustomed to moving out at this season every spring, had their effects in shape and when the water began to rise came across the river to the city, where they will remain until the flood subsides. On the islands in the river below here, however, the people were not so fortunate. The rise was so sudden and the height attained so far above all previous overflows that the residents were totally unprepared.

At President's island nearly all the live stock was destroyed, but the inhabitants managed to reach the shore in safety. At Hen and Chickens island the loss of live stock is equally great, and the few people engaged in farming there were taken to Memphis by a passing boat. Two boats were sent to the islands Saturday to gather up the live stock which had escaped the flood and returned to this city Saturday night. The big Neeley plantation, eight miles below this city, is a vast expanse of water, and the cabins occupied by the Negroes are washed away. The St. Francis basin is one great lake, and all previous floods witnessed by the residents of this section have been outdone.

The railroads are feeling the effects of the big overflow and Sunday night the Iron Mountain road was the only one which could come into the city with any degree of safety to its trains. The Little Rock & Memphis managed to get its morning train in, but no attempts were made to send out their trains Sunday. The Kansas City, Fort Scott & Memphis, which has not been touched by the high water for several years was compelled Saturday night to use the Iron Mountain tracks. It turned its trains over to that road at Nettleton, Ark., and in that way reached Memphis. It suffered a serious washout near Gilmore, and Supt. Sullivan sent a large force of men over Sunday morning to repair the damage. The approaches to the big bridge across the Mississippi owned by this road are nearly a mile in length. Ever since the bridge was opened six years ago the trestle has been framed up by filling, but owing to the enormity of the work it has not yet been completed. The water is Sunday night within a few inches of the top of this filled work and some fear is expressed that it will wash it away where the pressure is greatest. The Iron Mountain tracks are still a few inches above water, but if the rise continues it, too, will be compelled to abandon traffic. The Yazoo division of the Illinois Central is also menaced by high water and in some places in upper Mississippi, the water is rapidly nearing the tracks.

Mr. Richardson Withdraws.

WASHINGTON, March 13.—Mr. Richardson, of Tennessee, announced his withdrawal as a candidate for the speakership at the democratic caucus Saturday afternoon. This narrows the contest for minority honors to his colleagues, Mr. McMillan, of Tennessee, and Mr. Bailey, of Texas. It is understood Mr. Richardson will be appointed permanent chairman of the democratic caucus.

Two Killed on the Crossing.

COLUMBUS, O., March 15.—A carriage containing Mrs. O. W. Wells, aged 50, and her niece, Miss Laura Andrews, aged 18, was struck by a Toledo & Ohio Central railway passenger train at a crossing near Marysville Saturday. Both were instantly killed. The carriage was completely wrecked and the horse killed.

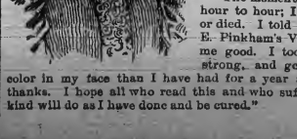
Woman's Nerves.

Mrs. Platt Talks About Hysteria.



When a nerve or a set of nerves supplying any organ in the body with its due nutriment grows weak, that organ languishes.

When the nerves become exhausted and die, so to speak, the organ falls into decay. What is to be done? The answer is, do not allow the weakness to progress; stop the deterioating process at once!

Do you experience fits of depression, alternating with restlessness? Are your spirits easily affected, so that one moment you laugh and the next fall into convulsive weeping?

Again, do you feel something like a ball rising in your throat and threatening to choke you, all the senses perverted, morbidly sensitive to light and sound, pain in ovary, and pain especially between the shoulders, sometimes loss of voice and nervous dyspepsia? If so, you are hysterical, your uterine nerves are at fault. You must do something to restore their tone.

Nothing is better for the purpose than Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; it will work a cure. If you do not understand your symptoms, write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., and she will give you honest, expert advice, free of charge.

Mrs. Levi F. Platt, Womleysburg, Pa., had a terrible experience with the illness we have just described. Here is her own description of her sufferings:

"I thought I could not be so benefited by anything and keep it to myself. I had hysteria (caused by womb trouble) in its worst form. I was awfully nervous, low-spirited and melancholy, and everything imaginable.

"The moment I was alone I would cry from hour to hour; I did not care whether I lived or died. I told my husband I believed Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound would do me good. I took it and am now well and strong, and getting stouter. I have more color in my face than I have had for a year and a half. Please accept my thanks. I hope all who read this and who suffer from nervousness of this kind will do as I have done and be cured."

BRADLEY'S MESSAGE.

The Governor Recommends Many Reforms to the Extra Session.

Mob Violence—Plans to Increase Revenue —Delinquent Taxes—Criminal Prosecutions—Salaries and Elections—State Apportionment—Relief for Litigants—House of Reform.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 15.—The governor's message to the legislature follows:

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives: When the present administration came into power it was confronted with a large floating debt and an insufficient revenue to pay current expenses.

Your attention was called to this and relief requested at the last session. You were asked to enact laws to abolish unnecessary offices, reduce salaries, curtail expenses, provide necessary revenue, prevent mob violence, but each of these recommendations passed unheeded, the result of which is that the financial credit of the state has suffered seriously, expenses have increased and mob rule has prevailed to an extent never heretofore known in this commonwealth.

MOB VIOLENCE.

Since your adjournment a number of citizens of the state have been atrociously murdered by cowardly mobs. In some instances, although guarantees of protection have been given, they proved a cre ropes of sand, and although courts were in session, and in one instance in the defendant on trial, the sanctity of the law was ruthlessly invaded, the agency outraged and murder committed under pretense of purifying society and punishing crime. No apology or excuse can be made for such conduct. Those who congregate and conspire to take human life are legally grontor criminals than those whose lives they seek or take, for no crime is so base and repulsive as that committed under cloak of pretended violation of law. Such action does not deter criminals or prevent crime. Its effects are direful upon the community and bring the administration of justice into contempt.

The condemned criminal suffers fearful and indescribable punishment and torture as he confronts certain approaching death and hours the silent passage of the hours that brinz him nearer to eternity. Society is impressed with his harmless position, and thus a legal condemnation and the execution follows, inspire horror in the mind of the doomed man and fear in that of the would-be murderer. The action of a mob, on the other hand, begets a spirit of lawlessness and disregard for human rights, and is the work of only a few moments, leaving in its wake an indelible stain on the locality where it occurs, dealing out punishment of the severest of which, compared to that inflicted by the law, is actual relief.

Not only has human life been inwissly taken, but rights of property have been disregarded, and midnight raiders in the counties of Franklin, Woodford, Lewis, Madison, Anderson, Fleming, Lincoln, Hopkins, Washington and probably others, have with impunity intimidated citizens, closed and destroyed tobiganes and houses and openly defied the law.

The civil authorities have failed, up to this time, so far as I know, to convict and have almost universally failed to arrest, any of the murderers and raiders who have enjoy disgraced the commonwealth. This is a sad commentary on our civilization.

RECOMMENDATIONS.

At your last session you were earnestly asked, in my first official communication, to take steps to pr-vent and punish mob violence. Therenfic, another message was sent to you, recommending the enactment of a law making the counties in which such outrages were committed responsible in damages to the legal or personal representative of the victims, and giving change of venue to other counties, in order that a fair trial might be had. The same measures are now recommended, together with such provisions as will make counties liable in case of personal injury where death does not ensue.

It is further recommeaded that in cases where prisoners in confinement may be armed, without thereby enabling them to escape, the officer having them in custody shall have the right to arm them in order that they may resist such attacks. No mob would be able to stand before the prisoner fighting for his life and the jiller or sheriff fighting for his office.

STATE INDEBTEDNESS

The manner in which claims against the state have been hawked about and discounted, their holders fleeced and shaved, is discreditable. Following is given a statement of the present condition of affairs, and you are most earnestly requested to consider such measures as will liquidate the floating debt and promptly pay current expenses, so that the credit of the state and those to whom the state may become indebted, will not suffer in the future.

PLANS TO INCREASE REVENUE.

It is suggested that the passage of a well-regulated law increasing the license fees of wholesale and retail liquor dealers and bankers and distillers would produce considerable revenue. The same may be said of increased license fees on pool and billiard tables and other similar devices, and of special taxes for the sale of tobacco, cigars, etc.

The license fees for circuses and other entertainments might well be increased. A fee of $2 might be charged for each commission issued to an officer.

DELINQUENT TAXES.

Under the present law a large amount of land is sold to the state for delinquent taxes. Under the decisions of the courts these sales are null and void if all the steps required by law for the collection of taxes by the sheriff and the assessment of taxes by the assessor are not strictly complied with. It is suggested that a law should be passed compelling the sheriff, before he can receive credit from the auditor for his land sales, to produce evidence that all the necessary steps have been taken to make the sale a legal one. And also that greater care on the part of sheriffs and greater security to the state in the purchase of these lands for delinquent taxes.

There is no sufficient provision in the statutes for the collection of doliquent taxes on personal property. In the large cities especially, an enormous number of lists of delinquent personal taxes are allowed by the fiscal courts and credited to the sheriff each year. After the sheriff has received credit for them he has no incentive to further attempt to collect them, as the per cent is too small to recompense him for the trouble of levying and making the proper search for property on which to collect this class of taxes. A law should be passed authorizing some person, other than the sheriff, to collect these taxes, and either provide for the payment of said person out of the amount collected, or add to the amount of taxes so delinquent an amount sufficient to pay for the trouble in collecting same.

The fo[illegible]ould be no delay in correcting these [illegible] great good, in my judgment, will no[illegible] the state if prompt action is had.

CRIMINAL PROSECUTIONS.

[illegible]re is no branch of the public service [illegible]n is so onerous to the taxpayer as criminal prosecution. For years, up to the last [illegible] of which no report has yet been made), these expenditures have a tendity increase. For the second time I most respectfully recommend the reforms included in a former message.

There should be some sort of limitation placed upon the indiscriminate summoning of witnesses and the procuring of warrants and arrests for grand larceny, where the accused is guilty of petit larceny only.

The enactment of a law requiring that affidavit should be made by some reputable party as to the necessity of witnesses, and clearly showing the character sought to be graad larceny, would, in a large degree, cure this trouble.

SALARIES.

Again attention is called to the matter of salaries. There is no reason why present salaries should be greater than those allowed at the conclusion of the war, when gold was bringing an enormous premium, yet they are now greatly more in some instances nearly twice as much. Next November some of these officials are to be elected, and as their salaries can not be reduced during their term of office, to be of value legislation should be now had, as there will be no other session until after the new term of office begins. And while engaged on this subject a general reduction should be made.

ELECTIONS

Republican government demands as its surest support and most powerful protection purity of the ballot and the adoption and enforcement of such laws as will enable every citizen to know how to vote, to be protected in that right and have his voted counted. The result of the late election demonstrated, in more than one respect, that changes should be made in the present system. I have the honor to repeat the recommendations made at the last session.

Article 13, chapter 41, of Kentucky statutes, provides penalties against certain frauds in elections, many of which are dead letters, because section 1591 prohibits conviction upon the testimony of a single witness, unless satisfied by strong corroborating circumstances. Surely, such a safeguard as this to the defendant is unnecessary, in view of the fact that he is a competent witness.

The practice of corralling voters and with money and whisky persuading them to remain away from the polls, is quite common. It is also common to hire men to remain away from the polls.

The law should prevent this.

PUNISHMENT INADEQUATE.

Section 1537 prescribes a fine of $50 and imprisonment in the county jail against any officer upon whom a duty is [illegible] by chapter 41 who shall willfully perform it in such a way as to hinder the object of the law. Silence at the many important duties which this provision governs will demonstrate that the punishment is entirely inadequate as to officers of registration and officers of regular and primary elections. It is recommended that the law be carefully revised so as to severely punish all violations thereof, and make it sufficiently comprehensive to provide safety and security for the voter, and certainty that his vote will be fairly counted.

Section 1448 limits the appointment of officers of elections to householders. Many competent persons are excluded by this section, and it should be altered

In addition to the foregoing suggestions your attention is called to Section 1857 of the statutes. That section provides that as soon as to allow ballots to be counted, even if not sealed and certified as required, it should be made to appear by proof positive or circumstantial that they are in fact the ballots concerning which there is a dispute.

The voter should not be deprived of his right of suffrage by reason of the awkwardness or incompetency of election officers.

FREE SPEECH.

Free speech is the inspiration of republican government. To deny or abridge it is a crime against liberty. It should be fostered and protected by every true American. Laws should be adopted inflicting severe punishment on those who interfere with speakers or public meetings.

STATE APPORTIONMENT

Heretofore your attention has been invited to the matter of apportionment of the various districts of the state. It is now urged by the citizens of Louisville that the creation of another circuit district in the county of Jefferson is absolutely necessary. It is represented, too, that certain steps should be taken by your body to prevent it, a portion of Jefferson county recently taken into the city of Louisville will thereby be denied the right to vote by reason of defective apportionment laws.

The framers of the present constitution determined to secure a just apportionment of the state, and for that purpose adopted suitable provisions. No political party has the right to invade or violate the rights of the people to just equality in the privilege of citizenship. The present general assembly, being republican in one branch and democratic in the other, is well constituted to make a fair apportionment of the state.

Section 148 (constitution) requires: "The general assembly shall, before the regular election in 1891, divide the state, by counties, into as many districts, as nearly equal in population and as compact in form as possible, as it may provide shall be the number of judges of the court of appeals."

The apportionment, under this provision into seven appellate districts, is made in harmony with the section quoted. For instance, in one of these the population is only 180,244, while in another it is 307,825; as little as 1033 square miles are embraced in one, while as much as 7,957 are contained in another. Other similar instances were cited in a former message. A glance at the figures will show that the constitution was violated in making the apportionment.

In a former message your attention was directed to a comparison of many of the districts, among which were the second district, with an area of 583 square miles and a population of 32,998, and the twenty-eighth district, which embraces an area of 2,540 square miles, and a population of 75,091.

RELIEF FOR LITIGANTS

There are now 976 cases under submission in the court of appeals, 300 of which have been submitted more than a year. In addition, there are 540 on the present docket not submitted, 200 of which have been on the argument docket awaiting hearing for more than a year. This is a substantial denial of justice to those having cases pending in that court, for which they are in nowise responsible. As a remedy it is suggested that the minimum amount necessary to give jurisdiction be increased to $201.

HOUSES OF REFORM.

Your honorable body at its last session provided for the building of houses of reform, but no provision was made whereby the money should be obtained with which to carry the act into execution.

Information received from the commissioners develops some difficulty in carrying out the measure. Some dispute has arisen as to whether separate houses are to be erected at different places. It is suggested that experience at the deaf and dumb asylum, blind asylum and house of reform in Louisville has demonstrated that boys and girls may be well controlled in one building by being separated from each other. Should this be recognized as the feasible course to pursue and only one house established, only one set of officers would have to be appointed, thus saving a large outlay by the state.

The government is vested in six commissioners—three women and three men. I am informed that on nearly every question which has arisen before the board the vote has been a tie and that on this account nothing has been accomplished. To avoid this complication power should be given to appoint another commissioner.

Various other difficulties have been suggested, which will be brought before the committee on charitable institutions.

There is a crying necessity for immediate action in this matter, as there are a number of children in the penitentiaries under 16 years of age who can not with safety be turned loose on society, and yet who should not be confined with old and hardened criminals. Would it not be wise and humane to adopt such legislation as will provide for the removal of these unfortunate beings, and the confinement with others who may in the meantime be convicted, to the House of Reform in Louisville, until arrangements can be completed for their reception into the state institution.

THE PROCLAMATION.

There are many subjects embraced in the proclamation calling the present session, on account of which criticism has been indulged in some quarters.

In cities of the second and fourth classes legislation is imperatively demanded looking to the water supply, sewage, school buildings and public libraries, which the public good demands should be adjusted without further detail.

I sincerely trust that you may be able to elect a senator at an early day, and that the interest of the state in other important respects may not be again overlooked and neglected.

Trusting that your session may be beneficial to the commonwealth, and assuring you of my desire to assist in the good work I am, with great respect,

WILLIAM O. BRADLEY,
Governor of Kentucky.

WANTS PEACE.

Weyler Must Visit Gomez and offer to the Patriots Autonomy.

Or If That Proposition Fails He Must Offer to Sell the Island to the Cuban Republic by Order of Spain—Startling Intelligence If True.

CHICAGO, March 12.—A special to the Record from Havana, March 10, says: From information received I can announce positively that Capt.-Gen. Weyler has had orders to seek Gomez and offer him "whatever terms are necessary to end the war." The details are not known, but it is believed they extend all the way from autonomy to the sale of the island to the Cubans. It is said Spain will grant anything to obtain peace with honor before the new congress takes hold. This, of course, will be denied, but it is known positively that it is true. At a banquet at the palace Wednesday night Gen. Weyler said publicly the war would be over in three weeks. He leaves at noon Friday for Villa Clara, where large bodies of troops have been rushed for the last two days for the purpose of seeking Gomez and to make terms for peace.

The steps leading to this result are interesting. Gen. Weyler returned to Havana on the 6th inst., and reported to Spain by cable. He admitted that Gomez and Carillo had crossed his lines and were now west of his forces. He explained that he had tried to negotiate with Gomez, but the latter had refused to treat with him, and would only treat with Campos, and that for independence.

It is believed he added that the situation was desperate. He asked for orders. Meanwhile it is whispered that Dupuy de Lome made worse reports to Spain concerning the temper of the new congress which will meet on the 15th. He said even Cleveland had been scarcely able to restrain the last congress. This one will be worse. He referred to Cleveland's message on the possible intervention and said McKinley would probably think the time had come. He certainly was not so friendly to Spain as Cleveland had been. He declared that something must be done soon.

Gen. Weyler received a long dispatch on the 8th. It was of such a character that he declared it would end the war in a month. It instructs him, it is said, to renew his efforts to secure peace. He is to offer enormous bribes. That failing, he is to offer autonomy. If that is refused, he must even offer to sell the island to the Cubans on guaranty bonds. He must make peace on any terms almost before congress has time to act. If he fails he will be recalled. Meanwhile the United States must be kept quiet by successive releases among those imprisoned.

HAVANA, March 12.—The judge of the court at Guanabacoa has ratified the action of the Spanish authorities in imprisoning Charles Scott, the American citizen who was arrested February 9 last, on charge of having Cuban postage stamps in his possession. This means that the case will continue under the ordinary procedure until it is finally disposed of.

The Matanzas district court has suspended proceedings against Francisco Larrieu, an American citizen who was arrested at Cardenas on May 15, 1896, and he will soon be released.

Warship to Be Sent to Lee.

HAVANA, March 12.—It was reported here Thursday that the McKinley administration had assured Lee that a warship would be sent him at once or within a few days. This has stirred up considerable anti-American feeling.

THE OUTLINES

Of the Scheme Which Greece is Willing to Accept Pending the Solution of the Cretan Question.

LONDON, March 12.—The Athens correspondent of the Times telegraphed that he has obtained from the highest authority the outlines of the scheme which Greece is willing to accept pending a final solution of the Cretan question. The first part of the scheme is that the Turkish troops be immediately withdrawn from the islands; second, that the restoration of order be entrusted to the part of the European fleet co-operating with Greek army, will act under a commander of the joint forces, senior of Col. Vassos; third, insurgents submit to the powers; fourth, that after three months a plebescite be held to decide whether autonomy be established or the island be annexed to Greece; and fifth, that the powers immediately induce Turkey to withdraw part of her troops on the Greek frontier, Greece to withdraw her troops in the same proportion.

The Times says that the government regards the chief danger as being on the frontier. Both the Greek army and the Thessalian peasantry are so excited that an outbreak may occur at any moment.

Will Send Troops to Crete.

LONDON, March 12.—A dispatch from Rome to the Daily News say that Adm. Canevaro, the Italian who is in command of the combined fleets in Cretan waters, insists upon the necessity of landing troops to quell the rebellion in the interior of the island. The Italian government after conferring with the governments of other powers has therefore decided to send a force of troops to Crete.

The Bubonic Plague in Bombay.

BOMBAY, March 12.—The health authorities report that up to this date there have been 9,033 cases of bubonic plague in this city, 7,466 of which have resulted fatally. The returns for the entire presidency show 14,856 cases of plague and 12,204 deaths from the disease.

The Cleveland Hunting Party.

NORFOLK, Va., March 12.—The Cleveland hunting party is still in the vicinity of Hatteras. The tender Violet moved south Wednesday and it is thought the party will Friday hunt near Washington, N. C.

JACKSON DOOMED.

Boy Bradley Denies Pearl Bryan's Murderer Clemency and He Will Hang on March 20.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 13.—Gov. Bradley has refused to show mercy to Scott Jackson, who must hang on March 20 for Pearl Bryan's murder.

The decision of the governor was made public at 1:45 o'clock Friday afternoon. The entire morning had been spent by him in a careful review of the evidence in the case, of Attorney Crawford's appeal and of the law governing executions in Kentucky.

The fact that no decision has yet been made public in Walling's appeal has strengthened the belief here that clemency may be shown Walling.

This may be merely a respite, in the hope of a confession upon the gallows from the lips of Scott Jackson; or it may be a commutation of the death penalty to imprisonment in the Frankfort penitentiary for life.

Col. Washington, of Newport, who is here, is hopeful for his client.

The time of Gov. Bradley's decision was a surprise. Earlier in the morning he said that he would not be able to reach a decision before nightfall.

NEWPORT, Ky., March 13.—The body of Scott Jackson, after the execution March 20, will probably be turned over to Undertaker Costigan, of the firm of M. J. Costigan & Co., of Newport, who will prepare it for shipment to Greencastle, Ind. Mr. Costigan is the former city clerk of Newport.

Attorney William Disney mailed to Gov. Bradley Friday morning an appeal for Jackson and Walling. Disney's communication is purely technical, and he reviews the situation as a lawyer.

He assumes an utter lack of proof of the location of the crime and he thinks the charge of Judge Helm to the jury was manifestly against the interests of the prisoners.

Gov. Bradley's refusal to interfere with Jackson's case is as follows:

"The verdict of the jury and the judgment of the circuit court were carefully reviewed by the court of appeals and the judgment affirmed. On petition for rehearing the opinion of the court was agreed to. Nothing has transpired since that time which was not considered. I have carefully read the record and see no reason which would authorize my interference. The pardon is therefore refused.—Wm. O. Bradley, governor of Kentucky.

It was announced at the executive office that the Walling case would not be passed upon until Saturday.

THE INSURGENTS

Make a Raid on the Suburbs of Havana—Spanish Soldiers and Officers Captured.

NEW YORK, March 13.—A Press special from Jacksonville, Fla., says:

Cuban Leader Acosta made a raid on the suburbs of Havana within half a mile of two block houses Wednesday night, capturing 35 Spanish soldiers and two officers. The attack was made on the turnpike or military road, as it is called, one of the best fortified roadways on the island.

The point of attack was a little hamlet where there were two large storehouses containing considerable ammunition and also clothing for the Spanish forces. The two block houses were located within half a mile of the place. The Cubans dashed in, looted the storehouses and then set fire to them. They then retreated rapidly to the right and came up in the rear of Isabella block house. The troops in this, seeing the burning buildings, rushed out leaving only a small guard behind. The insurgents perceiving this, managed to break in the block house door and in ten minutes were in full possession. Knowing that they could not retain them, they looted the building of all equipments that would be valuable to them, consisting of two stands of arms and considerable ammunition. They spiked the small field piece and setting fire to the house inside dashed off rapidly. The Spanish pursued them within a half an hour, but came back two hours later and reported that the rebels could not be found.

The only report made in Havana regarding this engagement was that a force of rebels had been dispersed, but the main facts are know all over town.

"Jim Crow Car" Decision.

GALVESTON, Tex., March 13.—The court of appeals has affirmed the decision of the lower court in the case of the Pullman Palace Car Co. vs. Rev. Thomas W. Cain, a Negro, who bought a first-class ticket from St. Louis to Galveston, but was forced to ride in the "Negro" car. The opinion of the court was that where a ticket is sold for a certain coach, like a Pullman, a Negro is entitled to ride in that kind of car or the company is liable to pay damages.

Gold Clause Legislation.

LINCOLN, Neb., March 13.—The house Friday passed without the emergency clause Wooster's bill prescribing what shall be a legal tender in Nebraska. This bill is intended to prevent the insertion of the gold clause in contracts, notes or mortgages.

Few From Boston Will Go to Carson.

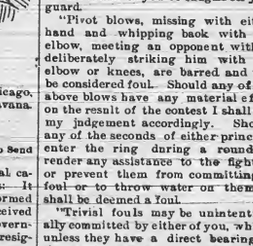
BOSTON, March 13.—Corbett's timekeeper, Jimmy Colville, accompanied by John L. Sullivan and several sporting men, left Boston for Carson City Friday morning. Not over ten persons will go to Carson from Boston to see the battle.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

The Republican Majority in the House Adopted the Gold Ticket

For the Organization of That Body—The Republicans, in the Matter of Organizations, Playing a Waiting Game—The New Senators.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—Monday at noon both houses of the Fifty-fifth congress commenced in extra session. It is not likely that the senate will remain in continuous session during the week unless the president is much more expeditious than he has been in making nominations. There is nothing before the senate and there will be nothing to require close application to business unless the committee on foreign relations reports the arbitration treaty with great Britain. A special meeting of the committee for the further consideration of this subject has been called for Monday.



When Senator Davis' motion to refer the treaty back to the committee was discussed at the special session there was a general expression of opinion that the designation of judges of the United States supreme court as members of the tribunal should be eliminated. It was thought that as jurists in the court of last resort in this country the judges might be called upon to pass on questions similar to those that might arise under this treaty of arbitration, and should this prove to be the case, the situation would be more than embarrassing, as the opinion of the judge as a member of our own court might act as an estoppel in the exercise of his rights as an independent member of the tribunal. It is almost certain that the treaty will also be amended along the lines of the Turpie amendments of last session, so as to provide that every case or question intended to be submitted to arbitration under this general treaty shall first be submitted to the senate for its ratification.

It seems to be a general impression that when the senator appointed by the governor of Florida to succeed Mr. Call, arrives he will be seated. The legislature of Florida does not convene until April 7, and six years ago the senate seated Mr. Posco ad interim under precisely similar conditions.

The appointee from Oregon, in place of Mr. Mitchell, has not yet arrived. His claim to a seat is regarded as res adjudicata by the decision of the senate in the Montana, Washington and Wyoming cases in the last congress. His credentials will undoubtedly be sent to the committee on privileges and elections, as were those of Maj. A. T. Wood, the appointee of Gov. Bradley, of Kentucky.

Meanwhile the republicans in the matter of organization of the committees are playing a waiting game. They will make no effort to do more than fill their own vacancies. The legislatures of the two states elect. It is understood an agreement has about been reached with the democrats to this end. The proposition to consolidate all elements opposed to the republicans for the purpose of capturing the organization and the committees, appears to have fallen through owing to the inability of these elements to come together.

The republican majority in the house having adopted in caucus with unanimity the old ticket, the organization of that body will take but little time, and there is no reason outside of his own possible desire for a day's longer time, why the president should not send in his message to congress on opening day—which is rather an unusual happening. All the house has to do after organizing is to draw for seats, and this can easily be done while the joint committee is on the way to the white house to notify the president that the Fifty-fifth congress is ready for business.

Rev. Dr. R. S. Martin, of Chicago, talked of as consul-general to Havana.

GEN. WEYLER,

It is Reported, Has Been Asked to Send in His Resignation.

NEW YORK, March 15.—A special cable from Havana to the Sun says: It is said in Havana by well informed persons that Gen. Weyler has received a dispatch from the Madrid government requesting him to send his resignation.

It is certain that hard words have been exchanged lately between Gen. Weyler and the central government.

It is said that the issue made by the Spanish Bank of the Island of Cuba will be substituted by another from the Bank of Spain itself at Madrid. Two hundred Cubans embarked Saturday for Ceuta, to which place they have been exiled.

A Monitor Disabled.

NEW YORK, March 15.—The Ocean steamship's steamer Kansas City, which arrived Saturday from Savannah, reports that at 11 o'clock a. m. Friday, when off Wise Var Quarter lightship she passed the United States steamship Columbia with a United States monitor in tow. It is supposed the monitor is the Puritan, before reported disabled.

Destructive Fire at Elkins, W. Va.

ELKINS, W. Va., March 15.—Fire Sunday destroyed 12 stores, the opera house, a hotel, barber shop, several law offices, a printing office and three dwellings. The loss is heavy.

THE BIG FIGHT.

Referee Siler Submits His Interpretation of the Queensberry Rules Which Will Govern the Great Glove Contest.

CARSON CITY, Nev., March 11.—The most delicate subject in connection with the big fight was broached Wednesday when Referee George Siler submitted to Corbett and Fitzsimmons his interpretation of the Queensberry rules. Siler's communication, which was in the nature of a formal letter, was not received with manifestations of joy at either camp.

"Rule 1—To be a fair, stand-up boxing match in a 24-foot ring, or as near that as practicable.

"Rule 2—No wrestling or hugging allowed.

"Rule 3—The rounds to be of three minutes' duration and one minute time between rounds.

"Rule 4—If either man fall, through weakness or otherwise, he must get up unassisted, ten seconds to be allowed him to do so, the other man meanwhile to return to his corner, and when the fallen man is on his legs, the round to be resumed and continued until the three minutes have expired. If one man fails to come to the scratch in the ten seconds allowed, it shall be in the power of the referee to give his award in favor of the other man.

"Rule 5—A man hanging on the ropes in a helpless state with his toes off the ground, shall be considered down.

"Rule 6—No seconds or any other person to be allowed in the ring during the rounds.

"Rule 7—Should the contest be stopped by any unavoidable interference the referee to name time and place, as soon as possible, for finishing the contest, so that the match must be won or lost, unless the backers of both men agree to draw the stakes.

"Rule 8—The gloves to be fair sized boxing gloves of the best quality and new.

"Rule 9—Should a glove burst or come off, it must be replaced to the referee's satisfaction.

"Rule 10.—A man on one knee is considered down, and if struck is entitled to the stakes.

"Rule 11—No shoes or boots with spring allowed.

"Rule 12—The contest in all other respects to be governed by the revised rules of the London prize ring.

"The first three rules need no comment, as they are plain, simple and understood by almost everybody.

"Rule 4, however, requires some analysis, as some of the points are often misconstrued.

"The rule says: If either man fall through weakness or otherwise, he must get up unassisted, three seconds to be allowed him to do so, the other man meanwhile to return to his corner.

"This, of course, was intended to prevent a man from standing over his fallen opponent. It probably never occurred to the framer of the rules that at times a man either falls or is knocked down in his opponent's corner. If then, the man on his feet retires to his corner as the rules direct, he will be standing over his fallen opponent and doing just what the rules mean he shall not do.

"To avoid all disputes on this score, I will simply instruct you in case of a knock-down to retire at least ten feet from your fallen opponent, to give him an opportunity to rise.

"Rule 12, which says: The contest in all other respects to be governed by the revised rules of the London prize ring, is, I consider, one of the most important of the 12 rules, as it appears to be the bone of contention in almost every contest. It has been the custom of referees, myself among them, to inquire of the principals whether they choose to hit in clinches with one arm free and also on breakaways. Invariably the principals agree not to hit in clinches, or on breakaways, but they generally forget all about their agreement and frequently violate it.

"Neither of you, I am sure, desire to win the coming contest on a technical foul and to avoid any such contingency through hitting in clinches with a free arm and in breakaways, I will rule:

"That you be permitted to hit in clinches with one arm free and also on breakaways. With this interpretation of this rule announced a week before the contest, you will both have ample time to practice these important points, and will have no cause for complaint should either of you be caught off your guard.

"Pivot blows, missing with either hand and whipping back with the elbow, meeting an opponent with or deliberately striking him with the elbow or knees, are barred and will be considered foul. Should any of the above blows have any material effect on the result of the contest I shall use my judgement accordingly. Should any of the seconds of either principal enter the ring during a round to render any assistance to the fighters or prevent them from committing a foul or to throw water on them, it shall be deemed a foul.

"Trivial fouls may be unintentionally committed by either of you, which, unless they have a direct bearing on the result, will be overlooked at my discretion.

"This, I believe, covers all the important points. Both of you are thoroughly acquainted with the marquis of Queensberry rules not touched upon by me, and I hope to see you both live strictly up to them.

"With a fair field, no favors, no prejudices, I remain, very truly yours, GEORGE SILER, referee."

HARD TIMES

The Oppotunity Of Reform.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

In the RECORDER of March 3rd, there was an article from the pen of "Spero Meliora" in favor of retrenchment and reform. He evidently has struck the keynote of popular demand. It sounds sweeter to the taxpayer than the most musical production of Straus or Mendelssohn, and the execution of this reform would be more interesting to him than any performance of a Booth, Barrett or McCullough.

"Hard times" is the opportunity of reform. That times are hard, no one will deny, but the cause or remedy no one knows. It is true, in choosing the members of the Fiscal Court, we should elect none who will not promise to hew strictly to the line of economy and to refuse to pay the claims of all officers for duties which they must perform by virtue of their offices, and for which no compensation is allowed by law. I mention this, because Boone county has paid thousands of dollars in illegal fees. Candidates for the legislature need stricter examination than those of the Fiscal Court. We should not send men to the Legislature, (our present candidate I don't believe is one of them) whose statesmanship would be exhibited by introducing bills to prevent the wearing of bloomers or doing away with the pompadour, &c., or passing resolutions such as only would be expected from the most puerile minds of Sand-lots or the Bowery. Would it not be better for the taxpayers, if such solons would inquire into the advisability of assessing the property once in four years, thus saving about $225,000 taxes; or passing such laws that will require the compensation of protem judges to be deducted from the salary of the regular judge, unless in cases where he is ineligible, or has been sworn off the bench? If a law should be passed doubling the tax upon promissory notes and money on deposit in banks, which had not been listed with the assessor, would it not cause a greater enlistment of such property? The owner of real estate who is in debt is the man who pays on more than he is worth. Then there are the salaries of judges and all state officers which need the attention of the economical legislator. A state legislator is no more important than a Congressman.

The standard of a Congressman is measured by the amount of the appropriations which his district has received to improve the water courses of Gimlet-run and Bottle-creek, or to build a large custom house at some insignificant seaport. These things should not be, yet he would have a walkover against any man who would be opposed to all these ridiculous appropriations. We should send men to congress who believe in running the affairs of this government economically — who would do all in their power to cut the tail of that costly pension monster off just behind the ears and leave no one on the pension list except disabled soldiers. I do not mean by disabled, those, who, years after the war, became afflicted with rheumatism, &c., and by a certain mysterious way discovered and proved that they contracted the disease while in the service of their country. We do not want congressmen of the a la Bill Holman type, who will snap and snarl at a 2x4 appropriation, and then vote to pass that monstrous steal, the dependent pension bill over the veto of President Cleveland. The pension is a political plant, which is thought to bear official life, and the sooner it is heavily pruned the better it will be for the taxpayers.

Of all law making bodies in the United States, the Senate is the most worthless, that is, as it is at present. It could truthfully be called the great American Museum of incapables—it is composed principally of office-worn remnants of the civil war, whose day of usefulness has long since passed. During the last four years, that dignified body of imbecility has divided its time between annihilating England, demolishing Spain, and spanking Cleveland, until these powers have been whipped no less than a score of times in so short a period. There is one piece of statesmanship which these incompetents failed to touch upon, and that, too, upon the line of their custom and capability, viz: a resolution calling upon the President to show why he has not revealed to the Senate the manner in which he received Queen Lil, whether at or within arms length. This would have been ordered to the asinine committee, which is nothing more nor less than a committee of the whole. Send younger blood to the Senate; do away with the dignified Hoars and the Nicaragua-canal Morgans, and we'll have less fuss and fewer star-chamber proceedings, at least. Let retrenchment and reform proceed, its success is with the voter.

CROP AND STOCK.

On Enoch McCall's farm, 2 miles east of Vanceburg, Kentucky, is an apple tree that has been bearing fruit for ninety years. It is a yellow belle flower and was planted when this whole region was almost one solid forest and has lived to see the giants of the woods disappear, towns and cities spring into view, two generations of people die, three new generations appear and yet the old belle flower stands like a sentinel at his port and still annually drops big yellow apples. It would take a basket forty-eight feet wide set under the tree to catch every apple that falls. Five feet from the ground it measures nine feet six inches in circumference. The tree shows some signs of decay now, but no doubt the year of 1900 will find it producing as sweet and fragrant blossoms and as delicious golden fruit as it did nearly one hundred years ago. It has done duty for almost a century, defying the elements to destroy its usefulness and has certainly earned a homestead.

While one farmer in some shape gets in 50 or 60 acres of wheat, his neighbor will put in half as much and get as many bushels. There is not only the lesson of profit in this but we must remember that well tilled land is constantly improving while that which is half tilled is growing poorer every day.—Farmers Home Journal.

The farm of Frank Bedford, containing 250 acres, located on the Paris and North Middletown turnpike, about four miles from Paris, was sold publicly to Mr. Samuel Macky, of Jessamine county, for $70 per acre.

The Wainscott heirs sold their farm containing about 180 acres to Milton Young, for $75 per acre. This land is situated on the Georgetown pike, 6 miles from Lexington, and known as the Gilbert place.

Mr. George Cogar, the large wheat and hemp dealer, of Danville, says that wheat in Kentucky was very little damaged by the late freeze, and with no ill luck in the future there will be a very large yield.

Hogs are dying in large numbers in some parts of Mercer county. Farmers say that it is not cholera, that the skins of the affected swine turn red, as though scalded, and they go blind and die.

Prices for horses on the Chicago market last week was from $10 to $20 higher than during the first half of the month.

The Dr. Spurr farm of 200 acres, near Greendale, Fayette, county, was sold to Fred Rosen, at $65 per acre.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[News]

Sparta or the principal portion of it was destroyed by fire last Monday at about 12 o'clock. The Fire broke out in Gardner's Hotel and quickly spread to the adjoining buildings, the residence and office of Dr. Bond. The blaze then jumped the street and licked up the depot which is the property of The F. & A. Cox Co., this place. The post office, telegraph office and freight were all saved. The loss will be about $15,000 which is partially insured.

The first liquor in Owenton for a period of fifteen years were granted Mr. H. Vest last Thursday. Owenton voted license by a vote of nearly two to one, after the experiment of 15 years trying to keep whisky from being sold and now substitute the high license system. The town license is $500, county $150. Government $25, which makes the privilege a pretty costly one.

Gabe May, convicted of perjury and sentenced for one year, and Alvin Adams for the killing of Perkins sentenced for two years were taken to the penitentiary last Thursday by Deputy Sheriff Moore.

Dr. J. T. Boulton, Cincinnati, O.

Dear Sir—I was taken with a severe cough the first of May; for two weeks I could not lie on my left side nor breathe through my left lung. I also had hemorrhage and my friends said I had consumption. I began taking Boulton's Cough Remedy and began to improve with the first dose, and within three weeks was entirely well. I can not say enough in favor of Boulton's Cough Remedy. Respectfully,

MRS. R. J. MARSHALL.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 24, 1897. NO. 22.

H. CLAY EVANS, of Tennessee, has been appointed Commissioner of Pensions and has accepted.

KENTUCKY ought to be able to choose her United States Senator without the advice or consent of Ohio politicians.

GOV. BRADLEY has gotton about enough of his office. It is said he will resign shortly after the adjournment of the legislature.

GOV. BRADLEY has got Jackson and Walling off of his hands, but as a source of annoyance the legislature will, doubtless, prove to be their equal.

IT begins to look very much like the Democratic party in Kentucky will be harmonious in its actions to oust the Republicans at the next State election.

THE Mississippi river flood has destroyed a great deal of property during the past month, and many persons have been drowned in the overflowed districts in Mississippi and Louisiana.

THE prize fight and the hanging came off on time last week. What will the newspapers do for sensational news to dish up for their readers in this section? Give'm base ball, reckon.

Two men dead and four wounded was the result of a race riot at Brookside, near Birmingham, Ala., on the night of the 20th inst. The arrest of a drunken negro precipitated the trouble.

W. W. CLEARY, for many years Commonwealth's Attorney in the Covington Distrct, died at his home in Covington last week. He had made a good record as an officer and was very popular as a man.

THE Hon. Hoke Smith has declared that he will not vote for Bryan in 1900, if he should be the nominee of the Democratic party for President. He ought not be trying to hang a bluff on Bryan so far before hand.

THE fourth-class postmasters will be permitted to serve out their four years term, at least that is the last announcement from headquarters, and it declares a delay that the applicants for the rural postoffices do not appreciate.

THE new tariff bill is now being discussed in Congress, and it will be difficult for its advocates to demonstrate how it will increase the revenue; when the one after which it is patterned brought about exactly the opposite result.

IF Fitzsimmons is as hideous a looking specimen of humanity as some of the papers represent him, it was not the punch he gave Corbett over the heart that winded him, but it was his looks that gained for him the championship.

THE Republicans have had their own way in every instance at Frankfort, so far, and will be able to continue doing as they please throughout the special session, if some of the members on their side are not attack with contraryness.

SOME of the Republican members of the General Assembly were desirous of bridging the breech between the Bradley and Hunter factions by nominating Judge Holt for United States Senator, but Hunter was sure of his nomination, and would not accept the proposition. He saw he had Bradley going and was determined to knock him over the ropes before he let up.

THE Lawrenceburg people are especially pleased with the levee which afforded the city such thorough protection against the recent high water, and to no one person are they under more obligation than W. H. O'Brian, who, in the face of strong opposition, prompted by politics, worked day and night, both as a private citizen and as city official, for the construction of a safe and secure levee. Those who opposed him are now reaping the benefit of his business talents.

OF the Dingley tariff bill Congressman Berry says: "It is an excessively high protective tariff measure. It will, if passed, inevitably raise the price of the necessaries of life, such as sugar and the woolen goods worn by all classes. I don't see how it can fail to add to the burdens of the people instead of lightening them. It will cut off our foreign markets by raising the cost of production and thus curtail the manufacturers sales. As a consequence the mills will need to run only six months, instead of all the year, as they ought to do."

Suppose Fitzsimmons should come into Aurora on one railroad and the President of the United States on the other, at the same hour, which would draw the bigger crowd of spectators?—Saturday Bulletin.

If to the square yard in Aurora there are as many applicants for federal pie as there appear to be in most Ohio and Indiana towns, Fitz would get lonesome, while the President would be overwhelmed by the faithful.

THE nomination of Henry White to be Secretary of Embassy at London, was almost as unpalatable to Republicans as the Van Alen nomination to Italy was to Democrats when it was made by Mr. Cleveland about four years ago. Some of them are inclined to be sarcastic about it. For instance, the man who said: "Who says White isn't an American! He has lived abroad for many years, but didn't he come over from Europe last year, live at Newport just long enough to cast his first vote and then go back. White is all right. His help is needed to make John Hay popular in London's swell society."

JACKSON and Walling went through the trap in Newport, last Saturday, without ever having told anything that could be considered reliable in regard to the murder of Pearl Bryan. It is evident that Walling hoped until Jackson refused on the scaffold to talk, that he would tell enough to save him from the ignominous death. Gov. Bradley manifested a disposition to respite Walling even after he ascended the scaffold, in the event that Jackson made any statement that tended to exculpate him; but Jackson failed to do so and the two criminals were executed together, and the murder of Pearl Bryan was avenged. No Executive of Kentucky was ever importuned for clemency as was Gov. Bradley was in this case, and he is to be commended for the firm stand he took.

YESTERDAY the first ballot for United States Senator was due at Frankfort, but up to the time of going to press the result of the ballot had not been learned here. Dr. Hunter was very certain of election, notwithstanding a threatened coalition of the Democrats with those Republicans who were willing to resort to any means to defeat Hunter. The idea of the Democrats making Governor Bradley their candidate for Senator ought not to be considered one moment by them. If the United States Senator to be elected at this session of the legislature is to be a Republican, let the Republicans elect him and upon them will rest the responsibility. Democrats can not afford to shoulder the responsibility for the election of a Republican to the Senate—they could expect no favors of him, nor should he show them any.

IN reply to the question is it wise for a man to deny himself and get along with a few hours sleep a day to do more work? Tesla, the great electrician, is said to have replied: "That is a great mistake I am convinced. A man has just so many hours to be awake, and the fewer of these he uses up each day, the more days they will last; that is, the longer he will live. I believe that a man might live 200 years if he would sleep most of the time. That is why negroes often live to advanced old age, because they sleep so much. It is said that Gladstone sleeps seventeen hours every day; that is why his faculties are still unimpaired in spite of his great age. The proper way to economize life is to sleep every moment that is not necessary or desirable that you should be awake."

THE following Kentuckians are in the present Congress: Oscar Underwood, born in Jefferson county; Shelby M. Cullom, Wayne county; John Baker, Fayette county; Chas. K. Wheeler, Christian county; John S. Rhea, Logan county; David H. Smith, Hart county; Waiter Evans, Barren county; Albert S. Berry, Campbell county; Evan E. Settle, Franklin county; George M. Davison, Lincoln county; Samuel J. Pugh, Greenup county; T. Y. Fitzpatrick, Floyd county; David G. Colson, Bell county; George G. Vest Franklin county; Richard P. Bland, Ohio county; Champ Clark, Anderson county; Benton McMillin, Monroe county; Roger Q. Mills, Todd county; Sam B. Cooper, Caldwell county; James L. Slayden, Graves county, and Marcus A. Smith, Harrison county.

THE Fitz people got all the money the Corbett men had to put up on him.

USING a bill introduced in Congress, which has no chance to pass as a basis to swindle the ignorant is by no means a new dodge, but according to the correspondence of many southerners in Congress, such a dodge is now being successfully worked among the ignorant negroes of the southern States by unscrupulous men. During the first session of the last Congress, Senator Thurston, of Nebraska, introduced by request a bill providing for the payment of a pension to all negroes who had been slaves. It was well known in Washington that the bill would never be seriously considered in committee, to say nothing of being passed by either House or Senate, but that bill is being made the basis of a swindle upon the poor negroes, who are being told that upon the payment of 25 cents for filling out an official looking blank with their name, age, residence, etc. they will be entitled to a pension when the bill becomes a law. The worst part of this dirty swindle is that the men operating it cannot be prosecuted, as it is printed upon each blank that "it is to secure the names and number of persons in each state entitled to a pension under the Thurston pension bill," and the fee is charged for filling the blank.

AT one time the office of County Clerk was considered the juciest plum in the local official basket, and, as a consequence, was the most sought. Previous to the third constitution of Kentucky, the County Court, which was then composed of the Justices of the Peace, appointed its clerk, who held his office during good behavior. I. G. Hamilton who had held the office of County Court Clerk for many years previous the the adoption of the third constitution, was elected in 1851, and re-elected in 1854 and again in 1858. He performed all his duties so promptly and well, during his incumbency of many years, that he is, to this day, spoken of by our older citizens as the grand old gentleman and typical clerk. He was succeeded in 1862 by L. W. Webb. Mr. Webb held the office for one term, and the record kept by him, is considered the neatest in the office. In 1866 A. B. Parker succeeded L. W. Webb. Mr. Parker was the most rapid clerk that ever held the office and was very accurate. He held the office for eight years, two terms, and was succeeded in 1884 by L. H. Dills, who held two terms. His successor was M. T. Garnett, in 1882, who also held two terms. In 1890, A. S. Gaines was elected and reelected in 1894, but died before his second term expired. J. S. Clutterbuck was appointed to fill the vacancy until the regular election, when B. W. Adams, the incumbent, was elected to fill the vacancy in November, 1896, the regular term beginning January 1st, 1898.

THE following illustrates how gold circulates: Monday morning a gentleman presented a five dollar bill to the RECORDER in payment of his subscription. Of course the editor could not give the change for a bill of that size, and took it to the bank to get it broken, receiving among the the change a two and a half dollar gold piece. This was turned over to the subscriber who went out in town and paid a small bill with it, and in less than thirty minutes the gold piece was again lying quietly in the cash drawer in the bank. The bank had make two or three efforts to get this identical coin to start out in the channels of commerce, but it invariably found its way back to the bank in a short time. It is nice money to look at and very convenient to hoard, but it is not adapted to the demands of common, every day transactions.

We have never seen our market so late in the season with as little good tobacco offered as there is at present, and it must be that the owners are holding their good tobacco for a future market, or there is a less quantity in the country than has been promised. There is a strong demand for some good tobacco.—Western Tobacco Journal.

MR. TAYLOR, Ohio's Secretary of State, came over to Frankfort, last week, to take a hand in the election of a United States Senator. Gov. Bradley ought to have called out the troops and suppressed him.

THE gold Democrats wanted the Republicans to nominate Judge Holt for United States Senator, and they would have voted for him, but Hunter, the gum-shoe statesman, had out generald them.

SINCE becoming Secretary of State John Sherman's friendship for Cuba has disappeared.

JOHN C. NEW, editor of the Indianapolis, Journal and Consul General to London under President Harrison, is not favorably impressed with President McKinley's appointment of Mr. Gowdy as Consul General to Paris. In his paper he says of the appointment:

"The nomination of Mr. Gowdy as Consul General at Paris is announced, but it will not strike those who know him, or know anything of the status of the position, as at all creditable to the Administration of Mr. McKinley. The requirements of that position are exacting. Mr. Gowdy can neither read nor write the language of the country to which he is assigned. He has no commercial experience or knowledge of official or semi-official duties of the office, and is totally unfit for the place. He probably deserves recognition for the vast lot of scavenger work he did. His methods may not have been cast upon a very high plane. However, they seem to have met the measure of the man he sought to please, but might have had his pay, if the Government must be the paymaster, in some place where his deficiencies would be less conspicuous."

THE Dingley tariff bill is not proving satisfactory to some of the leading Republican Journals of the country. The Chicago Tribune, a leading Republican paper in the West, sounds an alarm as follow:

"The re-enactment of the wool and woolens schedule of 1890 would be the same as putting a duty of over 90 per cent. on woolen clothing, which is one of the necessaries of life in this country. That will be more than luxuries like silks and fine linen have to pay. It will be asked whether this is the 'principle' on which President McKinley said rates of duty should be imposed.

"Assuredly it is not. Therefore this Dingley bill is not one to be indorsed enthusiastically and unreservedly. He who demands its enactment just as it comes from its framer's hands is no friend of the Republican party. The true friend of the party is the person who lays his finger on this blemish in the bill, and urges that it be cut out so as to escape a repetition of the elections of 1890 and 1892.

This unsavory reminiscence of 1890 will stir up more strife than any other portion of the bill. It will provoke acrimonious debate in Congress and dissatisfaction outside of Congress. The people will ask why it has been deemed necessary to go back to 1890 to revive a set of duties that met with their disfavor, even at a time when the country was very prosperous."

We glean the following from the Shelby News:

FOR SALE—A fresh Jersey cow. Also one year's subscription to daily Courier-Journal for $4.50.

TOM WALLACE.

The advertisement is rather confusing, since the reader is left in doubt as to whether or not the year's subscription goes with the Jersey cow. The cow would no doubt be a bargain at $4,50, even in gold-standard times, but if the purchaser of the cow also gets the paid up subscription and obligates himself to read the Courier-Journal for one year he will have more nightmares than calves at the end of the time.—Star-Truth.

The indications are that there is to be a pretty lively Senatorial contest at Frankfort this week. The Democrats have combined with the Republicans who are fighting Hunter, the Republican caucus nominee, and Gov. Bradley appears to stand a pretty good chance to knock Hunter out. In the event Bradley is elected United States Senator a Governor will have to be elected this fall, and it is that fact that induces the Democrats to support Bradley. They believe they can carry the State this fall, and by taking up Bradley and sending him to the Senate they will gain a Governor. It is very uncertain if the Democrats in this State are in a condition just yet to profit by such a deal.

The Louisville Commercial is certain that Hunter will receive 70 votes, the full Republican strength in the General Assembly.

TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL

Not Excelled by Any of the Recent European Fairs.

William Jennings Bryan Commends the Spirit Which Made the Exposition Possible—The Grounds in Spring Garb.

[Special Nashville (Tenn.) Letter.]

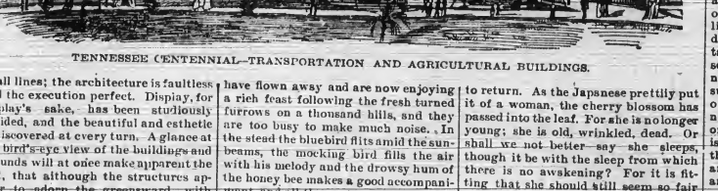
The Tennessee Centennial Exposition, the white city that has risen at the wave of a wand at the capital city, is to-day a veritable hive of industry; a whole army of men are employed in getting the buildings and exhibits ready for the opening day, May 1, and everything will be ready. Even as everything stands at present the exposition is much nearer completion than Atlanta was after it had been open for a month, and there are nearly seven weeks yet before President McKinley will press the button that will set in motion the greatest exposition ever held in the south. It is really a hard matter to write about the exposition without the use of a number of adjectives, because what everybody says must be true, and all speak in the highest terms of the great work already performed.

One method, and the best, of judging of the excellence of the work is to compare it with undertakings of a similar character, and an opportunity has presented itself of late whereby that might be done in a most satisfactory manner.

Among recent visitors to the grounds was Maj. Henry S. Cohn, a distinguished member of the Louisville press, who, during the past year, spent several months in Europe, where he visited no less than twelve expositions in nine of the old cities, and he unhesitatingly asserts that Tennessee's big show is excelled by none. He visited expositions at Geneva, Vienna, Buda Pesth, Nuremberg, Munich, Stuttgart, Berlin, Kiel and Dresden. At Stuttgart there were three separate and distinct exhibitions, industrial, agricultural and electrical, and two at Berlin, art and industrial, but with all the vast resources of the old world at their command there was not a single instance where Tennessee was put in the shade.

The parks in which some of the exhibition buildings were placed were more picturesque than the grounds at Nashville, but that is not to be wondered at, for some of those parks have been receiving care and attention for nearly a thousand years, and it is only reasonable to suppose that they would have reached a high degree of excellence in that period. One thing that struck Maj. Cohn very forcibly was the proximity of the Centennial grounds to the heart of the city of Nashville. An electric car made the trip in less than ten minutes, whereas in the European cities the buildings were generally about an hour's ride from the business centers.

And it is really not to be wondered at that everyone is delighted with the buildings, grounds, and everything pertaining to the Tennessee centennial. The greatest care has been displayed in all lines; the architecture is faultless and the execution perfect. Display, for display's sake, has been studiously avoided, and the beautiful and esthetic is discovered at every turn. A glance at the bird's-eye view of the buildings and grounds will at once make apparent the fact, that although the structures appear to adopt the greensward with charming irregularity, a system has been observed, and one passes from one building to another, as you would read chapter after chapter, each building su important factor in one grand harmonious whole. The observer noticing how well the natural features have been used to advantage is at a loss to know whether the buildings were placed in reference to the beautiful lakes or whether the sheets of water were subsequent innovations. The effect is perfect, and there is a great deal more to be noted than is at first apparent. Capitol avenue is well named; a line drawn down the center of that thoroughfare would bisect the majestic Parthenon, touch the gigantic statue of Pallas Athenae, cross the beautiful Rialto and continue direct till it struck the dome of the state's capital—truly a glorious view and freighted with interest from every aspect. The objects of interest that are found adjacent to this thoroughfare are a study in themselves, and convey a lesson that must be learned by observation. As reference has been made to the opinions of the value of the Tennessee Centennial Exposition, as given by prominent men, another opinion can be added which is directly to the point.



Among the visitors to the grounds this week was Hon. William Jennings Bryan, of Nebraska, who after examining the buildings and taking note of all the objects of interest, said: "I am greatly impressed with the magnitude of the Tennessee Centennial Exposition and more than delighted by the beauty of the buildings and the perfection of the details. I am sure that those who know what Nashville has in store for visitors will be as firmly resolved as I am to visit this centennial when its gates are open to the public. Such an exhibition is of the greatest importance to the state and to the nation. I believe that such expositions as those held at Chicago, and at Nashville, will do much to bring the people together, to draw them into closer fellowship and remove whatever prejudice may arise from a lack of knowledge on the part of those who live in the more remote sections of our country. I trust that the Tennessee Centennial Exposition will be as much of a blessing to the people of the west and north as I am sure it will be to the people of the south."

Another, and a very valuable opinion, was recently given by the renowned artist, George W. Chambers, of St. Louis, who, after a visit to Nashville, wrote as follows: "Of the buildings already completed it would be invidious to speak, comparatively, and, indeed, unnecessary, where all is so admirably planned and designed. And yet I cannot omit a brief word concerning the Parthenon. Not in its praise, for it needs none, nor of its history, for that is trite, nor yet of the wisdom of choosing it as being adapted for the purpose, for that will be evident to all who enter it. The thought I had on looking at it was that, strangely enough, it would perhaps be less of a surprise to southern visitors than other buildings. It will be perfectly familiar to them, and that, not because they have seen pictures of it, but because south of the Mason and Dixon's line this is the type of architecture that was chosen for the stately homes as well as for state and public buildings. That choice of the classic Greek for all important work, domestic and national, is distinctly the choice of the south. It would seem that approaching the parallel of Athens in this country, it was a sine qua non to follow its architecture." All the opinions presented appear to coincide and the first unfavorable criticism has yet to be received.

Nature is now aiding art at Nashville. The rich reds and browns of the winter foliage of the giant oaks are not so marked as they were a month ago; the buds are opening and the grass is growing and early spring flowers are found everywhere. Nestling in the hedge rows and fence corners one finds the hepatica in gorgeous array and the trailing arbutus opens its pretty flowers in the shade of the laurestina. The honeysuckle will be the next, and then the wood violet and the wild convolvolus. And there are spring sounds heard amid the spring flowers. The noisy crows have held dominion all winter, but they have flown away and are now enjoying a rich feast following the fresh turned furrows on a thousand hills, and they are too busy to make much noise. In the stead the bluebird flits amid the sunbeams, the mocking bird fills the air with his melody and the drowsy hum of the honey bee makes a good accompaniment, and all the pent up stream of life dashes onward in a catarset.

To Execute Humanely.

There is considerable talk just now in France regarding the abolition of the guillotine as an instrument of execution, and in discussing a substitute the idea of asphyxiating by illuminating gas seems to find much favor. It is claimed that no scientific objection can be found to this means, whereas "electrocution" is by no means universally regarded as a success in producing instant and painless death. The temperament of the victim has a great deal to do with the matter, and while the current used has instantly killed in many cases, it is a fact that only torture and prolonged agony have often been the first result. Asphyxiation could be carried out while the victim is asleep, and therefore without any consciousness on his part. This is a point that has a great deal of weight with the humanely inclined of those interested in the matter.—Chicago News.

VENUS A DEAD PLANET.

The Beautiful Star of Love is Old, Lifeless and Cold.

Observations at Flagstaff, A. T., have led to the conclusion that the planet Venus always presents the same side to the sun and is, therefore, lifeless. Here are some of the deductions about the condition of the planet:

If there were water present on the planet and, we will suppose, originally on both sides alike, it seems probable that its career would be as follows: As the heated air ascended from the center of the illuminated side it would become chilled as it expanded and, being unable to hold its moisture, would proceed to deposit it in the form of showers. Most of the moisture it held would thus at once be parted with, but not all. A little would be carried round by the air to the dark side, where, experiencing a yet greater degree of cold, it would be felt as ice, and as ice there it would remain; for the amount of moisture which the exceedingly cold air on its return journey could support would be a minute quantity; so that although the ice would tend slowly to evaporate, very little of the water vapor would find its way back to the bright side.

There would thus be a constant drain of water from the bright side to the dark, for however little might go over at a time practically none would ever come back. Eventually, therefore, under this continued state of things, all the water would be withdrawn from the illuminating side and piled up on the dark one in the form of glacier ice.

On the bright side of the planet there would thus be no oceans or seas or rivers or ponds, not even water vapor in the air, while glaciation would more or less completely cover the other. The side we see would be one vast desert; the side we do not, perpetual fields of ice.

Some corollaries from this are interesting. One of these is that there should be no visible polar caps, since there would not be polar caps, but a polar hemisphere. And this would be forever hid from us, for nothing but orbital or axial libration—that is, a swing of the portion of the disk under illumination—could bring it into view, and in the case of Venus the orbital libration is insensible and the axial one one apparently so.

Another ingenious corollary has been suggested. It is that the phosphorescence, as it is called, of the dark side, a faint light upon it which has hitherto evaded explanation, may be caused by the reflection from the ice fields there of the light received from the earth, the other planets and the stars.

In Venus, then, we gaze upon a world which as a world has run its course. Beautiful as she appears to us, as she glows and sparkles in the twilight sky, it is distance alone that gives her her seeming loveliness and endows her with eternal youth. In truth she is far otherwise. All the comeliness she may have had in the morning of her prime, when the solar system itself was young, has gone from her never to return. As the Japsnese prettily put it of a woman, the cherry blossom has passed into the leaf. For she is no longer young; she is old, wrinkled, dead. Or shall we not better say she sleeps, though it be with the sleep from which there is no awakening? For it is fitting that she should still seem so fair to us, when she goes athwart the glooming in the slowly fading sky—fitting that the planet of love should seem lovely to the end.—Atlantic.

Prison Sold at Auction.

The literature of auctioneering is full of cleverness and verbal oddities, but Carlow, England, turns up with a line of humor which is all the more effective because it is so unconscious. An advertisement recently printed there stated that "the old gaol" would be offered in one lot. It goes on to particularize with enthusiasm and dilate with zeal concerning a "female prison of 30 cells," "debtors' prison," "convict prison, containing 34 cells," "house of correction," "treadmill" and "three-throw pump." There is also "a very fine cut granite gate entrance," and "all cells are fitted with double wrought iron doors, bolts and locks, and floored with granite or flags." In fact, "all modern improvements" would seem to be the only additional necessity in the way of enticing description.—N. Y. Journal.

SUFFERED FOR OTHERS.

Graphic Lessons Drawn From the Life of Jesus Christ.

His Substitution to Save the Souls of Men—The Mother and Patriot Who Die for Others—"Without the Shedding of Blood is No Remission"—Sermon by Rev. Dr. Talmage.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was Hebrews ix., 22: "Without shedding of blood is no remission."

John G. Whittier, the last of the great school of American poets that made the last quarter of a century brilliant, asked me in the White mountains, one morning after prayers, in which I had given out Cowper's famous hymn about "The Fountain Filled With Blood."

"Do you really believe there is a literal application of the blood of Christ to the soul?"

My negative reply then is my negative reply now. The Bible statement agrees with all physicians, and all physiologists, and all scientists, in saying that the blood is the life, and in the Christian religion it means simply that Christ's life was given for our life. Hence all this talk of men who say the Bible story of blood is disgusting, and that they don't want what they call a "Slaughter-house religion," only shows their incapacity or unwillingness to look through the figure of speech toward the thing signified. The blood that, on the darkest Friday the world ever saw, oozed, or trickled, or poured from the brow, and the sides, and the hands, and the feet of the illustrious sufferer, back of Jerusalem, in a few hours coagulated and dried up, and forever disappeared; and if man had depended on the application of the literal blood of Christ there would not have been a soul saved for the last 18 centuries.

In order to understand this red word of my text, we have only to exercise as much common sense in religion as we do in everything else. Pang for pang, hunger for hunger, fatigue for fatigue, tear for tear, blood for blood, life for life, we see every day illustrated. The act of substitution is no novelty, although I hear men talk as though the idea of Christ's suffering substituted for our suffering were something abnormal, something distressingly odd, something wildly eccentric, a solitary episode in the world's history, when I could take you out into this city and before sundown point you to 500 cases of substitution and voluntary suffering of one in behalf of another.

At 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon go among the places of business or toil. It will be no difficult thing for you to find men who, by their looks, show you that they are overworked. They are prematurely old. They are hastening rapidly toward their decease. They have gone through crises in business and shattered their nervous system and polluted the brain. They have a shortness of breath and a pain in the back of the head, and at night an insomnia that alarms them. Why are they drudging at business early and late. For fun? No; it would be difficult to extract any amusement out of that exhaustion. Because they are avaricious? In many cases no. Because their own personal expenses are lavish? No, a few hundred dollars would meet all their wants. The simple fact is, the man is enduring all that fatigue and exasperation, and wear and tear, to keep his home prosperous. There is an invisible line reaching from that store, from that bank, from that shop, from that seafolding, to a quiet scene a few blocks away, a few miles away, and there is the secret of that business endurance. He is simply the champion of a homestead, for which he wins bread, and wardrobe, and education, and prosperity, and in such battle ten thousand men fall. Of ten business men whom I bury, nine die of overwork for others. Some sudden disease finds them with no power of resistance, and they are gone. Life for life. Blood for blood. Substitution!

At 1 o'clock to-morrow morning, the hour when slumber is most uninterrupted and profound, walk amid the dwelling houses of the city. Here and there you will find a dim light, because it is the household custom to keep a subdued light burning; but most of the houses from base to top are as dark as though uninhabited. A merciful God has sent forth the archangel of sleep, and he puts his wings over the city. But yonder is a clear light burning, and outside on the window casement is a glass or pitcher containing food for a sick child; the food is set in the fresh air. This is the sixth night that mother has sat up with that sufferer. She has to the last point obeyed the physician's prescription, not giving a drop too much or too little, or a moment too soon or too late. She is very anxious, for she has buried three children with the same disease, and she prays and weeps, each prayer and sob ending with a kiss of the pale cheek. By dint of kindness she gets the little one through the ordeal. After it is all over, the mother is taken down. Brain or nervous fever sets in, and one day she leaves the convalescent child with a mother's blessing and goes up to join the three in the kingdom of Heaven. Life for life. Substitution! The fact is that there are an uncounted number of mothers who, after they have navigated a large family of children through all the diseases of infancy, and got them fairly started up the flowery slope of boyhood and girlhood, have only strength left to die. They fade away. Some call it consumption; some call it nervous prostration; some call it intermittent of malarial indisposition; but I call it martyrdom of the domestic circle. Life for life. Blood for blood. Substitution.

Or perhaps the mother lingers long enough to see a son get on the wrong road, and his former kindness becomes rough reply when she expresses anxiety about him. But she goes right on, looking carefully after his apparel, remembering his every birthday with some memento, and when he is brought home worn out with dissipation, nurses him till he gets well and starts him again, and hopes, and expects, and prays, and counsels, and suffers, until her strength gives out and she fails. She is going, and attendents, bending over her pillow, ask her if she has any message to leave, and she makes great effort to say something, but of three or four minutes of indistinct utterance they can catch but three words: "My poor boy!" The simple fact is that she died for him. Life for life. Substitution!

About 36 years ago there went forth from our northern and southern homes hundreds of thousands of men to do battle for their country. All the poetry of war soon vanished, and left them nothing but the terrible prose. They waded knee deep in mud. They slept in snow banks. They marched till their cut feet tracked the earth. They were swindled out of their honest rations, and lived on meat not fit for a dog. They had jaws all fractured, and eyes extinguished, and limbs shot away. Thousands of them cried for water as they lay dying on the field the night after the battle, and got it not. They were homesick, and received no message from their loved ones. They died in barns, in bushes, in ditches, the buzzards of the summer heat the only attendants on their obsequies. No one but the Infinite God who knows everything, knows the ten thousandth part of the length, and breadth, and depth, and height of the anguish of the northern and southern battlefields. Why did these fathers leave their children and go to the front, and why did these young men, postponing the marriage day, start out into the probabilities of never coming back? For the country they died. Life for life. Blood for blood. Substitution!

But we need not go so far. What is that monument in Greenwood? It is to the doctors who fell in the southern epidemics. Why go? Were there not enough sick to be attended in these northern latitudes? Oh, yes; but the doctor puts a few medical books in his valise, and some phials of medicine, and leaves his patients in the hands of other physicians, and takes the rail train. Before he gets to the infected regions he passes crowded rail trains, regular and extra, taking the flying and affrighted populations. He arrives in a city over which a great horror is brooding. He goes from couch to couch, feeling of the pulse and studying symptoms, and prescribing day after day, night after night, until a fellow physician says: "Doctor, you had better go home and rest; you look miserable." But he can not rest while so many are suffering. On and on, until some morning finds him in a delirium, in which he talks of home and then rises, and says he must go and look after those patients. He is told to lie down; he fights his attendants until he falls back, and is weaker and weaker, and dies for people with whom he had no kinship, and far away from his own home, and is hastily put away in a stranger's tomb, and only the fifth part of a newspaper line tells us of his sacrifice—his name just mentioned among five. Yet he has touched the furthest height of sublimity in that three weeks of humanitarian service. He goes straight as an arrow to the bosom of Him who said: "I was sick and ye visited me." Life for life. Blood for blood. Substitution.

In the legal profession I see the same principle of self sacrifice. In 1846, Wm. Freeman, a pauperized and idiotic negro, was at Auburn, N. Y., on trial for murder. He had slain the entire Van Ness family. The foaming wrath of the community could be kept off him only by armed constables. Who would volunteer to be his counsel? No attorney wanted to sacrifice his popularity by such an ungrateful task. All were silent save one, a young lawyer with a feeble voice that could hardly be heard outside the bar, pale and thin and awkward. It was Wm. H. Seward, who saw that the prisoner was idiotic and irresponsible and ought to be put in an insane asylum rather than put to death, the heroic counsel uttering these beautiful words,

"I speak now in the hearing of a people who have prejudged prisoner and condemned me for pleading in his behalf. He is a convict, a pauper, a Negro, without intellect, sense or emotion. My child, with an affectionate smile, disarms my care-worn face of its frown whenever I cross my threshold. The beggar in the street obliges me to give because he says 'God bless you!' as I pass. My dog caresses me with fondness if I will but smile on him. My horse recognizes me when I fill his manger. What reward, what gratitude, what sympathy and affection can I expect here? There the prisoner sits. Look at him. Look at the assemblage around you. Listen to their ill-suppressed censures and their excited fears, and tell me where among my neighbors or my fellow men, where, even in his heart, I can expect to find a sentiment, a thought, not to say of reward or of acknowledgment, or even of recognition? Gentlemen, you may think of this evidence what you please, bring in what verdict you can, but I asservate before Heaven and you that, to the best of my knowledge and belief, the prisoner at the bar does not at this moment know why it is that my shadow falls on you instead of his own."

The gallows got its victim, but the post-mortem examination of the poor creature showed to all the surgeons and to all the world that the public was wrong, and that William H. Seward was right, and that hard, stony step of obloquy in the Auburn courtroom was the first step of the stairs of fame up which he went to the top, or to within one step of the top, that last denied him through the treachery of American politics. Nothing sublimer was ever seen in an American courtroom than Wm. H. Seward, without reward, standing between the fury of the populace and the loathsome imbecile. Substitution!

In the realm of the fine arts there was as remarkable an instance. A brilliant but hypercriticised painter, Joseph William Turner, was met by a volley of abuse from all the art galleries of Europe. His paintings, which have since won the applause of all civilized nations, "The Fifth Plague of Egypt," "Fishermen on a Lee Shore in Squally Weather," "Calais Pier," "The Sun Rising Through Mist," and "Dido Building Carthage," were the targets for critics to shoot at. In defense of this outrageously abused man a young author of 24 years, just one year out of college, came forth with his pen and wrote the ablest and most famous essays on art that the world ever saw, or ever will see—John Ruskin's "Modern Painters."

For 17 years the author fought the battles of the maltreated artist, and after, in poverty and broken-heartedness, the painter had died, and the public tried to undo their cruelties toward him by giving him a big funeral and burial in St. Paul's cathedral, his old-time friend took out of a tin box 19,000 pieces of paper containing drawings by the old painter, and through many weary and uncompensated months assorted and arranged them for public observation. People say John Ruskin in his old days is cross, misanthropic and morbid. Whatever he may do that he ought not to do, and whatever he may say that he ought not to say between now and his death, he will leave this world insolvent as far as it has any capacity to pay this author's pen for its chivalric and Christian defense of a poor painter's pencil.

What an exalting principle this which leads one to suffer for another! Nothing so kindles enthusiasm or awakens eloquence, or chimes poetic canto, or moves nations. The principle is the dominant one in our religion—Christ the martyr, Christ the Celestial Hero, Christ the Defender, Christ the Substitute. No new principle, for it was as old as human nature; but now on a grander, wider, higher, deeper, and more world-resounding scale! The shepherd boy as a champion for Israel with a sling toppled the giant of Philistine braggadocio in the dust, but here is another David who, for all the churches militant and triumphant, hurls the Goliath of perdition into defeat, the crash of his brazen armor like an explosion at Hell Gate. Abraham had at God's command agreed to sacrifice his son Isaac, and the same God just in time had provided a ram of the thicket as a substitute; but here is another Isaac bound to the altar, and no hand arrests the sharp edges of laceration and death, and the universe shivers and quakes and recoils and groans at the horror.

All good men have for centuries been trying to tell whom this Substitute was like, and every comparison inspired and uninspired, evangelistic, prophetic, apostolic and human, falls short, for Christ was the Great Unlike. Adam a type of Christ, because he came directly from God; Noah a type of Christ, because he delivered his own family from the deluge; Melchisedec a type of Christ, because he had no predecessor or successor; Joseph a type of Christ, because he was cast out by his brethren; Moses a type of Christ, because he was a deliverer from bondage; Samson a type of Christ, because of his strength to slay the lions and carry off the iron gates of impossibility; Solomon a type of Christ, in the affluence of his dominion; Jonah a type of Christ, because of the stormy sea in which he threw himself for the rescue of others; but put together Adam and Noah and Melchisedec and Joseph and Moses and Joshua and Samson and Solomon and Jonah, and they would not make a fragment of a Christ, a quarter of a Christ, the half of a Christ, or the millioneth part of a Christ. He forsook a throne and sat down on his own footstool. He came from the top of glory to the bottom of humiliation, and changed a circumference seraphic for a circumference diabolic. Once waited on by angels, now hissed at by brigands. From afar and high up He came down; past meteors swifter than they; by starry thrones, Himself more lustrous; past larger worlds to smaller worlds; downstairs of firmaments and through tree tops and into the camel's stall, to thrust his shoulder under our burdens and take the lances of pain through His vitals, and wrapped Himself in all the agonies which we deserve for our misdoings, and stood on the splitting decks of a foundering vessel, amid the drenching surf of the sea, and passed midnights on the mountains amid wild beasts of prey, and stood at the point where all earthly and infernal hostilities charged on Him at once with their keen sabers—our Substitute!

When did attorney ever endure so much for a pauper client, or physician for the patient in the lazaretto, or mother for the child in membranous croup, as Christ for us, as Christ for you, as Christ for me? Shall any man or woman or child in this audience who has ever suffered for another find it hard to understand this Christly suffering for us? Shall those whose sympathies have been wrung in behalf of the unfortunate have no appreciation of that one moment which was lifted out of all the ages of eternity as most conspicuous, when Christ gathered up all the sins of those to be redeemed under his one arm, and all his sorrows under his other arm, and said: "I will atone for these under my right arm, and will heal all those under my left arm. Strike me with all thy glittering shafts, O Eternal Justice! Roll over me with all Thy surges ye oceans of sorrow?" And the thunderbolts struck him from above, and the seas of trouble rolled up from beneath, hurricane after hurricane, and cyclone after cyclone, and then and there in the presence of Heaven and earth and hell, yea, all worlds witnessing, the price, the bitter price, the transcendent price, the awful price, the glorious price, the infinite price, the eternal price, was paid that sets us free.

THERE is a church in Kansas City—the Calvary Baptist—which was erected at a total cost of $168,000 and was dedicated without a dollar of debt on it.

BEGINNING BADLY.

The New Administration Ignoring the Currency Question.

It is to be noted that the proposition to confine the extra session of congress wholly to consideration of the proposed tariff bill is not received with the satisfaction the republican leaders at Washington seem to think it deserves. The New York chamber of commerce has thought it necessary to send an urgent memorial to President McKinley, requesting him to impress upon the minds of the lawmakers in extraordinary session assembled, that there is pressing need for prompt and decisive action on the currency question, and it is quite likely that other bodies of this character, as well as vast hosts of individual citizens, are of the same mind regarding the really serious matter demanding congressional attention just now. The interests that are asking for protective legislation can well afford to wait; the interests that hope for relief through currency reform are not so favorably situated.

It is simple nonsense to assert that early and exclusive consideration of the tariff question is due to the people because of the verdict of last November. No man of intelligence and fairness can honestly assert that the tariff reached the dignity of an issue in last year's campaign. It is true, of course, that the platforms of the parties outlined the parties' different policies on that question, but the electoral contention was based wholly on the currency question, for information on which the public clamored, and upon which, both in the press and upon the stump, the contest was fought. The voice of the people clearly was for currency reform, and as President McKinley said in his inaugural address, the voice of the people is "a power vastly more potential than the expression of any political platform."

Speaking in respect to this matter, the Washington Times says: "The president might assume that the protective tariff plank in the republican platform was the vital point in his candidacy and election, and therefore justified a strictly tariff session; but nobody will be convinced by such assumption. It is too notorious that the fight was made and the victory acquired in some way on the sole issue of the currency. A currency extra session then would have been the logical thing, but we shall be satisfied to see one open to all the questions that agitate and embarrass the nation, and which ought to be discussed and settled, if that be possible."

This is the proper course to pursue. If the republican leaders think that the tariff ought to be changed, well and good, but the currency should also have every attention; the earliest attention, in fact, because it was on the currency issue the verdict of 1896 was rendered. If prosperity shall fail to materialize, the republican party can with better grace, hold itself excusable for such failure, if it shall proceed to act in accordance with the unmistakable mandate of the country. To postpone consideration of a question whose settlement was most emphatically demanded by the people is to go wrong at the very outset.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

THE DINGLEY TARIFF.

Resembles the Injurious Measure of 1890.

What information has thus far been secured respecting the tariff bill to be reported by the members of the ways and means committee indicates that the new bill from Mr. Dingley's hands will be of somewhat the same pronounced protectionist order as the original McKinley bill of 1890. Certain articles which were not "free" in the former measure have been placed upon the free list. And some other articles are taxed more in accordance with the schedules of the Wilson law. But the tariff on several leading products, among them wool, has been raised to the limit.

From the outset of the campaign last year Mr. McKinley's champions demanded that the revenues of the country be increased through a new tariff bill; it is being declared that this is the chief need; that to do away with the annual deficit in the government's coffers was to restore prosperity. It is upon this policy that Mr. Dingley attacked the tariff question, and the result of his efforts is a measure proposing to raise certain schedules to a point where they will be not only "protective" of American products, but are likely to prohibit imports. The wool schedule of 1890 is practically restored, though in effect its restoration upon wool importation will be greater now than it was then.

The notable thing is that Mr. Dingley and his associates, having been invited to prepare a tariff for revenue and moderate protection, have turned out a bill which may possibly meet the test of practice just as did Mr. McKinley's celebrated measure. Under the McKinley law the revenues positively decreased; under the Wilson law, while inadequate, owing to the the miscalculation respecting the income tax, they have shown a tendency to rise. Mr. Dingley's bill seems to be a reversion to the principle which injured the country in 1890, and which was explicitly and emphatically repudiated at the polls.—Chicago Record (Ind.).

——President McKinley will have to take back what he said in his inaugural address relative to trusts, combines and monopolies if the differential sugar duty, as reported, is retained in the tariff bill. For this differential duty of one-eighth of one cent a pound on refined sugar is for the protection of a trust, and the president said that he and his party proposed to restrain trusts.—Nashville American.

——The republicans bought the elephant. The trouble is how to feed him. He is an obstreperous beast. The trumpetings of the enraged and hungry monster resound through the land, and the rattling of breaking chains are dreadful to listen to.—Illinois State Register.

M'KINLEY'S PLANS.

How the New Administration Goes to Work.

President McKinley's first proclamation declares that an extraordinary occasion requires the congress of the United States to convene in extra session, and sets the date for the assembling of the national lawmakers at March 15.

It is well known that Mr. McKinley considers the enactment of a new tariff bill embodying the protective principle as the most vital and urgent business to command the attention of congress. He is anxious that such a measure shall be in operation by the beginning of the next fiscal year, July 1.

The tariff bill which has occupied the attention of Chairman Dingley and his fellow members of the ways and means committee for over two months is nearly ready for submission to the new congress. The wool and lumber rates have given the committee the most trouble and the formulation of schedules which will satisfy all the interests involved will not be easy of accomplishment. The bill as it will leave Chairman Dingley's committee will be nearly if not quite as radical in its protective features as the McKinley law.

The republican leaders look for no serious delay in the house. They feel confident that no factious or stubborn opposition will prevent the realization of the executive's wishes as far as the lower house is concerned. With their large majority, the party managers on the republican side feel that they can out-maneuver the opposition if dilatory tactics are resorted to by the latter.

In the senate the signs are not as favorable for smooth sailing. Already the proposed action of the republican side in filling the vacancies in senate committees with their party colleagues has provoked the warning from the democrats, independent republicans and populists that they will unite in opposition, in which event the republicans would not be strong enough to control.

The new administration begins serenely, with scarcely a cloud on the horizon. But in these times of political independence, of strong personal aspirations and conflicting ambitions, there is no assurance that fair weather will prevail for long. The conditions now existent in the senate may precipitate such a tempest as that which sent democratic tariff reform on the rocks at the beginning of the last administration. The president proposes, the house may concur, but it is the senate, as we have seen, that disposes.—Detroit Free Press.

DUTY OF THE DEMOCRATS.

Republican Tariff Grabbing Should Be Checked.

It is a matter of congratulation to the country that the democrats in the United States senate have decided to subject the new tariff bill to a full and fair discussion.

Republican organs and leaders have been pleading for haste in the consideration of the bill. They have insisted that democrats in congress should stand aside without protest or debate and let the republicans shape legislation to their will. On the plea that the country needs revenue at once they have attempted to create the impression that delay for the purpose of debating the tariff bill would be disastrous and would be resented by the people.

The fact is that it is not delay that is so much feared by the republicans as a debate of the tariff schedules. They fear exposure of the grabs concealed under the alleged desire to secure necessary revenue. They fear to let the new bill be publicly compared with the McKinley bill and the object of the various items of the measure brought to light. It might be fatal to the pretense of opposition to trusts and monopolies which Mr. Hanna marked out as the course of the administration. It might show the reason for some of the large contributions to the republican campaign fund.

But in opposing the scheme to slip the tariff grabs through without exposure the democrats are fulfilling a high public duty. It is their duty to discuss the tariff bill, not for debate, but to show exactly what kind of legislation it is, to point out its defects and its grabs and to show how the plea of revenue needs is being used to cover the wholesale distribution of monopoly privileges.—St. Louis Republic.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——Some of the republicans are already afraid that the executive will be the disappointing power in our political system.—Tammany Times.

——The republican party will have control of the house, while the senate, apparently, will have control of the republican party.—Chicago Record (Ind.)

——The tariff bill which President McKinley signs will show how much sincerity there is in his declaration against the trusts.—St. Louis Republic.

——The front porch stage of Mr. McKinley's presidential career is a thing of the past. What he needs now most of all is a trap door.—Detroit Free Press.

——The republican tariff committee has finished preparations for the exploit by which the nation is to lift itself by its bootstraps.—Kansas City Times.

——In his inaugural address President McKinley suggested the appointment of a currency commission, indicating clearly that a feature of the administration's programme is currency omission.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——The high-sounding sentences in McKinley's inaugural address would have been much more convincing had Hanna been somewhere else. Vague declarations on the trust question read well in print, but the practical presence of the autocrat representative of plutocratic power furnishes an object lesson too palpable to escape public attention.—Tammany Times.

DISORDERED LIVER.

And Inflammatory Rheumatism in a Young Boy.

Mr. and Mrs. Howse Despaired of Their Boy's Life—He Was Compelled to Give Up His Studies.

From the Leader, Cleveland, Ohio.

Few boys withstand an illness of so serious a nature as that with which Fred Le Howse was a year ago afflicted. Fred is now fifteen years of age, and attends the public schools. His home is No. 30 Plymouth Place, Cleveland, Ohio, and he is now a picture of purple health and vigor. In the fall of 1895, however, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Howse, the former a well-known business man, whose office is in the Arcade, had almost despaired of saving his life. The lad became afflicted with inflammatory rheumatism which affected his entire body, and accompanying that painful ailment were several other serious disorders. When she was requested to describe her son's sickness and his recovery, Mrs. Howse said:

"It was in September, 1895, that Fred who was up to that time in delicate health, was attacked by inflammatory rheumatism. It was a very acute case for he was confined to his bed, and was unable to move even his arms or legs without bringing on excruciating pain.

"Aside from the rheumatism Fred's liver was in serious disorder, and he used to vomit frequently. He was also subject to fainting spells, and altogether he had a very serious sickness.

"We knew, of course, that though the rheumatism was exceedingly painful, it was not necessarily dangerous; the fainting spells and vomiting, however, alarmed us. Often when Fred fainted he would lay like one dead. His face would become ashen pale and it was difficult at such times to detect his heart beats. These spells caused Mr. Howse and myself much uneasiness about our boy's condition. We called in a doctor and he prescribed for Fred, but the lad did not seem to improve, so I purchased a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People in one of the down-town stores. Then for four months steadily Fred took them instead of the medicine prescribed by the doctor, and at the end of that period—it was about New Year's time—Fred was sufficiently improved to be able to go out.

"The improvement was slow at first, but it was sure. I had unbounded faith in the pills as is evidenced by our continued use of them. It was necessary for us to make Fred out of school on account of his illness, but now he has returned and can join in all the sports with his schoolmates, and his health is as good as we could wish. He has never been ill since, and it is pretty safe to predict that he will not be sick again for some time.

"Yes, I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to my friends," said Mrs. Howse, in reply to a question, "and many of them have used them since. I first read of the pills in the newspapers."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People are now given to the public as an unfailing blood builder and nerve restorer, curing all forms of weakness arising from a watery condition of the blood, or shattered nerves. The pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 (they are never sold in bulk or by the 100), by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y.

FAIR FIELD FOR WOMEN.

A Writer Tells What Her Feminine Co-Workers Should Have.

All women who are active in business or professions want is a fair field and no favor, says Margaret Sangster in Demorest's Magazine. We ask for nothing on the ground of sex. We are willing to compete with and work with men on their own ground and desire to be measured by the same standards. We demand no courtesy further than that which prevails between gentlemen; we expect no deference. In business life men and women are simply workers, and the more the element of sex is intruded the greater the interference with the success of women.

I know a young woman who went into a newspaper office on a purely business errand—to sell an article, in fact—and was indignant because the reporters, all of whom were busy writing, did not jump to their feet and offer her a seat. They were absorbed in their work, and most of them were probably unconscious of her presence. Perhaps 25 women enter the office of a great New York daily every day. You can easily see how it would interfere with business if the reporters should immediately stop writing and pay them the little attentions they are accustomed to in the drawing-room. The woman who expects these shows her ignorance of business; if they are necessary to her peace of mind she is out of place in the business world.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is often ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

The Faults and Follies of the Age

Are numerous, but of the latter none is more ridiculous than the promiscuous and random use of laxative pills and other drastic cathartics. These wrench, convulse and weaken both the stomach and the bowels. If Hostetter's Stomach Bitters be used instead of these no-remedies, the result is accomplished without pain and with great benefit to the bowels, the stomach and the liver. Use then for four months steadily Fred took them instead of the medicine prescribed by this remedy when constipation manifests itself, and thereby prevent it from becoming chronic.

There are people who would do great acts; but because they wait for great opportunities, life passes, and the acts of love are not done at all.

The report that the inauguration of a new sleeping car line from Chicago to Washington, by way of Cincinnati and Indianapolis, by the B. & O. and connecting lines, was part of a plan of the Receivers to abrogate the lease of the Central Ohio Railroad is untrue. The lease of the Central Ohio is to run for 30 years yet, and the road is too valuable as a part of the B. & O. system to be disposed of. The financial troubles, which are now in the courts, will be settled satisfactorily.

Bubbles or Medals.

"Best sarsaparillas." When you think of it how contradictory that term is. For there can be only one best in anything—one best sarsaparilla, as there is one highest mountain, one longest river, one deepest ocean. And that best sarsaparilla is——?.... There's the rub! You can measure mountain height and ocean depth, but how test sarsaparilla? You could if you were chemists. But then do you need to test it? The World's Fair Committee tested it,—and thoroughly. They went behind the label on the bottle. What did this sarsaparilla test result in? Every make of sarsaparilla shut out of the Fair, except Ayer's. So it was that Ayer's was the only sarsaparilla admitted to the World's Fair. The committee found it the best. They had no room for anything that was not the best. And as the best, Ayer's Sarsaparilla received the medal and awards due its merits. Remember the word "best" is a bubble any breath can blow; but there are pins to prick such bubbles. Those others are blowing more "best sarsaparilla" bubbles since the World's Fair pricked the old ones. True, but Ayer's Sarsaparilla has the medal. The pin that scratches the medal proves it gold. The pin that pricks the bubble proves it wind. We point to medals, not bubbles, when we say: The best sarsaparilla is Ayer's.

WOMEN AMONG FLOWERS.

School of Gardening for Girls in a Suburb of Berlin.

A London paper tells of a school of gardening for girls in a suburb of Berlin. It is a comparatively new venture, having been founded two years ago by a private lady. At present it seems to be succeeding. The pupils—15 in number—do the work entirely without extraneous aid, growing all sorts of vegetables, as well as apples, melons, grapes, pears and cucumbers, for which a ready sale is found. They wear a dark gray uniform, consisting of a bodice and a skirt of reasonable length, which, by an ingenious arrangement, can be made quite short for working in and let down at will. The girls beat all the men at a recent board of agriculture examination, and one of them has just obtained a post as gardener to a gentleman at a salary of $120 a year, with board and lodging. They are all fine specimens of healthy, vigorous young womanhood. Commenting on this, the lady says: "Perhaps we see the thin edge of the wedge! In the near future women may be eligible for head gardeners' posts at good salaries. And why not? We have finer taste than men and should be quite in our element designing exquisite pleasure grounds. As for the suitability of the employment, it may be urged that digging is not harder work than many of the athletic woman's recreations, nor is it a dirtier process than tramping through wet turnip fields after 'guns.'"

Constipation

Is a disease which afflicts over 75 per cent. of the American people. It is a dangerous disease because it not only poisons the blood but causes heaviness, oppression and dullness in the intellect. WISE ADVICE TO HUSBANDS.

Those Who Have Ailing Wives Will do Well to Accept It.

Do not wrangle and quarrel, and finally rush into the courts and try to get a separation from your faithful wife; but just stop a moment and think! Your wife, who was even-tempered and amiable, and all that was lovely when you married her, has changed. Now she is peevish, irritable, jealous, discontented and miserable—in a word, she has uterine disorder of some kind.

Law is not the remedy for this condition, she needs medical treatment; her uterine system is at fault.

My advice to you is, sit down and write a letter to that friend of women. Mrs. Pinkham, of Lynn, Mass., state fully and freely the whole case to her and she will honestly advise you what to do. Give your wife that chance, good man!

If you do not wish to write about your wife, bring her a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, watch its effects, you will soon see the beginning of the improvement; then get her another and keep it up until she is restored to you, the same lovely woman you married years ago.

Following we relate the circumstances of a case of this nature. Mrs. MELVA ROUTON, of Camby, Ind., says:

"I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and found it to be of great benefit to me. The doctors said I had womb trouble. I had the headache all the time, also a terrible backache, was nervous, cross and irritable. I looked so pale that people would ask me what was the matter. I suffered in this way for about four years, until one day about in despair my husband brought me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I commenced its use, and much to every one's surprise, it cured me. It has completely changed my disposition for the better also. Several of my neighbors, knowing what the Pinkham medicine has done for me, are taking it, and are much pleased with the result."

Miss Virginia Finch received quite a delightful surprise some days since by the arrival of a handsome new piano.

I tell you the candidates are beginning to grip the hands of the voters with a vim. F. A. Utz, T. G. Willis and M. C. Boys, when you want to bet on the election, just bet that all of the candidates will not be elected, and you will be sure to win. It is risky to bet on a Democrat with McKinley money.

Rev. T. J. Utz and family arrived home, last Saturday, and were heartily welcomed by their many friends. They had been absent several weeks.

We are in favor, if the primary election is changed, to set the time earlier, as so many have to go up Salt River, we deem it best on account of the high water, as the boat will be larger than usual, will not encounter the snags and sand bars which would be the case in low water.

Petersburg.

The ringing of the fire bells aroused our town about three o'clock Thusday morning, some early risers having discovered that the rear of the Smith building was on fire. The lower story of this building is occupied by J. P. Carter's new store, while the second story is a large hall, used for lodge purposes by the Masons, Odd-Fellows and Knights of Pythias. The bucket brigade soon responded to the alarm, and it was not long till what threatened to be a very ugly conflagration was extinguished. Small damage resulted to the building, probably $100. Some of the furniture belonging to the lodges was destroyed. It is believed that the fire was of an incendiary origin, as it was very evident that coal oil had been used to give it a start. The three lodges that occupy the second story have offered a joint reward of $175 for the apprehension and conviction of the incendiary. This reward will probably be increased $50 by the town and private citizens.

Charley Cox is somewhat under the weather.

Richard McWethy is laid up with something like pleurisy.

N. S. Walton received 15 nice cattle from Louisville, one day last week.

J. W. Berkshire, candidate for Sheriff, is at home after an extended tour of the county.

Last Thursday morning about three o'clock, a fire was discovered in Odd-Fellow's Hall. George McCool, whose residence, specially his bed room, faces the hall, was the first to give the alarm. Of course, only this is necessary to insure immediately, a large crowd of firemen, known as the bucket brigade, and they always go to work with enthusiasm. The room immediately under the hall is occupied by the new grocery, and in a very little while all the goods were carried out. Considerable damage was done to the upper part of the building, but nothing more except to the furniture of the different orders that meet there.

A crowd standing on the street Sunday morning, discovered a bird fluttering in one of the angles of the court house portico. Upon investigation an English sparrow was discovered, suspended by the neck, it having thrust its head through a crack, and when it attempted to extricate itself the feathers on the neck turned the wrong way and prevented its release. The bird was freed from its perilous condition, and those who witnessed its experience decided that its hanging was the result of an accident, and not an attempt at suicide as was at first supposed.

Last week W. E. Vest and the surveyor of Kenton county commenced the work of locating the boundary lines between Boone and Kenton counties. When it is located the surveyors will survey that portion of each farm that is cut from the main body of the tract so that each land owner along the line will know how many acres to list for taxation in each county. To do this will require considerable surveying.

The gift of $16,000,000 to American colleges last year is a form of luxury that nobody objects to.

A Brooklyn lady has invented an electrical device for lighting up door-plates and keyholes. The hilarious gentleman who finds himself assisted in this way will be apt to have an awakened conscience.

Societies organized to put down cruelty will be interested in the device of a Yankee fishing skipper who has added a refrigerating plant to his boat. The squirming fish are dropped into it from the nets, and in an instant are frozen stiff.

Daily newspapers are now published by students in ten colleges and universities in the United States—Yale, Harvard, Cornell, Princeton, Brown, Stanford, Tulane, University of Pennsylvania, University of Wisconsin and University of Michigan.

At last there appears to be an opportunity for down-trodden man to secure his rights. A Missouri bachelor senator proposes to fine every woman who refuses marriage. How much more sensible this is than fining bachelors for what they can't help.

The young woman who has sued her father-in-law for filling her mouth with plaster of paris to prevent her from talking has our sympathy. This is clearly outside the province of a father-in-law, and only under great provocation could it be excused in a husband.

Argentina requires every bachelor between the ages of 20 and 30 to pay a monthly tax, and imposes a fine of 500 piasters on any man or woman who is found guilty of constructive breach of promise. It is no myth that two can live cheaper than one in that country.

The idea that vice presidents do not become presidents is subject to exceptions. Eight of the 23 vice presidents of the United States were New Yorkers, and three of the number succeeded to the presidency, Van Buren by election, and Fillmore and Arthur by the death of the incumbents.

The Great Eastern, mammoth of steamships, was broken up as a freak. She was irreconcilably enormous. The White Star people now announce the Oceanic, 25 feet longer than the Great Eastern, and of over 17,000 tons. She will have three screws and probably develop nearly 50,000 horse power.

The Sons of the American Revolution are offering prizes in the public schools for compositions on revolutionary history, and some of the state societies of Colonial Dames give similar testimonials for high-school papers on local colonial subjects. It is a form of society work to be much commended.

Just at a time when photographers had almost abandoned hope of ever discovering a really practicable process of color photography a report comes to the state department in Washington from United States Consul General Mason at Frankfort giving a description (as far as the process may be divulged) of a means of doing this in a manner so simple and inexpensive as to be available to every photographer, thus opening a new era in reproductive art.

After a canvass of the leading nations of the world it is figured that the total number of copies of newspapers printed in a single year is 12,000,000,000. Some idea of what this enormous figure means may be had if one bears in mind that to print the world's newspapers a year requires 781,240 tons of paper, or 1,562,480,000 pounds, while it would take the fastest press in America 333 years to print a single year's edition, which would produce a stack of paper nearly 50 miles high.

The doctor's bill is a never-ending butt for ridicule. But it is well to remember what was said at a medical reunion in New York a few days ago, that in that city the physicians minister gratuitously to more than 500,000 persons. Another important idea was broached when one of the speakers said that the scientific physician stays epidemics and in so doing saves millions of money which is lost to trade and commerce by the business suspension caused by pestilence.

It is expected that more than 1,000 of the Waldenses will arrive in Nashville, Tenn., this spring from their former homes in Alpine valleys to join the colony that established itself 350 strong near Morganton in 1893. There are about 25,000 of the Waldenses who still live in the "Vales of the Vaudois." They occupy a tract of country about 18 miles square in Piedmont, Jefferson county. The leaders of the colonies in the Tennessee mountains say that by the year 1900 almost the entire population of the Waldensian villages in Europe will have immigrated to this country.

FITZSIMMONS WON.

At Last an American Fighter Forced to Lower His Colors.

Corbett, the Former Champion, Afraid a Good Fight, Was Knocked Out by Lanky Bob in the Fourteenth—Corbett is Still a Warm Favorite.

CARSON, Nev., March 18.—After two years of doubt and vexations postponements the heavyweight championship of the world was decided beyond cavil when Robert Fitzsimmons sent James J. Corbett helpless to his knees with a left-hand blow under the heart after 1 minute and 45 seconds in the fourteenth round of their battle in the arena in Carson Wednesday afternoon.

The great contest was won in the simplest manner and the knockout was the result of one unwary move on the part of Corbett. After the first minute of the fourteenth round had been spent in a few harmless clinches and counters, Fitz made a fake lead with his right for the jaw. It was a simple ruse, but it caught the Californian napping. Instead of keeping his body inclined forward and throwing back his head just a trifle, allowing the blow, which was of the very lightest kind, to slip by, Corbett contemptously bent his head and chest backward and thus protruded his abdomen. Fitzsimmons' small eyes flashed; and like lightning he saw and availed himself of his advantage. Drawing back his left he brought it up with terrible force, the forearm rigid and at right angles to the upper arm. With the full strength of his wonderful driving power brought into play, the Australian fairly ripped the blow up the pit of Corbett's stomach at a point just under the heart. Corbett was lifted clean off his feet and as he pitched forward Fitzsimmons shot his right up and around, catching Jim on the jaw and accelerating his downfall. Corbett sank on his left knee, and with his outstretched right, grasped the ropes for support. His left arm worked convulsively up and down while his face was twitching with an expression of the greatest agony. Referee Siler threw up his hands on the call of ten and left the ring. There were some cries of "foul" when the referee declared Corbett out, but they were unheeded by anybody as the battle was won fairly and squarely. The defeat nearly drove Corbett wild. When he was able to feel his feet, and his seconds had helped him to his corner, he broke away from them and rushed at Fitzsimmons, who had not left the ring. A scene of dreadful confusion ensued. The ring was crowded with an excited mob, but Corbett burst through that and struck at Fitz. The Australian kept his arms by his sides and with a great deal of generosity, made allowance for Corbett's half demented condition. Bob merely ducked under the blow, and when Corbett clinched with him and struck him a feeble blow on the ear, the champion only smiled. It was with great difficulty that Billy Brady and the seconds succeeded in quieting Corbett down and getting him back to the dressing room.

The fight was clean and speedy. It demonstrated two facts—that Corbett is the cleverest boxer of his weight in the world and that Fitzsimmons is able to hit him.

The battle, as predicted, was fought on purely scientific and almost new principles. Neither of the men took any advantage of the privileges allowed them under the London prize ring rules and there was very little hitting in clinches.

Corbett made no attempt to bring around his right on the breaking away, probably because Fitzsimmons held up his elbows too high. Jim's only effort in the way of a parting shot was a full right uppercut, which he brought around very clumsily, and failed to land by at least a foot every time he tried. He did get in one good uppercut in the fourth round, splitting Bob's upper lip and starting the blood in a thick stream. Several times the men clinched and parted with both hands up. Frequently Bob worked Jim into a corner and reached for him right and left with blows that would win any championship battle if they had landed. Fitzsimmons himself admits that Corbett hustled and sidestepped his way to safety in a manner which simply dazed the Australian.

"I never saw such a clever man in my life," said Fitz, Wednesday evening. "He got away from me time and again when I thought I had him dead to rights. I knew I could wear him out, so I kept coming right along until my opportunity arrived. He was weak in the last round and all his cleverness could not keep him out of that left punch under the heart. The only blow that really worried me was the one which split my lip. The others I never felt. He fought fair and hereafter he may have my respect if he continues to merit it."

Corbett's version of his own Waterloo did not vary greatly from Fitzsimmons'.

"I made a mistake in not keeping away," was the way the ex-champion put it. "Fitz I knew to be a terrific puncher, but I never calculated on his being able to reach me. If the sixth round had lasted ten seconds longer I would have landed him to a certainty. His nose was clogged with blood and his legs were wobbling. The gong sounded just as I was about to plug him with my right and end the battle. He recuperated wonderfully and I stayed away from him until I thought he was about ripe for another drubbing at short range. My neglect in not standing off when he tapped me on the cheek in the fourteenth round lost me the championship. That heart punch simply choked me up. I could not breathe or move for 15 seconds and it was several minutes before I realized that I had committed a breach of etiquette in trying to follow up my opponent after he put me out. I meant it when I said I would be his friend hereafter. He whipped me fair and square, but I don't think he is the best man yet and we will have another go if money can bring him into the ring."

All the notable sports of the continent are gathered together to see the battle of the century. John L. Sullivan appeared, resplendent in a shining silk tile.

At 11:59 a. m. Fitzsimmons and Corbett entered the ring, and the crowd cheered lustily. Fitzsimmons walked leisurely around and chatted pleasantly with all the people there and in close proximity to the ropes. Corbett did a little jig step in his corner. Both men looked in the finest kind of shape.

Madden introduced the referee, and the men proceeded to strip. Fitzsimmons looks light, but is a bunch of muscles. Corbett looks easily 15 pounds heavier, and his skin, as well as Fitzsimmons', looks like polished mahogany. The men then donned the gloves.

Time was called at 12:07. Fitzsimmons refused to shake hands with Corbett and the fight began.

Thirteenth round — Fitzsimmons lands right short on Corbett's ribs and a left on jaw. Jim finds Fitzsimmons with a good left. Fitzsimmons rushed Jim over to his corner, but does little damage. Corbett jabs Fitz lightly on the head, and he is back again with same on body. Corbett is sparring beautifully and ducking out of some very dangerous positions. Fitz lands his left straight and hard on face. Fitz tries that hard right swing, but it does no good. Jim's glove in Fitzsimmons' face. Madden pushes the button.

Fourteenth round—Corbett leads blocked. Jim lands that left jab again on Fitzsimmons' head. Fitzsimmons countered with a terrible right swing on Corbett's neck and has Corbett going back for a few moments. Fitzsimmons lands a terrible left hand jab on Corbett's stomach and Corbett goes to his knees with a frightful look of agony on his face. The time-keepers call the seconds one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten—but Corbett comes to his feet; he rushes to Fitzsimmons and endeavors to strike him. There is a terrible uproar. George Siler decides that Fitzsimmons wins. The blow that did the business landed over Corbett's heart and he collapsed.

The last round lasted just one minute and forty-five seconds.

One straight left punch from Bob Fitzsimmons delivered on the pit of Jim Corbett's stomach settled the pugilistic heavy weight championship of the world Wednesday afternoon after 14 rounds of fast and hard fighting. Corbett did not bear a mark on his entire body. He had drawn streams of blood from Fitzsimmons' split lips and nose but he could not place the blow he calculated on to win the fight.

CARSON, March 18.—Hawkins put Flaherty out with a left swing four seconds after bell tapped for first round.

Green defeated Smith in the twelfth round.

DIED IN AGONY.

Eighty People Lost at Sea—A French Steamer Wrecked.

NEW YORK, March 18.—The steamer Ville de St. Nazaire, belonging to the French line to the West Indies, sailed from New York on March 6 for Port-au-Prince, Mayagnez, etc., with 80 persons on board, and was lost at sea. She was a bark-rigged screw steamer of 2,600 tons register.

The schooner Hilda, that plies along the coast between Perth Amboy and Savannah, came into port with four of the saved, and bearing with her a story horrible even in the annals of the Atlantic ocean. She carried in her cabin four passengers whom she had picked up in a boat Monday, ten miles off shore.

There were three corpses in the boat. Nothing could be done but consign the dead to the sea. Capt. Berri and the three men were carefully looked after and partially brought back to life and reason. All that they could tell was that the Ville de St. Nazaire had somehow been wrecked or abandoned and that these four men were the survivors of those who had taken to the boats, of 37 souls. The others either starved or were frozen to death. Several of them were women.

In the haste to leave the vessel it was impossible to get provisions or water to last more than a day. Of the four boats only one had been heard from. It is believed that the other three were lost. The largest boat contained 28 persons. It had practically no provisions.

It was tossed about on the rough seas for seven days and nights, and for six of these days and nights the passengers were without food or drink.

Styles Defeats Needham.

NEW YORK, March 18.—At the Broadway Athletic club Wednesday Henry Styles, of this city, defeated Billy Needham, of San Francisco, Cal., in a ten-round bout.

M'KINLEY'S MESSAGE.

The Expenditures of the Government Are Greater Than the Receipts.

Congress is Asked to Promptly Correct the Existing Condition—Ample Revenue Must Be Supplied to Meet Ordinary Expenses.

WASHINGTON, March 16.—The president Monday sent the following message to congress:

To the Congress of the United States: Regretting the necessity which has required me to call you together, I feel that your assembling in extraordinary session is indispensable, because of the condition in which we find the revenues of the government. It is conceded that its current expenditures are greater than its receipts, and that such a condition has existed now for three years. With unlimited means at our command, we are presenting the remarkable spectacle of increasing our public debt by borrowing money to meet the ordinary demands of peace, and an economical and prudent administration of the government. An examination of the subject discloses this fact in every detail and leads inevitably to the conclusion that the condition of the revenue which allows it is unjustifiable and should be corrected.

We find by the reports of the secretary of the treasury that the revenues for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1892, from all sources, was $425,868,260.22, and the expenditures for all purposes were $415,953,806.06, leaving an excess of receipts over expenditures of $9,914,454.06. During the fiscal year $40,570,407.98 were paid upon the public debt, which had been reduced since March 1, 1889, $259,076,890, and the annual interest charge decreased $11,684,574.60. The receipts of the government from all sources during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1893, amounted to $461,716,561.94 and its expenditures of $2,341,671.19. Since that time the receipts of no fiscal year, and with but few exceptions of no month of any fiscal year, have exceeded the expenditures. The receipts of the government from all sources during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1894, were $372,802,-498.29, and its expenditures $442,605,758.27, leaving a deficit, the first since the resumption of specie payments, of $69,803,260.98.

Notwithstanding there was a decrease of $16,780,158.73 in the ordinary expenses of the government, as compared with the previous fiscal year, its income was still not sufficient to provide for its daily necessities, and the gold reserve in the treasury for the redemption of greenbacks was drawn upon to meet them. But this did not suffice, and the government then resorted to loans to replenish the reserve.

In February, 1894, $50,000,000 in bonds were issued, and in November following a second issue of $50,000,000 was deemed necessary. The sum of $117,171,750 was realized by the sale of these bonds, but the reserve was steadily decreased until on February 8, 1895, a third sale of $62,315,400 in bonds, for $65,116,-178.16, was announced to congress.

The receipts of the government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1895, were $390,372,-250.39, and the expenditures $433,678,426.48, showing a deficit of $43,306,176.09. A further loan of $100,000,000 was negotiated by the government in February, 1896, the sale netting $111,166,765 and swelling the aggregate of bonds issued within three years to $262,315,-400. For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1896, the revenues of the government from all sources amounted to $408,475,078.78, while its expenditures were $434,678,548.76, or an excess of expenditures over receipts of $26,203,245.70. In other words, the total receipts for the three fiscal years ending June 30, 1896, were insufficient by $117,-811,729.46 to meet the total expenditures. Nor has this condition since improved. For the first half of the present fiscal year, the receipts of the government, exclusive of postal revenues were $157,507,604.76 and its expenditures exclusive of postal service $193,410,000.22, or an excess of expenditures over receipts of $37,902,394.64.

In January of this year the receipts, exclusive of postal revenues, were $24,316,994.05, and its expenditures, exclusive of postal service, $30,259,388.29, a deficit of $5,942,394.24 for the month. In February of this year the receipts, exclusive of postal revenue, were $24,490,997.38, and the expenditures, exclusive of postal service, $28,796,056.66, a deficit of $4,305,059.28, or a total deficiency of $188,051,580.44, for the three years and eight months ending March 1, 1897. Not only are we without a surplus in the treasury, but with an increase in the public debt there has been a corresponding increase in the annual interest charge—from $22,893,-881.20 in 1892, the lowest of any year since 1862, to $34,887,297.60 in 1896, or an increase of $11,-493,414.40.

It will be urged that even if the revenues of the government had been sufficient to meet all its ordinary expenses during the past three years the gold reserve would still have been insufficient to meet the demands upon it, and that bonds would necessarily have been issued for its repletion. Be this as it may, it is clearly manifest, without denying or affirming the correctness of such a conclusion, that the debt would have been decreased in at least the amount of the deficiency and business confidence immeasurably strengthened throughout the country.

Congress should promptly correct the existing condition. Ample revenue must be supplied, not only for the ordinary expenses of the government, but for the prompt payment of liberal pensions and the liquidation of the principal and interest of the public debt. In raising revenues, duties should be so levied upon foreign products as to encourage the home market so far as possible, to our own producers; to revive and increase manufactures; to relieve and encourage agriculture; to increase our foreign and domestic commerce; to aid and develop mining and building, and to render to labor in every field of useful occupation the liberal wages and adequate rewards to which skill and industry are justly entitled. The necessity of the passage of a tariff law which shall provide ample revenue, need not be further urged. The imperative demand of the hour is the prompt enactment of such a measure and to this object earnestly recommend that congress shall make every endeavor. Before other business is transacted let us first provide sufficient revenue to faithfully administer the government, without the contracting of further debt or the continued disturbance of our finances.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

Executive Mansion, March 15, 1897.

THEY DIE TOGETHER.

Gov. Bradley Refuses to Interfere in Alonzo Walling's Case and He Hangs March 20.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 16.—Walling hangs March 20. The governor made the following endorsement on the Walling petition:

"The jury were the judges of the creditability of the witnesses and the verdict should not be disturbed unless flagrantly against the evidence. The circuit court and the court of appeals reviewed the case and declined to interfere. I see no reason why I should commute the sentence and therefore decline so to do.

"WILLIAM O. BRADLEY."

Fighting on the Servian Frontier.

VIENNA, March 18.—A band of Albanians from Uskubb, a town some 25 miles south of the Servian frontier, have pillaged six villages in the vicinity of Uskubb and burned three others. In their attacks on the villages they shot 24 persons. Later the Albanians crossed the Servian frontier with the evident intention of continuing their marauding in Servia territory. They were, however, met by a force of Servian gendarmes and repulsed after a struggle, in which a number of them were killed or wounded. The Turkish government has sent troops to deal with the predatory Albanians.

Largest in the World.

The Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Ct., are the largest manufacturers of repeating rifles, repeating shot guns, single shot rifles and ammunition in the world. From a small beginning this famous company has gained the enviable position it now holds through the unequalled excellence of its guns and ammunition. Winchester goods are far superior in every way to any others on the market, as all who have used them will testify. In most parts of the world to shoot means to use a Winchester, and to use a Winchester gun means to shoot Winchester ammunition, for the best results are always obtained by the combination of Winchester guns and Winchester ammunition. The company sends a large illustrated catalogue free upon request.

Lands in Central Wisconsin

Are now as desirable as any in the market. The lands particularly in the central and northern part of Wisconsin are being rapidly taken up by actual settlers.

The most salable are the timber and meadow lands now ranging in price from $6.00 to $12.00 per acre. For a home or for investment no luckier chance in the West has ever before been offered. No better farming land exists anywhere. No greater results can be obtained anywhere. Schools and churches abound. Near by markets for all farm products. Wisconsin is one of the banner states of the West. For further information address or call upon W. E. Powell, General Immigration Agent, 410 Old Colony Building, Chicago, Ill.

BOTH EXECUTED.

Pearl Bryan's Murderers Pay the Penalty on the Scaffold.

Jackson Made an Unsuccessful Attempt to Save Walling—Neither Made Statements on the Scaffold—Scott Jackson's Body Burned to Ashes.

NEWPORT, Ky., March 22.—Jackson and Walling were at 7:35 Saturday morning ordered to prepare themselves for the last. Rev. Lee prayed with them and they sang three hymns: "The Sweet By and By," Walling's favorite; "God Be With You Till We Meet Again," and "The Half Was Never Told."

Then the preacher offered another prayer.

Scott Jackson, as he Appeared During His Trial.

Turnkey Fred Maurer, of the Covington jail, sent a message to Walling from Miss Emma Roberts. It was: "Die game."

He said that he would. Walling then made a touching appeal that he be permitted to see Mayor Rhinock.

Although it was against the rules, the request was granted. Mayor Rhinock was sent for, and they had a long talk. Rev. Mr. Lee offered then another prayer.

Just before the death procession was to move Walling made another frantic appeal for his life.

He asked Mayor Rhinock if he would sign a dispatch to the governor, and for Mayor Biltz to do the same.

"Give me a reprieve of 30 days," he exclaimed, pitifully. The mayor explained that the sheriff had a right to postpone the execution.

"If you have anything to say tell him," was the advice.

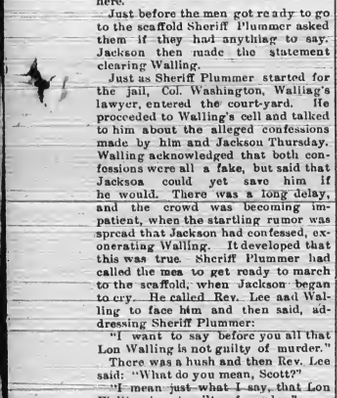
Walling answered: "Jackson can save my life if he will, but he won't. I have tried in every way to get him to do it, but he will not. He ought to save me."

"Now, Lon," said Mayor Rhinock, "I want you to tell me where the head is."

"Mayor Rhinock, before God, whom I shall now meet, I do not know."

At 11:20 a. m. a dispatch was received from Frankfort saying that the governor had again refused to respite Walling. This is his final decision.

Scott Jackson made a statement at 9 o'clock, clearing Walling. A dispatch was sent to the governor at Frankfort. There was the greatest excitement here.



Just before the men got ready to go to the scaffold Sheriff Plummer asked them if they had anything to say. Jackson then made the statement clearing Walling.

Just as Sheriff Plummer started for the jail, Col. Washington, Walling's lawyer, entered the court-yard. He proceeded to Walling's cell and talked to him about the alleged confessions made by him and Jackson Thursday. Walling acknowledged that both confessions were all a fake, but said that Jackson could yet save him if he would. There was a long delay, and the crowd was becoming impatient, when the startling rumor was spread that Jackson had confessed, exonerating Walling. It developed that this was true. Sheriff Plummer had called the men to get ready to march to the scaffold, when Jackson began to cry. He called Rev. Lee and Walling to face him and then said, addressing Sheriff Plummer:

"I want to say before you all that Lon Walling is not guilty of murder."

There was a hush and then Rev. Lee said: "What do you mean, Scott?"

"I mean just what I say, that Lon Walling is not guilty of murder."

Alonzo Walling, as he Appeared When Arrested.

At this point Jackson broke down and could proceed no further. Sheriff Plummer was hastily summoned and was given the facts as above. He at once dispatched a messager for Col. Washington, and the attorney soon reached the jail. He was told of the state of affairs, and advised Sheriff Plummer to at once wire Gov. Bradley.

Jackson also sent the following:

NEWPORT JAIL, Ky., March 20.

"Gov. BRADLEY, Frankfort, Ky.:

"Walling is not guilty of murder. I am. He should not be punished.

SCOTT JACKSON."

A few minutes later Walling dropped a note from the window to a reporter, reading, "Jackson has freed me."

After coming from the consultation with the prisoners Judge Helm said that he told Jackson that he must hang, and if he allowed Walling to hang with him he would have to answer to his Maker for a double crime. He also impressed Jackson with the fact that if he went before his Maker with a lie on his lips he would also be doing a double wrong. He then gave Jackson five minutes in which to make up his mind, leaving him unattended by the death watch. At the expiration of the time Jackson said that he could not say that Walling was innocent. This settled the fate of both prisoners, and the time for the execution was fixed at 11:30 o'clock.

It was also learned that Gov. Bradley talked over long distance telephone with Plummer, who told him Jackson declined to make any further statement than that Walling was not guilty of murder, and declined to go into details. "Then hang them both," was the word which the governor gave as he dropped the telephone.

The procession of death was formed at 11:33 o'clock. Sheriff Plummer, Rev. Mr. Lee, Deputy Moore and Death Watch Truesdell walked with Jackson. Deputy Hindman and Deputy Miller were with Walling.

Sheriff Plummer ascended the scaffold with the prisoners and said "Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling, I am here for the purpose of carrying out the mandate of the governor of this state, as expressed in the documents which were read to you last Tuesday. Have you, Scott Jackson, anything to say?"

Jackson replied: "Only this. I am not guilty of the crime for which I am now asked to pay the penalty of my life." He answered calmly, deliberately and without a quaver or tremor.

Plummer then asked: "Have you, Alonzo Walling?"

"Only that you are about to take the life of an innocent man. Before God I am not guilty of the crime with which I am charged."

A lump arose in Walling's throat as he replied.

Rev. Mr. Lee sang a hyma and read from the Word of God, after which he offered the following prayer:

"Our Father, our Saviour and our God, as the sun is shining brightly over our heads, oh, may the Son of Righteousness shine into the souls of Scott Jackson and Alonzo Walling and save them. God help them to trust in thee and thee alone, for life and salvation. Oh, Lord, thou who didst say to the one who died on the cross with thee, 'To-day shalt be with me in paradise,' Oh, admit these boys into thy love, into thy mercy, we ask and rely upon the blood of Jesus Christ to do this. Amen."

"Good by, Scott; good by, Alonzo," the preacher said with a broken voice and with tears in his eyes. "I ask you now, in the name of God, right now to engage in secret prayer for the saving of your souls in a special plea to God."

It was noticed during the singing and the reading of the Bible that while both men were thoroughly composed Jackson's eyes were red. He seemed to be retaining the tears. Walling was perfectly cool, and looked about the crowd with stolid indifference.

The preparation for the work of death was hurried. The ropes were placed about the men's neck's at 11:37 o'clock. Their feet and hands were next strapped. Their hands were fastened behind their backs.

Pearl Bryan, the Murdered Girl.

The black caps were adjusted at 11:39 o'clock. The drops fell at 11:40 o'clock.

The execution was one of the most sucessful on record, although neither of the men's necks were broken.

When Sheriff Plummer sprang the traps, both men struggled considerably. Walling showed the greatest signs of suffering. The crowds pressed to the scaffold, and the police were busy keeping spectators back at a sufficient distance to prevent their interfering with the executioners.

Walling was pronounced dead at 11:55 o'clock. A doctor stood with his hand over the struggling man's heart until the last pulsation had died away.

Jackson was pronounced dead at 12:01 o'clock. Three moments later the bodies were removed from the scaffold.

Rev. Lee, after the noose had been adjusted, walked down three or four steps.

After the drop had been sprung he left the steps and began weeping.

After Walling's body had been cut down it was taken charge of by Undertaker Cunningham, of Bellevue. It was placed in a temporary coffin and taken out of the Southgate street entrance of the jail and placed in Cunningham's wagon, which was in waiting. It was then driven to Bellevue, where it will be embalmed.

There is hardly any doubt but that Walling strangled to death. It is believed that Jackson's neck was broken.

Dr. Tarvin states that both men lived about 12 minutes and that both died of strangulation.

Walling's last words as he left the jail were as he pointed to Jackson: "That man can save me if he will. I die an innocent man. I was not there when she was killed."

Walling's body was braught to the undertaker's at 12:45 p. m. It was sent to Hamilton at 9:15 o'clock Saturday night, in the coffin seat by Clint Walling. The body was embalmed Saturday afternoon.

CINCINNATI, March 22.—Scott Jackson's body was incinerated Saturday night at the Clifton crematory. All that remains of the misguided young man—a handful of white bone ashes, purified by fire—Sunday was given into the keeping of the heart-broken, but still loving mother.

In the early arrangement of the details concerning the judicial execution of the two prisoners, the plan of incineration was proposed to the mother of Scott Jackson. She received the suggestion favorably, and after mature deliberation decided to act upon it.

The fact that various concerns, seeking to gratify the morbid curiosity of the public mind, had offered Mrs. Jackson enormous sums of money for the dead body of her only son and the fear of ghouls and grave robbery, influenced the mother in her decision to resort to cremation as not only a sensible but the only safe means for the disposal of her erring son's dead body.

TO SECEDE.

The Cleveland Wheel Club Will Leave the League of American Wheelmen.

CLEVELAND, O., March 22.—It is practically settled that the Cleveland wheel club will at the next annual meeting secede from the League of American Wheelmen. This action will be taken as the result of agitation that has been going on for two years because of a throw down the club received at a state meet. At the last meeting the members favorable to secession were defeated, but they claim that at the next meeting they will carry the day by a large majority. It will, however, be decided that those members of the club who desire to do so, need not individually give up their membership in the national organization, but the club, as a club, will cease to be connected with the L. A. W. President Collister said Sunday night that the best interests of the club calls for the change.

TO FIGHT RINGS

Is the Purpose of the "Knights of the Golden Rule."

LEXINGTON, Ky., March 22.—According to an anonymous communication the Kaights of the Golden Rule have "quietly organized in each precinct of the city, and will reach every hill and valley of the country before November. Their purpose is to break up rings and put men in office who will obey the maxim of their title, the golden rule, regardless of politics. They recognize no party lines."

Investigation shows that there are quite a number of these "Kaights," for the most part reliable, substantial citizens, but the identity of the originators and financier backers has not been disclosed.

Infant Runaway.

KOKOMO, Ind., March 22.—Earl Loop, eight-year-old son of Henry and Mrs. Loop, whose disappearance from home in 1889 is well remembered and who was supposed to be dead, surprised everybody by returning home safe and sound. He has been all over the west, in Mexico and South America. He claims to be champion infant runaway boy of America. He left home when eight years old and is now 16. A few weeks ago he had a dream in which he saw his father lying a corpse and it haunted him until he started home. On arriving here he found the dream true. His father died four months ago, about the time Earl say's he had the dream. The boy will remain at home and care for his widowed mother the remainder of her life.

Claims John Colburn as His Accomplice.

COLUMBUS, O., March 22.—J. W. Colbert and John Splan, chief of police and detective respectively, of Indianapolis, brought Charles Spears, a murderer, here Sunday to enable him if possible to identify his accomplice in the crime whom he said he knew when he was a convict here. His name and residence Spears had forgotten. With the assistance of convict acquaintances Spears decided that his accomplice was John Colburn, who served a term for burglary, from Cincinnati, and was released several years ago. It is not known where Colburn is now.

A Blizzard in Western Nebraska.

OMAHA, Neb., March 22.—Reports received here Sunday night from Western Nebraska indicate a very severe snow storm prevalent. The blizzard extends from Schuyler, 60 miles west of here, to North Platte, in the further end of the state. A dispatch from Benkelman a Sunday night says ten inches of snow has fallen, and the wind is blowing it into great drifts. The loss of stock will be very large. Nearly a foot of snow has fallen at Central City.

Destructive Fire at Ottumwa, Ia.

OTTUMWA, Ia., March 22.—A fire which started at 5:30 Sunday afternoon in Cullen's dry goods store had destroyed a quarter of a million dollars' worth of property at 9 o'clock and was still having its own way. A gale is blowing and there seems to be little hope of saving any of the big brick business block in which Cullen's store is located.

Heirs to an English Fortune.

RICHMOND, Ind., March 23.—Rev. W. G. Whitaker, of Nebraska, has been in the vicinity for the past two months looking after the claims of the Whitaker family, who are said to be heirs to an immense English fortune. At New Paris, O., just east of this city, there are a number of the heirs. Rev. Mr. Whitaker will leave next month for England to press the immense claim.

Assaulted an Officer.

SALEM, O., March 22.—Early Saturday morning Joe Marshall assaulted Police Officer Irey. Marshall met the officer on his beat and struck him on the head with some concealed weapon, cutting an ugly gash and knocking him down. He then kicked him in the side, caving in several ribs. Marshall was arrested and jailed.

THE number of policemen on duty at the white house has been reduced from 24 to 4.

THE LEVEES

At Many Points on the Mississippi River Give Away.

Disheartening Reports Comes From the Iowa and Dakota Valleys—Government Relief Boats Busy—There Are Rumors of Great Loss of Life.

ST. LOUIS, March 23.—Latest advices from the flooded country south of here state that the situation is hourly growing worse. Walls of water have been down the levees at many points and riparian dwellers are at the mercy of the flood. Out of 88 telegrams received here from the lower river but one records a cessation of the rise. This was from Cairo, Ill., but the bulk of the flood there is due to the breaks in the levees in Kentucky and Missouri. The most disheartening intelligence comes from the Iowa and Dakota valleys of the Missouri river. Warm weather has turned the snow to water, which is added to the already overflowed streams. Work on levee barriers is practically abandoned in Arkansas and Mississippi as useless. At Chicot, a barge load of sand bags was dumped into a levee break. They only served to widen the breach. This is the experience at other points and work on the outer barriers is abandoned and every hand is turned to save the inner levees. A dispatch from Ripley, Tenn., says there is a strong current through Reel Foot lake and the old river bayou.

It is feared the river will seek its old channel through the lake, which was shifted 20 miles west by the earthquake of 1812. South of Helena, Ark., the levee breaks are most numerous and the damage greatest. The five steamers employed by the Memphis relief were reinforced Sunday by two government boats towing barges. These steamers pick their way through tree tops. The C. B. Bryan, steamed due west from Memphis, 35 miles and returned with 130 people and a barge load of live stock. At Austin, Miss., 40 miles below Memphis, but two houses remain on dry land. From these 24 people were rescued. Relief work is now occupying more attention than endeavors to fight the flood with levees. A relief committee was organized in Little Rock, Ark., Saturday. Memphis continues to save life and property unaided by the governor of Arkansas.

Saturday night Maj. Ambury, in charge of the river and harbor work at St. Louis, received a telegram from Secretary Alger, directing that help and rescue measures be at once undertaken by the United States fleet in this vicinity.

Gov. Jones, of Arkansas, Saturday sent a company of militia to guard the levees of Desha county, as there were fears that Mississippi men might try to save their own homes by cutting the levee on the Arkansas side.

Unconfirmed rumors of great loss of life are met at every hand, but the death-roll can not even be approximated till the flood subsides. The situation is indeed gloomy, with small prospect of immediate betterment.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 22.—The levees for a stretch of 15 miles from and south of Osceola, Ark., went all to pieces Sunday.

Sensational reports were current Sunday night of a series of big cutoffs on the Missouri above Sioux City. The stream is said to have shortened itself a score of miles and to have swallowed up much farm property. The Little Sioux, near Oto and Correctionville, is rising and driving settlers to the hills.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., March 22.—The Floyd river, which had a considerable part of Sioux City under water last week, is again within its banks. The Big Sioux, however, is still rising and causing untold damage between Sioux City and Sioux Falls. Other streams in this locality are about stationary. Bridges are out everywhere and little damage is left to be done even should there be another rise.

DES MOINES, Ia., March 22.—The Dos Moines river has risen three feet since Saturday night, and is now over sixteen feet above normal and still rising. About three hundred families have been driven out of their homes by the water, but aside from this the damage thus far is not heavy.

Engineer and Fireman Killed.

CHICAGO, March 22.—The engine drawing the New York & Boston special, on the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern railway, which left here at 10:30 o'clock Sunday morning, blew up in the Englewood yards, a half hour's run from the city and the fireman and engineer were instantly killed.

Charles Scott Released.

HAVANA, March 22.—Charles Scott, the American, who was arrested on February 9, on the charge of having Cuban postage stamps his possession, was released Sunday, the court having dismissed the charge against him. He will leave for the United States on the steamer sailing Wednesday.

Trouble at Tokat.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 22.—It is officially reported that there has been serious trouble at Tokat, 78 miles northwest of Sivas, in Asia Minor. Beyond stating that 15 Armenians and three Mussulmans were killed, no details of the affair are given.

Prince George for Governor of Crete.

ATHENS, March 22.—It is stated here that the powers are seriously discussing the question of nominating Prince George of Greece for governor of Crete.

Ten People Fatally Injured.

LAWRENCE, Mass., March 22.—The Glea-son building and Central hotel are on fire. At 4 a. m. Monday 10 people had been taken into hospitals injured fatally. It is feared that some lives are lost. Persons jumped from windows on fifth stories of both buildings and are fatally injured.

Bollingbroke Club's Offer.

LONDON, March 22.—The Bolingbroke club will offer a purse of £3,500 for a fight between Fitzsimmons and Charlie Mitchell and will allow Fitzsimmons £100 for expenses.

UNDER WATER.

Heavy Rains in the South and West Swell the Rivers—In Some Localities the Flood is the Highest Ever Known.

GAVIN, Ark., March 20.—The water rose two inches Thursday night. For many miles the country is flooded, and the water is up to the Iron Mountain tracks. Hundreds of section hands are striving to keep the water back with dirt bags. At every station the Negroes are gathering, waiting to be taken away. Many get on the trains are carried without pay. Superintendent Roe, of the Iron Mountain, has given orders that none are to be put off.

The list of fatalities is enormous and probably will never be known.

Mr. Middleston, who arrived here with his family from near Rosebud island, four miles from Arkansas City, reports the death of a woman and five children Wednesday night. The water came up, and though the unfortunates climbed on the tables and chairs, the flood finally reached over their heads.

William Cartwright and William Cox, working on Judge Hodge's farm at Rosebud island, lost their lives Thursday. They were in a dugout starting for stock and the current upset the dugout. Cartwright could not swim and Cox tried to save him, but both perished.

Jake Carter lost his life at Gavin Thursday night. His dugout was upset by rushing water. His companion, Sterling, was saved by climbing a tree.

Amanda Chapman, an old colored woman, just arrived from below, reported the death of six persons she could not name. A father tried to save his wife and children in a dugout, and it tipped, drowning three. The water killed others in the house.

Charles Burlkey was drowned while trying to save his hogs Thursday night near Gavin. He could not manage a dugout.

A mountain of household goods is piled up at every railroad station. Whites and Negroes beg for help from every train crew. Houses along the road are submerged to the roofs, and cattle standing in the fields with only their heads above water. Many corpses of hogs and cows are washed up by the water.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 20.—The Cumberland river Friday morning registered 46 feet on the gauge. Rain fell all day Thursday, all Thursday night and continued to come down incessantly Friday. There is prospects of the greatest flood on record. The highest recorded water in the Cumberland river was in 1883, when it registered 55 feet, 9 higher than now. The outlook now is that this mark will be exceeded. Much damage has already resulted from the overflow in the lowland, and more will follow when the flood increases.

HELENA, Ark., March 20.—The river at noon was within two inches of the highest water on record here. The sun shone Friday after one of the most prolonged heavy and downpours of rain for years, and conditions are more hopeful. The observer here says that from the looks of things above he would not attempt to estimate, and urges all the people in the lowlands to move out at once to higher ground.

The levees in front and north of the city are having the attention of the citizens of the city and the levee boards and the levees are being raised and strenghtened. Heavy rains Friday and Thursday nights have partly inundated a portion of the northern auburbs of the city, but the water is now fast receding.

A report from Modoc Friday morning is to the effect that the levees are still holding, although a report Thursday night at 10 o'clock was that they could not be held until this time. A reporter who returned from there Friday morning says that, with the recent recruits to the already large army or levee workers, there is now a bright chance of holding the levees, but if the water continues to rise it does not look possible, as there is but 12 to 18 inches clear levee in a great many places. The levees on the Mississippi side appear to be in good shape, and as they have plenty of men and money and so comparatively new levees to look after, it is hardly possible there will be a break on that side.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., March 20.—The heavy rainfall during the day and part of the evening caused the Menomimee river to overflow its banks Friday night at Wauwatosa, a suburb some miles distant from Milwaukee, and from a point at Fortieth street and Mount Veraon avenue the whole neighborhood for a distance of ten blocks is submerged. The water at midnight was from 8 to 9 feet deep and is still risiag. About 150 small houses are located in the district, but up to midnight no fatalities have been reported. The work of rescuing the victims of the flood has been going on all evening, the veterans of the National Soldiers' Home helping with small boats. At 9 o'clock the Milwaukee police department was asked for help and a boat was sent out. The life saving station on Jones island was notified, and two boats were taken out to the scene of the flood by the fire tug Foley. The rescue work was going on all night.

CHEROKEE, Ia., March 20.—The Little Sioux river is higher than at any time since the floods of 1891. All railroad communication except over the Illinois Central south of Oaawa is cut off. Three large bridges are washed out between here and Sioux Falls, S. D.

The Prisoner Must Hang.

MERIDEN, Miss., March 20.—Dr. W. H. Lipscomb, who has been on trial for several days at De Kalb, Miss., charged with murdering Chas. T. Stewart, in order to obtain the insurance on Stewart's life, was Thursday sentenced to be hanged on Wednesday, May 13.

Price for Autonomy.

LONDON, March 20.—A news agency here asserts that Lord Salisbury has suggested to the powers that each contribute the sum of £10,000 toward sounding an autonomous regime in Crete.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, March 15.—SENATE.—President McKinley's proclamation convening the 55th congress in extraordinary session was read immediately after the senate assembled at noon Monday. Though the session lasted until 3:25 p. m., when adjournment was taken until Tuesday, the greater portion of the time was spent in recess waiting for the house to organize. Mr. W. A. Harris, populist, appeared and took the oath of office as senator from Kansas to succeed Mr. Peffer, but the credentials of Henry W. Corbett, appointed by the governor of Oregon to succeed Mr. Mitchell (the legislature having failed to elect) were referred to the committee on privileges and elections.

HOUSE.—The house of representatives was fully organized Monday by the election of speaker, clerk, doorkeeper, sergeant-at-arms and other officers. It consists of 357 members, of whom 206 served in the last congress and 151 in former congresses, while 121 have never served in congress before. Politically classified, there are 206 republicans, 122 democrats, and 29 fusion silverites and populists. There were 341 of them present Monday. The vote on the election of speaker was: Reed (R., Me.), 206; Bailey (D., Tex.), 114; Bell (Pop., Tex.), 21; Newlands (Silverite, Nev.), 1. The clerks and officers of the last house were re-elected for the present congress. The rules of the last house, until further orders, were adopted. The president's message was read. Mr. Dingley introduced his new tariff bill, and the house adjourned until Thursday.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—SENATE.—In the senate Tuesday one pension bill was passed and several hundred bills, public and private, were introduced and referred. There was hardly one of them which had not been on the calendar or on committee files in the last congress. When Mr. Allison (rep., Ia.), in gentle remonstrance against the passage of one pension bill (for a month to the widow of Brig. Gen. John B. Stevenson), suggesting that its passage Tuesday would not expedite its becoming a law, and when Mr. Vest (D., Mo.) expressed his belief that it would, and that he could get action on it in the house, the Iowa senator looked incredulous and expressed his great admiration for the Missouri senator's confidence. In connection with the extension of civil service rules to the construction of public works in charge of the engineer department of the army, Mr. Frye (R., Me.) referred to those rules as "an awful outrage" and as "absolutely absurd and stupid." The senate spent two hours Tuesday in the discussion of the credentials of Mr. James A. Henderson, appointed by the governor of Florida, to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration, on the 4th of March, of the term of Senator Call. An effort was made by Mr. Pasco (D., Fla.) to have Mr. Henderson admitted to the seat, but it was resisted on both sides of the chamber as inconsistent with the action of the senate a few years ago in refusing seats to appointees of the governors of Wyoming, Montana and Washington. Finally Mr. Pasco yielded and permitted the matter to be referred, as were the like cases this session from Kentucky and Oregon, to the committee on privileges and elections. At 3:30 p. m. the senate adjourned till Thursday.

WASHINGTON, March 19.—SENATE.—The senate was in open session Thursday for about an hour, during which time a large number of bills which had been on the calendar or in the files of the committees of the last and prior congresses were reintroduced, and the bill for the adjustment of the government debts of the Pacific railroad companies was reported and placed on the calendar. A resolution was agreed to instructing the committee on foreign relations to inquire and report whether the Danish West India islands of St. Croix, St. John and St. Thomas can now be purchased, and whether, if not purchased by the United States, they would probably be sold to some other power. After an executive session the senate at 2:15 p. m., adjourned until Friday.

HOUSE.—The house of representatives met Thursday pursuant to adjournment on Monday, but the committee on ways and means being not ready to report the tariff bill, on motion by Mr. Henderson (rep., Ia.) immediately after the reading of the journal, it adjourned until Friday.

WASHINGTON, March 20.—SENATE.—When the senate met Friday the number of bills that had been introduced during the days of the extraordinary session was 768; when it adjourned—after about one hours' public session—the number had run up to 964. Almost all of them had been reintroduced in the last and former congresses. The senate went into executive session on the arbitration treaty at 12:50, and at 4 p. m., adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE.—Mr. Dingley (rep., Me.) returned the tariff bill with a recommendation that it do pass which with the accompanying report was placed on the calendar. Consent was given for the minority to file their views Monday. Mr. Dalzell (rep., Pa.) presented a resolution from the committee on rules providing for the consideration of the tariff bill. It called for general debate beginning on Monday next and including Thursday, the 25th inst., from 10 a. m. until 11 p. m., with a recess from 5 to 8. Then consideration under the ten minute rule, the bill to be open for amendment until 3 p. m., Wednesday the 31st, when the voting on the amendments and bills shall begin. Mr. Henderson (rep., Ia.) reported a resolution providing for the passage of the appropriation bills which failed at the last session of congress, in this order—the sundry civil, agricultural, agricultural and Indian. Adjourned until Saturday.

WASHINGTON, March 22.—SENATE.—Not in session.

HOUSE.—The house Saturday pushed through the two remaining "left-over" appropriation bills, according to Friday's schedule, the agricultural bill carrying $3,383,902 and the Indian carrying $7,602,925. The sentiment of the house against the provision in the Indian bill opening to entry, under the mining laws, the lands in the Uncompahgre reservation in Utah, caused the Hopkins amendment to disappear, which was inserted in the bill by the senate, was so intense that it was stricken out by unanimous consent. After the appropriation bills were passed a resolution for extra mileage and stationery for this session of congress was adopted.

Dam Destroyed by Ice.

MILWAUKEE, March 22.—The ice in the Milwaukee river north of the city broke up Sunday and destroyed a dam at Thiensville, 18 miles north of here, as well as 75 feet of a foot bridge connected with the dam at North avenue, in this city. The total damage is estimated at $1,000.

A $100,000 Fire at Peoria, Ill.

PEORIA, Ill., March 22.—Fire at 8 o'clock Sunday morning destroyed the Conegystky building, in the heart of the business center, and entailed an aggregate loss of $100,000, upon which there is an insurance of about $55,000.

Two Boys Drowned.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., March 20.—A small skiff in which were three boys was capsized Friday in the Tennessee river near Chattanooga island, opposite the city. Two of the boys, John Davis, aged 16, and James Edwards, 15 years old, were unable to swim in the swift current and were drowned.

Secretary Bliss' Private Secretary.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—Secretary of the interior Bliss to-day appointed Forest Raynor, of Brooklyn, N. Y., private secretary, vice Price Lane. Mr. Raynor was the campaign secretary to Secretary Bliss and was formerly connected with the Fourth national bank, of New York.

Permitted to Reopen Its Doors.

WASHINGTON, March 17.—The First national bank of Sioux City, Ia., which suspended payment November 19, 1896, and was placed temporarily in the hands of a receiver, has been permitted to reopen its doors for business.

CROP AND STOCK.

Fisher Tarr's crop of 20 hhds of tobacco averaged $12 75.—Paris Kentuckian.

On account of continued frigid weather, the loss of live stock in the Northwest will be heavy.

Terry Perkins, jr., has a sow that gave birth to 20 pigs, which are still living.—Georgetown Times.

In Boyle county, Wyatt Hughes sold to Robinson & Nevins 125 barrels of corn at $1 45, in the crib.

Stock papers say there is a great demand for calves and that prices are surely and steadily advancing.

R. Cobb, jr., of Boyle county bought in Ohio, a fine Short Horn bull calf of the hornless variety for $300.

Clem Shelton, of Boyle county, has a cow twenty-seven years old, which has had twenty-five heifer calves.

In Boyle county, Anderson & Spillman bought of Robert G. Evans 225 acres of growing wheat at 65 cents.

Fifteen one-gallon jugs containing moonshine whisky were unearthed by revenue officers about 8 miles from Vanceburg.

The probability is that a smaller acreage than usual will be planted in tobacco. A smaller crop and better cultivation will be the correct thing.

Only the best corn that it is possible to procure should be planted. It is better and cheaper to buy good seed than to plant inferior of your own raising.

A seven-year-old hog brought $3,600 at auction at Taylor, Ill. This is said to be the highest price ever paid at a public sale for a single animal of the hog tribe.

Kentucky's Commissioner of Agriculture reports that wheat has passed through the winter with a condition averaging 88 per cent., and that peaches are badly damaged or killed.

Not as many lambs have been engaged as is usually the case by this time. Most of those sold for early delivery have been engaged at five cents, but the owners of first-class lambs are not willing to take that and speculators do not feel safe in offering more.—Winchester Democrat.

Vine Grove Correspondent Elizabethtown News: Scientists tell us that the average life of a hen is ten to sixteen years, but Charles W. Howard who lives within a few miles of this place, has a hen that to his own personal knowledge is twenty-one years old, she being a chick in 1876.

The poultry interest continues to grow in Hardin county and the chickens and eggs bring more money than the wheat crop. Some hundred or more of our farmers' wives raise none but pure breed chickens, and their profits are much more satisfactory than those who still put up with the mongrel barn yard fowl.—Elizabethtown News.

Harvey Moore sold his crop of lambs to Walter & Co., for 5 cents for first delivery and 4 cents for second. Many farmers are selling at the same prices but we have heard of some sales at 4½ cents for the second delivery. W. M. Proctor, near Burgin, has sold about 100 barrels of corn to different parties to feed cattle at $1,50 in the crib. A number of sales of hogs are reported at 3 cents.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

New Hampshire is to have the honor of furnishing the horses for President McKinley. The famous Blue Grass region of Kentucky usually furnishes the horses for the White House stable but the Granite State is ahead this time. The horse dealers who made the deal refuse to state from what farm the horses came. They are medium colored bays with dark stripes down their backs; they are young and have decidedly fine style, are clean limbed and high headed.

It has been many a long day since any such activity has been witnessed in the Western cattle trade as is now to be noted throughout the entire range country from Texas to Manitoba, says the Breeders' Gazette. The advance in values of stock cattle has been rapid and continuous, amounting in some cases to $5 per head since last fall, and large profits have been made. Sales of calves and yearlings at $15 to $25 are reported and rangemen are in the market for large numbers of bulls.

For the past few years the breeders of mules have done but little business in the breeding line and, in consequence thereof, mules are getting scarce. Where many raisers from colts in times past carried from 50 to 100 each year, some are now carrying none and others not a fourth as many as formerly. In this line of breeding, when it is discovered there is a shortage, it cannot be supplied in one season, but it takes about three years to supply the deficiency, and he who has good ones to sell at the right times will certainly reap a just reward. The past fall those who have been in the habit of buying colts had some difficulty in finding the right kind and in the quantities desired. One large raiser reported that he traveled over three mule raising States and did not then find what he was searching for. The moral to this is: Breed good mares to good jacks and get good colts and you will find a good market.

With spring comes usual talk among tobacco men as to decreasing the acreage. That question was discussed at some length hereabouts last year, and the Local urged the good results to follow, but the discussion seems to have resulted in no practical good. When the plan of decreasing the acreage of tobacco seems about to be tried every man who intends to raise the weed reasons with himself about it in this wise: "Well, my neighbors and friends are going to cut down their crops this year, and there will be much less supply, consequently better prices will be realized. I'll just take advantage of the situation and put in a few acres more than I had in last year, so I'll have more than the rest and will thus make more money." As every tobacco raiser feels this way and acts accordingly it will be seen that agitation of the decrease question is but folly and a mere waste of words. It is a condition that will never be realized.—Henry County Local.

Newt Trusty killed Miles Barnett over a dog and got a life sentence for it, in Breathitt county.

Auditor Stone's report shows that on March 1 the total deficit in the State's general expenditure and school funds was $320,623,53.

Squire L. M. Wilford, of Barlow, caught a catfish in the backwater, weighing a little less than 140 pounds, says the Bardwell Star.

Williamsburg has a female baseball nine, but we are not informed whether they wear the regular suits or not, says the Stanford Journal.

James Burton, of Silver Creek, Madison county, died last week. He was over seven feet tall and a coffin had to be ordered for him from Louisville.

Turnpike raiders near Stanford warned President Fandevere, of the Lancaster pike, that he would be hanged if he restored a gate which had been destroyed.

Miss Nettie Hoskins, the young lady of Stanton, Powell county, who so mysteriously disappeared from home last week, has been found at the home of a relative, James Bibbs, in Montgomery county.

George Dunn was sentenced to the penitentiary for life at Lancaster on the charge of burglary. He had been sentenced twice before for the same offense, and this time under the habitual criminal law, received the life sentence.

At Hopkinsville, Walter Merritt, a gambler, was drunk and boisterous, Policeman Henry Layne asked him to go home. Merritt shot and killed Layne, and was himself shot and killed by Policemen Mack Cravens and James Moormao.

If Dr. Hunter is defeated, what will happen? Four Republicans will learn that each had been promised the Marshalship of Kentucky. Mayor George Todd will not be Postmaster of Louisville. Governor Bradley will be the happiest Republican in the United States. Mark Hanna will get on a rip roaring jag, and ask for an indefinate leave of absence from the Senate of the Nation. Jerry Porter will be shelved forever. The two detectives who have had their eyeon two Democrats since Sunday last will be out of a job. These two Sluths were spoiled when they first sat down in the office. There will be weeping and 'nashing of teeth on the Square. Senator Rummins will get what he wants for the part he played. Senator Hissen will still be waiting for the apology that never came. He will be out in the cold with nothing but his collar to shelter him. Hon. Tut Burnam will be playing 'pedy' with St. John Boyle for pointers.—Western Argus.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[News]

Ever tenth man in this part of the county is a candidate for some government position.

Measles has visited Owenton in earnest. There are now 25 or 30 cases in town and half a dozen new cases are reported every day.

On last Sunday some of Owenton's bad boys went to Isaac Wolf's rented premises, the Fair Grounds, near town, where Mr. Wolf had 150 fat hogs, and deliberately cut the tails of many of them off.

The Republican leaders of Owen held quite a little meeting the other day and talked over matters in general and the offices in particular. It was agreed that J. P. Hutcheson ought to have the postoffice at this place. A full ticket of the county offices will be put out in June.

FROM CARROLL COUNTY.

[News]

D. B. Garriott shipped to Petersburg, Monday, for J. J. Ferris, fourteen fine gilts and three Plymouth Rock cockerels.

It is reported that the toll gates on the Prestonville and Locust pike will be put up again in order to collect enough money to repair damages done by the high water.

On Wednesday of last week a dog belonging to Ben Walters, between here and Ghent, showed signs of hydrophobia, and came near biting several members of the family. The dog was killed, but not before he had visited the premises of Andrew Ray, Lute Trinkler and Lish Martin, whose dogs it bit, and also a horse belonging to John Smith, which he was riding along the road. The dog was bitten on Dec. 20th last, as were also a number of other dogs in the neighborhood.

It is said that the appropriation bills which failed at the close of the last session of Congress, will be rushed through the extra session by means of special orders, possibly without the formality of referring to committees, etc. If this is done it will insure Carrollton her $25,000 Government building; also the funds to prosecute work on the Kentucky river, which will make Carrollton the feeding point of about 235 miles of navigation on that river.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1897. NO. 23.

THE Democratic members of the legislature have had the laugh on the Republican members this winter.

A TEXAS bank went to the wall last week, and caused a run on a neighbor bank that came very near swamping it.

THE Republicans are fighting among themselves at Frankfort harder this winter than the Democrats fought each other last winter.

A WAR among the European powers would enliven business in this country, as the United States would be the principal source of supplies.

WHAT right has an Ohio man to come over to Kentucky to engineer the election of a United States Senator? The Republicans denounce the unwarranted interference on the part of Hanna and his agent, Taylor.

MOODY, the evangelist, is now preaching in Louisville. The field he has chosen is one in which a vast amount of work is needed, and it is to be hoped that the city will be greatly benefitted by his sojourn within its limits.

RESIGNATIONS of fourth class postmasters are being received at Washington at the rate of five a day, but that is entirely too slow to suit those who are standing out in the cold awaiting an appointment to attach p. m. to their names.

MR. THORN'S bill requiring that all executions shall hereafter take place in the penitentiary ought to pass. It would reduce the expense of executions, and cease, to some extent, the development of a morbid curiosity on the part of many people.

WHEN a Republican Congressman visits any of the departments at Washington for pie for some of his constituents, he is informed, in nearly every instance, that civil service prevails, and he retraces his steps dreading to meet his disappointed constituent.

CIVIL SERVICE is a splendid thing for those who are in Government employ and want to stay, but it is a very annoying obstacle to those who are out and want to get in, and unless President McKinley takes the back track, he will have the army of pie hunters denouncing him.

JOHN SULLIVAN is feeling his keeping again, and has concluded that he would like to try conclusions with Corbett once more. It is claimed that he can get all the backing he wants, and it will be a pity if the two pugilists are not afforded an opportunity to hammer the life out of each other.

THAT knife that Senator Foraker carries up his sleeve has dripping from its keen-point the blood of another victim, ex-Congressman Bellamy Storer, of Cincinnati, whom President McKinley had slated for Assistant Secretary of State. Storer was not acceptible to the Senator and he bluffed the President out of appointing him. Foraker will not under any circumstances, abandon his policy of rule or ruin.

JOHN D. WHITE, better known as the crested jayhawker from the mountains, went down to Frankfort, last week, wearing his fighting clothes, and shortly after he struck the town, he attempted to smash a brother Republican in the face, but a duck a la Corbett avoided the blow, when friends rushed in and put a stop to the hostilities. Other Republicans engaged in similar recreation in the Capital last week.

ELLISTON and Daugherty continue to misrepresent Grant county in the matter of a United States Senator. So far as Daugherty is concerned he is superanuated and will be, naturally, of no more benefit to the public, but Elliston is a man of ability and capable of being a very useful man to his people, but having ignored their wishes in an instance of such great importance they can not rely on him in the future.

LAST winter the Republicans were all engaged saying nice things about the Democratic bolters, who prevented Blackburn's reelection as United States Senator, but this winter they have the traitors in their camp and the abuse they are showering upon them is without limit. At this writing it looks very much like Dr. Hunter will be unable to connect with the office of Senator, and that as a result the Republican party will be left in a very badly demoralized condition.

THE tariff bill got some very hard knocks in the House last week, and the outside pressure was so heavy that Mr. Dingley was compelled to announce that the Waysand Means committee had decided to strike out that clause of the bill placing a duty on books and scientific instruments for educational institutions and add an amendment putting those articles on the free list, as they are at present. The Democrats of the House made the most of the almost numberless unjust and uncalled for discriminations made by the bill in favor of the few against the many, but the speech made by Representative McMillin naturally received the most attention, both from the opponents and friends of the bill, because of his position as the ranking Democrat of the Ways and Means committee, and because on account of his long experience in tariff matters he had been requested by Representative Bailey to make the leading speech against the bill. In replying to Representative Dingley's statement that the increased burden of taxation imposed by the bill on luxuries, Mr. McMillin said: "The claim that the increased burden is on luxuries is not sustained by the facts. Are coarse shawls and knit goods luxuries? Are wool hats and overcoats luxuries? Are knives and forks in this urbane age luxuries? And I beg with all deference to ask whether in the State of Maine a clean shirt has become such a rarity that it is classed with the luxuries? I ask him when, among Americans, the sugar that sweeten tea and coffee became a luxury—when trace chains became a luxury to farmers? Sir, not only is the bill itself higher, but the different schedules average above those of the McKinley bill." Mr. McMillin also called attention to the fact that foreign governments are already preparing to resist this new assault upon commerce. He also remined the Republicans that a purchased verdict, such as they obtained last November, would not be allowed to stand.

IN this issue appears the announcement of Hon. M. D. Gray as a Democratic candidate for reelection to the office of Commonwealth's Attorney in this Judicial District. Mr. Gray's first term, which was limited to five years by the new constitution, expires on the first day of January, 1898. Mr. Gray is about the strongest jury lawyer in this district, and is well equipped for the duties of the office which he has filled for four years in a manner very satisfactory to the people of the district. He is one of those Democrats who is always found in the thickest of the fight in which his party is engaged—responding to all the demands made upon him. As a prosecutor he is fair and honorable, and takes no advantage of the unfortunate by which to advance his reputation as a public prosecutor. He now asks the people to endorse him by a reelection, and the indications are they will do so without opposition.

WHETHER the administration will make any use of the decision of the Supreme Court sustaining the Sherman anti-trust law and including railway pools and agreements within its scope, is a question that many men in Congress are much interested in. It was maintained by Mr. Cleveland's two Attorney Generals, Olney and Harmon, that nothing could be done under the Sherman law because of the decisions of courts against its validity. Now that the highest court has reversed those decisions and declared the law valid, there is an opportunity for this administration to clear itself of the charge of being too friendly to the trusts, by vigorously prosecuting them, if it isn't afraid to do so.

CANDIDATES for county offices must bear in mind that next Monday is the day for weighing in. It takes seven dollars to entitle a candidate's name to a place on the ballot, and that amount must be paid to D. E. Castleman, Chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee next Monday. The statement in last week's issue that the 15th of April was the day upon which to pay the assessment was incorrect. See call in another column.

Gov. Bradley is said to be very sick of official life. The Republicans of Kentucky are very sick of Gov. Bradley.—Louisville Commercial.

Take your medicine, it is of your own prescribing.

THE General Assembly will accomplish no legislation until after a Senator is elected.

The Court of Appeals has decided the bank tax cases, affirming some and reversing others, deciding that they were subject to county and municipal taxation. This overrules the decision of last June.

The decision of the court affects every bank in the State. It reverses the previous decision, which held that banks should be taxed under the Hewitt law, and subjects all banks to the ad valorem tax.

The facts in the case in brief are that in 1885 the Legislature passed what is known as the Hewitt bill, according to which the banks were to pay to the State 75 cents on every $100, and were not to be subject to any other taxation.

This was accepted by the banks, and a contract entered into. But in 1893 the Legislature did away with the Hewitt law, and passed a bill taxing the banks according to the ad valorem system without deducting debts. The banks contested this, and they were sustained in their objection by the Court of Appeals, which held that the Hewitt law should hold.

But a number of banks had been formed since 1885, when the Hewitt law was passed, and these were subjected to the ad valorem tax. They sued, holding that they should not be taxed on other conditions than the old banks. These are the cases that were decided.

The Court of Appeals has been changed since 1893, and the decision not only holds that the new banks shall be taxed on the ad valorem system, but also reverses the previous decision, holding that the Hewitt law is unconstitutional and that all banks shall pay an ad valorem tax.

Whether the banks can be made to pay back taxes will have to be decided by further litigation. In all probability the cases will be further contested and will be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

They are moving in Nebraska to have a law enacted making it a misdemeanor for any Nebraskan to attend college outside of the State. Judging from the campaign made last year by Nebraska's favorite son it is nearer the true Nebraska idea to make it a felony for any one to attend college at all."

The above is another example of the hatred that the turn-coat C. J. entertains for those who advocate political opinions contrary to those which it has, of late years, tried to compel Democrats to accept.

DR. HUNTER has made a hard fight for election as United States Senator, but has not come nearer than two votes of succeeding, which is said to be as close as he will ever come to an election. It looks now like the Republicans, with a clear majority on joint ballot, will be unable to elect a Senator. Hunter's friends, who have been so faithful to him, are declaring that no other person shall be elected, and it is within their power to make good their declaration.

HARPER'S WEEKLY was an earnest advocate of the election of McKinley to the presidency because of his supposed position on the money question, which it says was the issue upon which he was elected; but since the President has abandoned the money question and brought the tariff to the front, that journal is subjecting him to an unmerciful criticism—such as only the ability commanded by its editorial column can dispense for the benefit of the deserving.

IF the Republicans cannot find a member of the party in Kentucky who is fit for United States Senator, how would it do for them to elect Secretary of State Sam Taylor, of Ohio, who has been in Frankfort for several days trying to elect Dr. Hunter? His election would be entirely satisfactory to Mr. Hanna.

THE presence of Samuel Taylor, of Ohio, at Frankfort, has had no soothing effect on the hostile Republican factions. It is known that he is Mark Hanna's agent, present in the interest of Dr. Hunter, and the anti-Hunter forces regard him as a political trespasser.

A BILL has been introduced in the legislature providing for the reduction of the salary of Circuit Judge from $3,000 to $2,400 per annum. Some of the incumbents claim that they can not make a living out of the office at that salary.

THE Republicans held indignation meetings in several counties last week, the purpose of which was to bring their representatives into line for Dr. Hunter, the nominee for Senator.

The Spaniards have begun capturing Rivera, Masceo's successor.

Pith of the Press.

Washington Post: It will be observed that Joe Manley is not managing anything for Tom Reed at the present time.

Hopkinsville New Era: It is feared that the news that Gov. Bradley intends to resign the governorship is almost too good to be true.

Georgetown News: If Bradley should become Blackburn's successor in the Senate, it is hardly probable that he would ask to be given a seat close to Hanna.

Bowling Green Times: Gov Bradley's resignation, if tendered, can be traced to a "blow over the heart," dealt by the Burkaville pugilist, better known as Dr. Hunter.

Paducah Register: Don't take too much stock in that story of the Bradley resignation. There have been men who have resigned offices, but they are not Republicans.

Lexington Argonaut: Hunter, backed last winter on his merits, was altogether a different candidate from the Hunter of '97, backed by the henchmen of the President.

Washington Post: The Ohio man who furnished the Bible upon which President McKinley took the oath is beginning to wonder when the man in the White House is going to reciprocate.

Shelbyville Sentinel: The soundmoney Democrats in the Legislature will best serve the cause in which they are enlisted by keeping hands off in the senatorial fight and voting for a candidate of their own party.

Richmond Climax: Last winter Gov. Bradley had to call out the militia to protect the Republicans from the Democrats. It looks now as if the militia will have to be called out to protect the Republicans from each other.

Covington Commonwealth: If Gov. Bradley resigns before his term expires it will only be for the reason that the grub Governor has had the wings of a senatorial butterfly clamped into his shoulders by the extra session.

Covington Commonwealth: Dear Hissem and Rummons: It I said anything last winter when I didn't think I needed you I withdraw it this winter when the need for you beats all hollow the Texan's need for his gun. Yours, Godfrey.

New York Herald: Mark Hanna has shown early in his career that he has the material of which Senators are made. His first speech in the Senate was in support of a demand for his share of the "congressional pork" in the shape of a public building in Cleveland.

Hopkinsville New Era: Those legislators who got mad because Dr. Hunter accused them last winter of having sold out in the senatorial race are very easily satisfied, as it is reported that Dr. Hunter's apology has pacified them. Dr. Hunter, under the present circumstances, would make any sort of an apology in order to secure one more vote in the senatorial fight now in progress, and an apology under such circumstances counts for little.

DR. HUNTER had a long distance telephone put in his headquarters at Frankfort so he could talk direct with boss Hanna at Washington.

DON'T take any stock in the report that Gov. Bradley contemplates resigning. Republicans never resign and seldom die.

THE fight between the Bradley and Hunter factions of the Republican party is as bitter as it is possible to make it without resorting to powder and ball.

CROP AND STOCK.

Fisher Tarr's crop of 20 hhds of tobacco averaged $12 75.—Paris Kentuckian.

On account of continued frigid weather, the loss of live stock in the Northwest will be heavy.

Terry Perkins, jr., has a sow that gave birth to 20 pigs, which are still living.—Georgetown Times.

In Boyle county, Wyatt Hughes sold to Robinson & Nevins 125 barrels of corn at $1 45, in the crib.

Stock papers say there is a great demand for calves and that prices are surely and steadily advancing.

R. Cobb, jr., of Boyle county bought in Ohio, a fine Short Horn bull calf of the hornless variety for $300.

Clem Shelton, of Boyle county, has a cow twenty-seven years old, which has had twenty-five heifer calves.

In Boyle county, Anderson & Spillman bought of Robert G. Evans 225 acres of growing wheat at 65 cents.

Fifteen one-gallon jugs containing moonshine whisky were unearthed by revenue officers about 8 miles from Vanceburg.

The probability is that a smaller acreage than usual will be planted in tobacco. A smaller crop and better cultivation will be the correct thing.

Only the best corn that it is possible to procure should be planted. It is better and cheaper to buy good seed than to plant inferior of your own raising.

A seven-year-old hog brought $3,600 at auction at Taylor, Ill. This is said to be the highest price ever paid at a public sale for a single animal of the hog tribe.

Kentucky's Commissioner of Agriculture reports that wheat has passed through the winter with a condition averaging 88 per cent., and that peaches are badly damaged or killed.

Not as many lambs have been engaged as is usually the case by this time. Most of those sold for early delivery have been engaged at five cents, but the owners of first-class lambs are not willing to take that and speculators do not feel safe in offering more.—Winchester Democrat.

Vine Grove Correspondent Elizabethtown News: Scientists tell us that the average life of a hen is ten to sixteen years, but Charles W. Howard who lives within a few miles of this place, has a hen that to his own personal knowledge is twenty-one years old, she being a chick in 1876.

The poultry interest continues to grow in Hardin county and the chickens and eggs bring more money than the wheat crop. Some hundred or more of our farmers' wives raise none but pure breed chickens, and their profits are much more satisfactory than those who still put up with the mongrel barn yard fowl.—Elizabethtown News.

Harvey Moore sold his crop of lambs to Walter & Co., for 5 cents for first delivery and 4 cents for second. Many farmers are selling at the same prices but we have heard of some sales at 4½ cents for the second delivery. W. M. Proctor, near Burgin, has sold about 100 barrels of corn to different parties to feed cattle at $1,50 in the crib. A number of sales of hogs are reported at 3 cents.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

New Hampshire is to have the honor of furnishing the horses for President McKinley. The famous Blue Grass region of Kentucky usually furnishes the horses for the White House stable but the Granite State is ahead this time. The horse dealers who made the deal refuse to state from what farm the horses came. They are medium colored bays with dark stripes down their backs; they are young and have decidedly fine style, are clean limbed and high headed.

It has been many a long day since any such activity has been witnessed in the Western cattle trade as is now to be noted throughout the entire range country from Texas to Manitoba, says the Breeders' Gazette. The advance in values of stock cattle has been rapid and continuous, amounting in some cases to $8 per head since last fall, and large profits have been made. Sales of calves and yearlings at $15 to $25 are reported and rangemen are in the market for large numbers of bulls.

For the past few years the breeders of mules have done but little business in the breeding line and, in consequence thereof, mules are getting scarce. Where many raisers from colts in times past carried from 50 to 100 each year, some are now carrying none and others not a fourth as many as formerly. In this line of breeding, when it is discovered there is a shortage, it cannot be supplied in one season, but it takes about three years to supply the deficiency, and he who has good ones to sell at the right times will certainly reap a just reward. The past fall those who have been in the habit of buying colts had some difficulty in finding the right kind and in the quantities desired. One large raiser reported that he traveled over three mule raising States and did not then find what he was searching for. The moral to this is: Breed good mares to good jacks and get good colts and you will find a good market.

With spring comes usual talk among tobacco men as to decreasing the acreage. That question was discussed at some length hereabouts last year, and the Local urged the good results to follow, but the discussion seems to have resulted in no practical good. When the plan of decreasing the acreage of tobacco seems about to be tried every man who intends to raise the weed reasons with himself about it in this wise: "Well, my neighbors and friends are going to cut down their crops this year, and there will be much less supply, consequently better prices will be realized. I'll just take advantage of the situation and put in a few acres more than I had in last year, so I'll have more than the rest and will thus make more money." As every tobacco raiser feels this way and acts accordingly it will be seen that agitation of the decrease question is but folly and a mere waste of words. It is a condition that will never be realized.—Henry County Local.

STATE NEWS.

John Blain, for eighteen years County Clerk of Lincoln, is dead.

Shade Johnson, aged ninety years, of Leslie county, married a girl of fifteen summers.

George W. Stone, of Leitchfield was appointed State Inspector of Mines by Gov. Bradley.

Newt Trusty killed Miles Barnett over a dog and got a life sentence for it, in Breathitt county.

Auditor Stone's report shows that on March 1 the total deficit in the State's general expenditure and school funds was $320,623,53.

Squire L. M. Wilford, of Barlow, caught a catfish in the backwater, weighing a little less than 140 pounds, says the Bardwell Star.

Williamsburg has a female baseball nine, but we are not informed whether they wear the regular suits or not, says the Stanford Journal.

James Burton, of Silver Creek, Madison county, died last week. He was over seven feet tall and a coffin had to be ordered for him from Louisville.

Turnpike raiders near Stanford warned President Fandevere, of the Lancaster pike, that he would be hanged if he restored a gate which had been destroyed.

Miss Nettie Hoskins, the young lady of Stanton, Powell county, who so mysteriously disappeared from home last week, has been found at the home of a relative, James Bibbs, in Montgomery county.

George Dunn was sentenced to the penitentiary for life at Lancaster on the charge of burglary. He had been sentenced twice before for the same offense, and this time under the habitual criminal law, received the life sentence.

At Hopkinsville, Walter Merritt, a gambler, was drunk and boisterous, Policeman Henry Layne asked him to go home. Merritt shot and killed Layne, and was himself shot and killed by Policemen Mack Cravens and James Moormao.

If Dr. Hunter is defeated, what will happen? Four Republicans will learn that each had been promised the Marshalship of Kentucky. Mayor George Todd will not be Postmaster of Louisville. Governor Bradley will be the happiest Republican in the United States. Mark Hanna will get on a rip roaring jag, and ask for an indefinate leave of absence from the Senate of the Nation. Jerry Porter will be shelved forever. The two detectives who have had their eyeon two Democrats since Sunday last will be out of a job. These two Sluths were spoiled when they first sat down in the office. There will be weeping and 'nashing of teeth on the Square. Senator Rummins will get what he wants for the part he played. Senator Hissen will still be waiting for the apology that never came. He will be out in the cold with nothing but his collar to shelter him. Hon. Tut Burnam will be playing 'pedy' with St. John Boyle for pointers.—Western Argus.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[News]

Ever tenth man in this part of the county is a candidate for some government position.

Measles has visited Owenton in earnest. There are now 25 or 30 cases in town and half a dozen new cases are reported every day.

On last Sunday some of Owenton's bad boys went to Isaac Wolf's rented premises, the Fair Grounds, near town, where Mr. Wolf had 150 fat hogs, and deliberately cut the tails of many of them off.

The Republican leaders of Owen held quite a little meeting the other day and talked over matters in general and the offices in particular. It was agreed that J. P. Hutcheson ought to have the postoffice at this place. A full ticket of the county offices will be put out in June.

FROM CARROLL COUNTY.

[News]

D. B. Garriott shipped to Petersburg, Monday, for J. J. Ferris, fourteen fine gilts and three Plymouth Rock cockerels.

It is reported that the toll gates on the Prestonville and Locust pike will be put up again in order to collect enough money to repair damages done by the high water.

On Wednesday of last week a dog belonging to Ben Walters, between here and Ghent, showed signs of hydrophobia, and came near biting several members of the family. The dog was killed, but not before he had visited the premises of Andrew Ray, Lute Trinkler and Lish Martin, whose dogs it bit, and also a horse belonging to John Smith, which he was riding along the road. The dog was bitten on Dec. 20th last, as were also a number of other dogs in the neighborhood.

It is said that the appropriation bills which failed at the close of the last session of Congress, will be rushed through the extra session by means of special orders, possibly without the formality of referring to committees, etc. If this is done it will insure Carrollton her $25,000 Government building; also the funds to prosecute work on the Kentucky river, which will make Carrollton the feeding point of about 235 miles of navigation on that river.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1897. NO. 23.

THE Democratic members of the legislature have had the laugh on the Republican members this winter.

A TEXAS bank went to the wall last week, and caused a run on a neighbor bank that came very near swamping it.

THE Republicans are fighting among themselves at Frankfort harder this winter than the Democrats fought each other last winter.

A WAR among the European powers would enliven business in this country, as the United States would be the principal source of supplies.

WHAT right has an Ohio man to come over to Kentucky to engineer the election of a United States Senator? The Republicans denounce the unwarranted interference on the part of Hanna and his agent, Taylor.

MOODY, the evangelist, is now preaching in Louisville. The field he has chosen is one in which a vast amount of work is needed, and it is to be hoped that the city will be greatly benefitted by his sojourn within its limits.

RESIGNATIONS of fourth class postmasters are being received at Washington at the rate of five a day, but that is entirely too slow to suit those who are standing out in the cold awaiting an appointment to attach p. m. to their names.

MR. THORN'S bill requiring that all executions shall hereafter take place in the penitentiary ought to pass. It would reduce the expense of executions, and cease, to some extent, the development of a morbid curiosity on the part of many people.

WHEN a Republican Congressman visits any of the departments at Washington for pie for some of his constituents, he is informed, in nearly every instance, that civil service prevails, and he retraces his steps dreading to meet his disappointed constituent.

CIVIL SERVICE is a splendid thing for those who are in Government employ and want to stay, but it is a very annoying obstacle to those who are out and want to get in, and unless President McKinley takes the back track, he will have the army of pie hunters denouncing him.

JOHN SULLIVAN is feeling his keeping again, and has concluded that he would like to try conclusions with Corbett once more. It is claimed that he can get all the backing he wants, and it will be a pity if the two pugilists are not afforded an opportunity to hammer the life out of each other.

THAT knife that Senator Foraker carries up his sleeve has dripping from its keen-point the blood of another victim, ex-Congressman Bellamy Storer, of Cincinnati, whom President McKinley had slated for Assistant Secretary of State. Storer was not acceptible to the Senator and he bluffed the President out of appointing him. Foraker will not under any circumstances, abandon his policy of rule or ruin.

JOHN D. WHITE, better known as the crested jayhawker from the mountains, went down to Frankfort, last week, wearing his fighting clothes, and shortly after he struck the town, he attempted to smash a brother Republican in the face, but a duck a la Corbett avoided the blow, when friends rushed in and put a stop to the hostilities. Other Republicans engaged in similar recreation in the Capital last week.

ELLISTON and Daugherty continue to misrepresent Grant county in the matter of a United States Senator. So far as Daugherty is concerned he is superanuated and will be, naturally, of no more benefit to the public, but Elliston is a man of ability and capable of being a very useful man to his people, but having ignored their wishes in an instance of such great importance they can not rely on him in the future.

LAST winter the Republicans were all engaged saying nice things about the Democratic bolters, who prevented Blackburn's reelection as United States Senator, but this winter they have the traitors in their camp and the abuse they are showering upon them is without limit. At this writing it looks very much like Dr. Hunter will be unable to connect with the office of Senator, and that as a result the Republican party will be left in a very badly demoralized condition.

THE tariff bill got some very hard knocks in the House last week, and the outside pressure was so heavy that Mr. Dingley was compelled to announce that the Ways and Means committee had decided to strike out that clause of the bill placing a duty on books and scientific instruments for educational institutions and add an amendment putting those articles on the free list, as they are at present. The Democrats of the House made the most of the almost numberless unjust and uncalled for discriminations made by the bill in favor of the few against the many, but the speech made by Representative McMillin naturally received the most attention, both from the opponents and friends of the bill, because of his position as the ranking Democrat of the Ways and Means committee, and because on account of his long experience in tariff matters he had been requested by Representative Bailey to make the leading speech against the bill. In replying to Representative Dingley's statement that the increased burden of taxation imposed by the bill on luxuries, Mr. McMillin said:—"The claim that the increased burden is on luxuries is not sustained by the facts. Are coarse shawls and knit goods luxuries? Are wool hats and overcoats luxuries? Are knives and forks in this urbane age luxuries? And I beg with all deference to ask whether in the State of Maine a clean shirt has become such a rarity that it is classed with the luxuries? I ask him when, among Americans, the sugar that sweeten tea and coffee became a luxury—when trace chains became a luxury to farmers? Sir, not only is the bill itself higher, but the different schedules average above those of the McKinley bill." Mr. McMillin also called attention to the fact that foreign governments are already preparing to resist this new assault upon commerce. He also remined the Republicans that a purchased verdict, such as they obtained last November, would not be allowed to stand.

IN this issue appears the announcement of Hon. M. D. Gray as a Democratic candidate for reelection to the office of Commonwealth's Attorney in this Judicial District. Mr. Gray's first term, which was limited to five years by the new constitution, expires on the first day of January, 1898. Mr. Gray is about the strongest jury lawyer in this district, and is well equipped for the duties of the office which he has filled for four years in a manner very satisfactory to the people of the district. He is one of those Democrats who is always found in the thickest of the fight in which his party is engaged—responding to all the demands made upon him. As a prosecutor he is fair and honorable, and takes no advantage of the unfortunate by which to advance his reputation as a public prosecutor. He now asks the people to endorse him by a reelection, and the indications are they will do so without opposition.

WHETHER the administration will make any use of the decision of the Supreme Court sustaining the Sherman anti-trust law and including railway pools and agreements within its scope, is a question that many men in Congress are much interested in. It was maintained by Mr. Cleveland's two Attorney Generals, Olney and Harmon, that nothing could be done under the Sherman law because of the decisions of courts against its validity. Now that the highest court has reversed those decisions and declared the law valid, there is an opportunity for this administration to clear itself of the charge of being too friendly to the trusts, by vigorously prosecuting them, if it isn't afraid to do so.

CANDIDATES for county offices must bear in mind that next Monday is the day for weighing in. It takes seven dollars to entitle a candidate's name to a place on the ballot, and that amount must be paid to D. E. Castleman, Chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee next Monday. The statement in last week's issue that the 15th of April was the day upon which to pay the assessment was incorrect. See call in another column.

Gov. Bradley is said to be very sick of official life. The Republicans of Kentucky are very sick of Gov. Bradley.—Louisville Commercial.

Take your medicine, it is of your own prescribing.

THE General Assembly will accomplish no legislation until after a Senator is elected.

The Court of Appeals has decided the bank tax cases, affirming some and reversing others, deciding that they were subject to county and municipal taxation. This overrules the decision of last June.

The decision of the court affects every bank in the State. It reverses the previous decision, which held that banks should be taxed under the Hewitt law, and subjects all banks to the ad valorem tax.

The facts in the case in brief are that in 1885 the Legislature passed what is known as the Hewitt bill, according to which the banks were to pay to the State 75 cents on every $100, and were not to be subject to any other taxation.

This was accepted by the banks, and a contract entered into. But in 1893 the Legislature did away with the Hewitt law, and passed a bill taxing the banks according to the ad valorem system without deducting debts. The banks contested this, and they were sustained in their objection by the Court of Appeals, which held that the Hewitt law should hold.

But a number of banks had been formed since 1885, when the Hewitt law was passed, and these were subjected to the ad valorem tax. They sued, holding that they should not be taxed on other conditions than the old banks. These are the cases that were decided.

The Court of Appeals has been changed since 1893, and the decision not only holds that the new banks shall be taxed on the ad valorem system, but also reverses the previous decision, holding that the Hewitt law is unconstitutional and that all banks shall pay an ad valorem tax.

Whether the banks can be made to pay back taxes will have to be decided by further litigation. In all probability the cases will be further contested and will be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

They are moving in Nebraska to have a law enacted making it a misdemeanor for any Nebraskan to attend college outside of the State. Judging from the campaign made last year by Nebraska's favorite son it is nearer the true Nebraska idea to make it a felony for any one to attend college at all."

The above is another example of the hatred that the turn-coat C. J. entertains for those who advocate political opinions contrary to those which it has, of late years, tried to compel Democrats to accept.

DR. HUNTER has made a hard fight for election as United States Senator, but has not come nearer than two votes of succeeding, which is said to be as close as he will ever come to an election. It looks now like the Republicans, with a clear majority on joint ballot, will be unable to elect a Senator. Hunter's friends, who have been so faithful to him, are declaring that no other person shall be elected, and it is within their power to make good their declaration.

HARPER'S WEEKLY was an earnest advocate of the election of McKinley to the presidency because of his supposed position on the money question, which it says was the issue upon which he was elected; but since the President has abandoned the money question and brought the tariff to the front, that journal is subjecting him to an unmerciful criticism—such as only the ability commanded by its editorial column can dispense for the benefit of the deserving.

IF the Republicans cannot find a member of the party in Kentucky who is fit for United States Senator, how would it do for them to elect Secretary of State Sam Taylor, of Ohio, who has been in Frankfort for several days trying to elect Dr. Hunter? His election would be entirely satisfactory to Mr. Hanna.

THE presence of Samuel Taylor, of Ohio, at Frankfort, has had no soothing effect on the hostile Republican factions. It is known that he is Mark Hanna's agent, present in the interest of Dr. Hunter, and the anti-Hunter forces regard him as a political trespasser.

A BILL has been introduced in the legislature providing for the reduction of the salary of Circuit Judge from $3,000 to $2,400 per annum. Some of the incumbents claim that they can not make a living out of the office at that salary.

THE Republicans held indignation meetings in several counties last week, the purpose of which was to bring their representatives into line for Dr. Hunter, the nominee for Senator.

The Spaniards have begun capturing Rivera, Masceo's successor.

Pith of the Press.

Washington Post: It will be observed that Joe Manley is not managing anything for Tom Reed at the present time.

Hopkinsville New Era: It is feared that the news that Gov. Bradley intends to resign the governorship is almost too good to be true.

Georgetown News: If Bradley should become Blackburn's successor in the Senate, it is hardly probable that he would ask to be given a seat close to Hanna.

Bowling Green Times: Gov Bradley's resignation, if tendered, can be traced to a "blow over the heart," dealt by the Burkesville pugilist, better known as Dr. Hunter.

Paducah Register: Don't take too much stock in that story of the Bradley resignation. There have been men who have resigned offices, but they are not Republicans.

Lexington Argonaut: Hunter, backed last winter on his merits, was altogether a different candidate from the Hunter of '97, backed by the henchmen of the President.

Washington Post: The Ohio man who furnished the Bible upon which President McKinley took the oath is beginning to wonder when the man in the White House is going to reciprocate.

Shelbyville Sentinel: The soundmoney Democrats in the Legislature will best serve the cause in which they are enlisted by keeping hands off in the senatorial fight and voting for a candidate of their own party.

Richmond Climax: Last winter Gov. Bradley had to call out the militia to protect the Republicans from the Democrats. It looks now as if the militia will have to be called out to protect the Republicans from each other.

Covington Commonwealth: If Gov. Bradley resigns before his term expires it will only be for the reason that the grub Governor has had the wings of a senatorial butterfly clamped into his shoulders by the extra session.

Covington Commonwealth: Dear Hissem and Rummons: It I said anything last winter when I didn't think I needed you I withdraw it this winter when the need for you beats all hollow the Texan's need for his gun. Yours, Godfrey.

New York Herald: Mark Hanna has shown early in his career that he has the material of which Senators are made. His first speech in the Senate was in support of a demand for his share of the "congressional pork" in the shape of a public building in Cleveland.

Hopkinsville New Era: Those legislators who got mad because Dr. Hunter accused them last winter of having sold out in the senatorial race are very easily satisfied, as it is reported that Dr. Hunter's apology has pacified them. Dr. Hunter, under the present circumstances, would make any sort of an apology in order to secure one more vote in the senatorial fight now in progress, and an apology under such circumstances counts for little.

DR. HUNTER had a long distance telephone put in his headquarters at Frankfort so he could talk direct with boss Hanna at Washington.

DON'T take any stock in the report that Gov. Bradley contemplates resigning. Republicans never resign and seldom die.

THE fight between the Bradley and Hunter factions of the Republican party is as bitter as it is possible to make it without resorting to powder and ball.

THE Courier-Journal of last Friday printed a picture of the joint session of the General Assembly of the day before, and it bore a very striking resemblance to a picture of the trial of Scott Jackson or Alonzo Walling.

EUROPEAN CRISIS.

The Works of Greece Extolled by Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage.

He Explains in an Eloquent Sermon How the People of Every Nation Are Debtors in Many Ways to the Inhabitants of the Hellas.

Dr. Talmage Sunday took for his text: Romans i., 14: "I am debtor both to the Greeks and the barbarians."

At this time, when that behemoth of abominations, Mohammedanism, after having gorged itself on the carcasses of a hundred thousand Armenians, is trying to put its paws upon one of the fairest of all nations, that of the Greeks, I preach this sermon of sympathy and protest, for every intelligent person on this side of the sea, as well as the other side, like Paul, who wrote the text, is debtor to the Greeks. The present crisis is emphasized by the guns of the allied powers of Europe, ready to be unlimbered against the Hellenes, and I am asked to speak out. Paul, with a master intellect of the ages, sat in brilliant Corinth, the great Acro-Corinthus fortress frowning from the height of 1,886 feet, and in the house of Gaius, where he was a guest, a big pile of money near him, which he was taking to Jernsalem to the poor. In this letter to the Romans, which Chrisostum admired so much that he had it read to him twice a week, Paul practically says: "I, the apostle, am bankrupt. I owe what I can not pay, but I will pay as large a per centage as I can. It is an obligation for which Greek literature and Greek sculpture and Greek architecture and Greek prowess have done for me. I will pay all I can in installments of evangelism. I am insolvent to the Greeks." Hellas, as the inhabitants call it, or Greece, as we call it, is insignificant in size, about a third as large as the state of New York, but what it lacks in breadth it makes up in height, with its mountains Cylene, and Eta, and Taygetus, and Tymphrestus, each over 7,000 feet in elevation, and its Parnassus, over 8,000. Just the country for great men to be born in, for in all lands most of the intellectual and moral giants were not born on the plain, but had for cradle the valley between two mountains. That country, no part of which is more than 40 miles from the sea, has made its impress upon the world as no other nation, and it to-day holds a first mortgage of obligation upon all civilized people. While we must leave to statesmanship and diplomacy the settlement of the intricate questions which now involve all Europe and in a directly all nations, it is time for all churches, all schools, all universities, all arts, all literature to sound out in the most emphatic way the declaration: "I am debtor to the Greeks."

In the first place, we owe to their language our New Testament. All of it was first written in Greek, except the Book of Matthew, and that, written in the Aramean language, was soon put into Greek by our Saviour's brother, James. To the Greek language we owe the best sermon ever preached, the best letters ever written, the best poems ever kindled. All the parables in Greek. All the miracles in Greek. The sermon on the mount in Greek. The story of Bethlehem and Golgotha and Olivet and Jordan banks and Galilean beaches and Pauline embarkation and Pentecostal tongues and seven trumpets that sounded over Patmos, have come to the world in liquid, symmetric, picturesque, philosophic, unrivaled Greek, instead of the gibberish language in which many of the nations of the earth at that time jabbered. No one forgets it and who can exaggerate its thrilling importance, that Christ and Heaven were introduced to us in the language of the Greeks, the language which Homer had sung, and Sophocles dramatized, and Plato dialogued, and Socrates discoursed, and Lycurgus legislated, and Demosthenes thundered his oration on "The Crown?" Everlasting thanks to God that the waters of life were not handed to the world in the unwashed cup of corrupt languages from which nations had been drinking, but in the clean, bright, golden-tipped, emerald-handled chalice of the Hellenes. Learned Curtius wrote a whole column about the Greek verb. Philologists century after century have been measuring the symmetry of that language, laden with elegy and Philippic, drama and comedy, Odyssey and Iliad; but the grandest thing that Greek language ever accomplished was to give to the world the benediction, the comfort, the irradiation, the salvation of the Gospel of the Son of God. For that we are debtors to the Greeks.

And while speaking of our philological obligation, let me call your attention to the fact that many of the intellectual and moral and theological leaders of the ages got much of their discipline and effectiveness from Greek literature. It is popular to scoff at the dead languages, but 50 per cent of the world's intellectuality would have been taken off if, through learned institutions our young men had not, under competent professors, been drilled in Greek masterpieces—Hesiod's "Weeks and Days," or the eulogium by Simonides of the slain in war, or Pindar's "Odes of Victory," or "The recollections of Socrates," or "The Art of Words," by Corax, or Xenophon's Anabasis. From the Greeks the world learned how to make history. Had there been no Herodotus and Thucydides there would have been no Macaulay or Bancroft. Had there been no Sophocles in tragedy there would have been no Shakespeare. Had there been no Homer there would have been no Milton. The modern wits, who are now or have been out on the divine mission of making the world laugh at the right time, can be traced back to Aristophanes, the Athenian, and many of the jocosities that are now taken as new had their suggestions twenty-three hundred years ago in the 54 comedies of that master of merriment. Grecian mythology has been the richest mine from which orators and essayists have drawn their illustrations and painters the themes for their canvas, and, although now an exhausted mine, Grecian mythology has done a work that nothing else could have accomplished. Boreas representing the north wind; Sisyphus rolling the stone up the hill, only to have the same thing to do over again; Tantalus with fruits above him that he could not reach; Achilles with his arrows; Icarus, with his waxen wings, flying too near the sun; the Centaurus, half man and half beast; Orpheus with his lyre; Atlas with the world on his back—all these and more have helped literature, from the graduate's speech on commencement day to Rufus Choate's eulogium on Daniel Webster at Dartmouth. Tragedy and comedy were born in the festivals of Dionysius at Athens. The lyric and elegiac and epic poetry of Greece 500 years before Christ has its echoes in the Tennysons, Longfellows and Bryants 1,800 and 1,900 years after Christ. There is not an effective pulpit or editorial chair or professor's room or cultured parlor or intelligent farmhouse to-day in America or Europe that could not appropriately employ Paul's ejaculation and say: "I am debtor to the Greeks."

The fact is this: Paul had got much of his oratorical power of expression from the Greeks. That he had studied their literature was evident, when standing in the presence of an audience of Greek scholars on Mars Hill, which overlooks Athens, he dared to quote from one of their own Greek poets, either Cleanthus or Aratus, declaring, "As certain also of your own poets have said, 'for we are also his offspring.'" And he made accurate quotation, Cleanthus, one of the poets, having written:

For we thine offspring are All things that creep
Are but the echo of the voice divine.

And Aratus, one of their own poets, had written:

Death earc perpiex? Is lowering danger nigh?
We are his offspring, and to Jove we fly.

It was rather a risky thing for Paul to attempt to quote extemporaneously from a poem in a language foreign to his, and before Greek scholars, but Paul did it without stammering, and then acknowledged before the most distinguished audience on the planet his indebtedness to the Greeks, crying out in his oration, "As one of your own poets has said."

Furthermore, all the civilized world, like Paul, is indebted to the Greeks for architecture. The world before the time of the Greeks had built monoliths, obelisks, eromlechs, sphinxs, and pyramids, but they were mostly monumental to the dead whom they failed to memorialize. We are not certain about the names of those in whose commemoration the pyramids were built. But Greek architecture did most for the living. Ignoring Egyptian precedents, and borrowing nothing from other nations, Greek architecture carved its own columns, set its own pediments, adjusted its own entablatures, rounded its own moldings and carried out as never before three qualities of right building, called by an old author "firmitas, utilitas, venustas," namely, firmness, usefulness, beauty. Although the Parthenon on the Acropolis of Athens is only a wreck of the storms and earthquakes and bombardments of many centuries, and although Lord Elgin took from the side of that building, at an expense of $250,000, two shiploads of sculpture, one shipload going down in the Mediterancan and the other shipload now to be found in the British museum, the Parthenon, though in comparative ruins, has been an inspiration to all architects for centuries past, and will be an inspiration all the time from now until the world itself is a temple ruin. Oh, that Parthenon! One never gets over having once seen it. But what must it have been when it stood as its architects, Ikitnos and Kallikrates, built it out of Pentilican marble, white as Mont Blanc at noonday, and as overwhelming. Height above height. Overtopping the august and majestic pile, and rising from its roof, was a statue of Pallas Promachus in bronze so tall and flashing that sailors far out at sea beheld the plume of her helmet. Without the aid of the Eternal God it never could have been planned, and without the aid of God the chisels and trowels never could have constructed it. There is not a fine church building in all the world, or a properly constructed courthouse, or a beautiful art gallery, or an appropriate auditorium, or a tasteful home, which, because of that Parthenon, whether its style or some other style be adopted, is not directly or indirectly a debtor to the Greeks.

But there is another art in my mind—the most fascinating, elevating and inspiring of all arts, and the nearest to the divine—for which all the world owes a debt to the Hellenes that will never be paid. I mean sculpture. At least 650 years before Christ the Greeks perpetuated the human face and form in terra cotta and marble. What a blessing to the human family that men and women, mightily useful, who could live only within a century, may be perpetuated for five or six or ten centuries. How I wish that some sculptor, contemporaneous with Christ, could have put his matchless form in marble But for every grand and exquisite statue of Martin Luther, of John Knox, of William Penn, of Thomas Chalmers, of Wellington, of Lafayette, of any of the great statesmen or emancipators or conquerors who adorn your parks or fill the niches of your academies, you are debtors to the Greeks. They covered the acropolis, they glorified the temples, they adorned the cemeteries with statues, some in cedar, some in ivory, some in silver, some in gold, some in size diminutive and some in size colossal. Thanks to Phidias, who worked in stone; to Clearchus, who worked in bronze; to Dontas, who worked in gold, and to all ancient chisels of commemoration. Do you not realize that for many of the wonders of sculpture we are debtors to the Greeks?

Yes! For the science of medicine, the great art of healing, we must thank the Greeks. There is the immortal Greek doctor, Hippocrates, who first opened the door for disease to go out and health to come in. He first set forth the importance of cleanliness and sleep, making the patient before treatment to be washed and take slumber on the hide of a sacrificed beast. He first discovered the importance of thorough prognosis and diagnosis. He formulated the famous oath of Hippocrates which is taken by physicians of our day. He emancipated medicine from superstition, empiricism, priestcraft. He was the father of all the infirmaries, hospitals and medical colleges of the last 23 centuries. Ancient medicament and surgery had before that been anatomical and physiological assault and battery, and long after the time of Hippocrates the Greek doctor, where his theories were unknown, the Bible speaks of fatal medical treatment when it says: "In his disease he sought not to the Lord, but to the physicians, and Asa slept with his fathers." And we read in the New Testament of the poor woman who had been treated by incompetent doctors who asked large fees, where it says: "She had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was nothing better but rather grew worse." For our glorious science of medicine and surgery, more sublime than astronomy, for we have more to do with disease than with the stars; more beautiful than botany, for bloom of health, in the cheek of wife and child, than all the roses of the garden—for this grandest of all sciences, the science of healing, every pillow of recovered invalid, every ward of American and European hospital may well cry out,

Furthermore, all the world is obligated to Hellas more than it can ever pay for its heroics in the cause of liberty and right. United Europe to-day had not better think that the Greeks will not fight. There may be failings back and vacillations and temporary defeat, but if Greece is right, all Europe can not put her down. The other nations, before they open the portholes of their men-of-war against that small kingdom, had better read of the battle of Marathon, where 10,000 Athenians, led on by Miltiades, triumphed over 100,000 of their enemies. At that time in Greek council of war five generals were for beginning the battle and five were against it. Callimachus presided at the council of war, had the deciding vote, and Miltiades addrssaed him, saying:

"It now rests with you, Callimachus, either to enslave Athens, or by insuring her freedom, to win yourself an immortality of fame, for never since the Athenians were a people were they in such danger as they are at this moment. If they bow the knee to the Persians, they are to be given up to tortures, and you know what they will then have to suffer; but if Athens comes victorious out of this contest, she has it in her power to become the first city of Greece. Your vote is to decide whether we are to join battle or not. If we do not bring on a battle presently, some factious intrigue will disunite the Athenians and the city will be betrayed to the Medes, but if we fight before there is anything rotten in the state of Athens I believe that, provided the gods will give fair field and favor, we are able to get the best of it in the engagement." That won the vote of Callimachus, and soon the battle opened, and in full run the men of Miltiades fell upon the Persians hosts, shouting, "On! Sons of Greece! Strike for the freedom of your country! Strike for the freedom of your children and your wives, for the shrines of your fathers' Gods, and for the sepulchers of your sires! All, all are now staked on the strife." While only 193 Greeks fell, 6,400 Persians lay dead upon the field, and many of the Asiatic hosts who took to the wet vessels in the harbor were consumed in the shipping. Persian oppression was rebuked, Grecian liberty was achieved, the cause of civilization was advanced, and the western world and all nations have felt the heroics. Had there been no Miltiades, there might have been no Washington.

Also, at Thermopylae, 300 Greeks, along a road only wide enough for a wheel track between a mountain and a marsh, died rather than surrender. Had there been no Thermopylae, there might have been no Bunker Hill. The echo of Athenian and Spartan heroics was heard at the gates of Lucknow and Sebastopol and Bannockburn and Lexington and Gettysburg. English Magna Charter and Declaration of American Independence, and the song of Robert Burns, entitled "A Man's a Man for a' That," were only the long-continued reverberation of what was said and done 20 centuries before in that little kingdom that the powers of Europe are now imposing upon. Greece having again and again shown that 10 men in the right are stronger than 1,000 men in the wrong, the heroism of Leonidas and Aristides and Themistocles will not cease their mission until the last man on earth is as free as God made him. There is not on either side of the Atlantic to-day a republic that can not truthfully employ the words of the text and say, "I am debtor to the Greeks."

The practical question, how can we pay that debt, or a part of it? For we can not pay more than ten per cent of that debt in which Paul acknowledged himself a bankrupt. By praying Almighty God that he will help Greece in its present war with Mohammedanism and the concerted empires of Europe. I know her queen, a noble, Christian woman, her face the throne of all beneficence and loveliness, her life an example of noble wifehood and motherhood. God help those palaces in these days of awful exigency! Our American senate did well the other day when, in that capitol building which owes to Greece its columnar impressiveness, they passed a hearty resolution of sympathy for that nation. Would that all might do so! But we

SHIPPING POULTRY.

The Coop Here Illustrated Is the Best Thing of Its Kind.

At this season of the year poultry breeders and poultry buyers are interested as to how best to ship breeding stock by express. Expressmen have found much fault in the way fowls were occasionally prepared for shipment, and the result was double first-class charges used to be made on poultry. As this seemed an injustice, poultrymen and expressmen came together and decided on what should constitute a proper coop in consideration of single first-class merchandise rates instead of double. This conference resulted in the adoption of a "one rate" price instead of a "double rate." Also, that coops must be strong and slatted and not injured by other packages being piled on them. If the coop is sufficiently strong, expressmen have no objection to coops being lined inside with cloth to protect birds from a draft. The coop illustrated above is four feet long, two feet wide and 20 inches high, made entirely of laths, excepting the bottom and the boards around the base, which are four inches wide, of bottom box stuff. The laths on the sides are securely nailed to posts which are of one inch square spruce. Such a coop will carry any amount of merchandise piled on top of it, as much so as though it was a box.—Farm Poultry.

CARE OF POULTRY.

How to Obtain Satisfactory Results from the Hens.

To keep up the vitality of a flock—necessary for a steady supply of eggs—all old roosters must be disposed of every second year at least. Procure a new lot from unrelated stock. This is one of the essentials. When spring comes and hens grow broody, remove each one to a small house prepared for hatching. Never leave sitting hens among the layers. Around the floor of the hatching shed arrange boxes half filled with earth and straw, in which are two or more china eggs. Cover the hens for a night, or until well settled again, then exchange the false for fresh eggs. Keep a supply of shelled corn continually in this sitting house that hens may feed at their pleasure and get back to eggs before they are chilled. The result is much more satisfactory. Also have plenty of fresh water and oyster shells.

Strong chickens will usually begin to hatch on the 20th day, though some will be a day or two later. Remove when dry and keep covered in a basket in the house. If left in the nest the hen becomes restless and is likely to crush them. When all are hatched put the hen with her brood of fluffy beauties out in a coop, on grass if possible, but at least separated by a six-foot poultry netting from the other yard. In a week let them run at large in their own division. Never feed raw corn meal slops. It is deadly. If corn meal must be used bake it first into a crumbly johnny-cake. The best feed is cracked grain, fed dry, cracked oats, cracked corn, cracked wheat. After the first week whole wheat may be fed, to which, when four weeks old, add whole corn, shelled. See that they have fresh water, oyster shell and coarse gravel or grit of some kind.—Troy (N. Y.) Times.

HINTS FOR FARMERS.

Bounce the lazy hired man.

Everybody be kind to everybody else.

Feed plenty of carrots to all stock if you have the carrots.

Bounce the hired man who is not willing to feed the stock on Sunday.

Push every acre for all it is worth. That is one way to discount low prices.

Kill the hens that lay no eggs. That is, have nothing on the farm that does not pay.

Economize labor on the farm. Lots of money goes to waste by the hired man loafing in the shade in summer.

Keep an account with each field on the farm, charging it and crediting it. It will be the best thing you ever did.

Use very little corn in summer for laying hens. Green food may be fed at any time during the day. One great fault is over-feeding, letting the hens gorge themselves.

To get rid of small ants find the nest, make a hole through the center with a bar or stick and pour in about half an ounce of bisulphide of carbon. Then close up the hole tight.

You can cut off the combs of fowls if you prefer. Use a sharp knife; cut off both combs and wattles. To prevent bleeding, first wash the head with strong alum water and then sprinkle with powdered ammonia.—Western Plowman.

The Best Feed for Ducks.

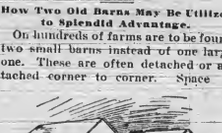
Ducks are omnivorous animals, eating almost everything in the line of vegetables and animals that comes in their way. For the first food for young ducks nothing is better than the yolks of hard boiled eggs or boiled liver chopped very fine. The food ought to be cooked for the first week and after that it may be changed to coarse, scalded Indian meal, wheat, grits or rice. Bread crumbs and sour milk are excellent food, as are also angle worms and snails. As they grow, they should also have a variety of vegetable food, such as lettuce, onions, cabbage, etc. They have to be fed at frequent intervals. Five times a day is not too often.—Orange Judd Farmer.

INCREASE THE RATION.

At This Time of the Year Stock Should Be Fed Liberally.

With all stock that is to be kept through the winter it will be found easier as well as more economical to keep an animal thrifty than to allow it to run down in condition and then attempt to feed it up. This is especially the case at this season, when dry feed must be largely depended upon.

Of course the cost must always be considered, as it is an item to feed and keep in a good thrifty condition at as low a cost as possible. At the same time it should be remembered that it is never good economy to stint the feed at the expense of growth.



With young and growing stock, and, in fact, with all that are to be kept through the winter it will be found a good plan to allow them to run out every day that the weather will permit, but at the same time too much dependence should not be placed upon the amount of feed that they will secure in the pastures.

Generally it will be found a good plan to gradually increase the ration night and morning at this time, the amount to be largely determined by the condition of the animals. If good shelter is provided and they have been kept up in a good thrifty condition, less grain is needed than when the stock are exposed to cold or storms, or have been allowed to run down in condition. Of course roughness is usually cheaper than grain and one of the advantages in providing a comfortable shelter is that it lessens the grain rations, and if care is taken to make the shelter dry and comfortable a very light grain ration night and morning will keep in a good condition. But care must be taken now to keep a watch on the stock, otherwise they may begin to fall, and this implies more or less of a loss, and under present conditions if farming is to be made profitable every item must be considered with growing stock, their condition must be such that a steady gain can be maintained until sufficiently matured to pick for market.—Farmer's Voice.

How Two Old Barns May Be Utilized to Splendid Advantage.

On hundreds of farms are to be found two small barns instead of one large one. These are often detached or attached corner to corner. Space is wasted and work cannot be conveniently done in them without much loss of time. The illustrations show a plan for making the most of two such barns. They are moved to a position parallel to each other and are then connected by a shed-roofed one-storied addition, as shown in Fig. 1. This gives a barn-yard inclosed three sides, and so protected from wind and storm, and an interior that can be very advantageously arranged. The arrangement suggested in the floor plan that is given in Fig. 2 is for use on a dairy farm. Where other kinds of farming are followed, a different interior arrangement can easily be decided upon. In the plan given, it is intended that a feed car be used to convey silage, grain, etc., along in front of all the cattle stalls.—Orange Judd Farmer.

WEANING THE PIGS.

How It Can Be Done Without Stunting the Little Creatures.

I never saw my way of weaning pigs described in print. I have told several about it and they did not believe it would work, but after trying it, pronounce it a grand success. In the first place, I get my pigs (by a little care and patience) to eating warm slop when 20 or 25 days old. By the time they are 45 days old they are as eager for the slop as the old hogs. In the meantime I build a pen with a small hole just large enough for the pigs to enter and receive their tri-daily rations. As the pigs grow I gradually increase their ration of slop; also decrease the sow's ration of slop and increase her grain ration. By the time the pigs are 45 days old they think more of me than they do of their mother. They will leave the dam while sucking and come at my call.

In the second place I confine them in the pen, catch them one at a time, and put a small ring in each little nose. That finishes my part of the weaning process. They will be able to get a little milk from the dam for a few days, but they cannot get it all. Last fall both of my sows weaned their pigs before they were seven weeks old, without the application of the rings.—F. O. Poland, in Ohio Farmer.

For Land or For Crop.

The old question whether it is better to manure for land or for crop is not much asked nowadays. The loss of original fertility of soil and the narrowing profits on crops require that farmers in these times should get as nearly full returns as possible from all the manure they apply. If they manure at all for the future it is by seeding with clover when they apply the fertilizer, so that part of its benefit shall remain in the clover roots. Besides this, seeded ground does not waste fertility, either by washing or blowing away, as that left naked in winter is sure to do.

Young growing animals are the most profitable.

FURNISH COLLAR BUTTONS.

Modern Laundries Damage the Street Vendor's Business.

Modern methods in at least one line of business have struck a blithering swipe at the sidewalk merchant who patiently stands for hours on a downtown corner trying to sell collar and shirt buttons. Nobody ever thinks of buying any buttons from the luckless man, because everyone who patronizes a laundry gets buttons for nothing, and in the course of a few months lays them up by the gross, says the Chicago Chronicle.

Some time ago when a shirt came from the laundry it had beside the grease from the ironing machine and the ink from the marker's table, two pins thrust desperately through the stretched linen, holding the bosom and back of the garment in place. There are no more pins sent home with shirts. Some bright laundryman started a new era by furnishing small metal buttons, which are slipped into all the button holes of the shirt, causing it to hold its shape perfectly. The other laundrymen were not slow to follow, and now half the men on the street wear these little charity buttons for shirt studs. They are made of lead or some similar soft metal and evidently do not cost much, for shirts are done up cheaper and done up more, by the way, than they were when the humble but serviceable pins were used.

So therefore the patient street salesman finds a slow market with a downward tendency for his collar buttons.

A Wonderful Combination.

Being the only manufacturers of both guns and ammunition in the world the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Ct., are enabled to keep their guns apace with new ammunition and their ammunition apace with new guns. In this way by using Winchester goods, shooters can be certain of getting guns and ammunition of the highest degree of excellence and most improved type. As the unapproachable reputation of the Winchester guns depends upon the ammunition used in them, the Winchesters are obliged to keep the standard of their ammunition as near perfection as possible. Shooters who want the best results can get them by using Winchester guns and Winchester ammunition. Send for a large illustrated catalogue free.

Milton Reizenstein, a graduate student of the Johns Hopkins University, of Baltimore, has prepared a monograph as a thesis for a degree which he expects to receive next June. He has chosen for his subject the history of the B. & O. R. R. from its inception on the night of February 12th, 1827, when 25 of the leading business men of Baltimore met at the home of Philip E. Thomas and devised means whereby the trade of Baltimore with the West could be restored. It was at this meeting that the company was organized which afterwards built the B. & O. R. R. Mr. Reizenstein's monograph takes up the history of the road from that night until tracks were laid to Wheeling, W. Va., in 1853. The 70th anniversary of the B. & O. R. R. Co. was February 12th, 1897.

Reforms Need More Than a Day

To bring them about, and are always more complete and lasting when they proceed with steady regularity to a consummation. Few of the observant among us can have failed to notice that permanently healthful changes in the human system are not wrought by abrupt and violent means, and that those are the most salutary medicines which are progressive. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the chief of these. Dyspepsia, a disease of obstinate character, is obliterated by it.

OUR ENEMY STOLE IN

An enemy stole into your house one day last week and touched you lightly in passing. You thought little of the matter at the time, for the enemy was only a vagrant current of air. But now you are beginning to learn what mischief the little intruder did, for your back is stiff and painful. You have aches, and at times you feel dizzy.

What has happened? Simply this: the cold has settled on your kidneys. They are overcharged with blood and inflamed. Instead of passing the waste matter out of the body they are damming it up in the blood. Every minute, yes, every beat beat adds to the poison in you.

Normal action of the kidneys will purify the blood. Nothing else will.

Stop! Women,

And Consider the All-Important Fact,

That in addressing Mrs. Pinkham you are confiding your private ills to a woman—a woman whose experience in treating woman's diseases is greater than that of any living physician—male or female.

You can talk freely to a woman when it is revolting to relate your private troubles to a man—besides, a man does not understand—simply because he is a man.

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing full well that they ought to have immediate assistance, but a natural modesty impels them to shrink from exposing themselves to the questions and probably examinations of even their family physician. It is unnecessary. Without money or price you can consult a woman, whose knowledge from actual experience is greater than any local physician in the world. The following invitation is freely offered; accept it in the same spirit:

MRS. PINKHAM'S STANDING INVITATION.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass. All letters are received, opened, read and answered by women only. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established the confidence between Mrs. Pinkham and the women of America which has never been broken.

Out of the vast volume of experience which she has to draw from, it is more than possible that she has gained the very knowledge that will help your case. She asks nothing in return except your good-will, and her advice has relieved thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, is very foolish if she does not take advantage of this generous offer of assistance.—Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

R. C. Calvert, who has been dangerously ill for the last few days, is mending.

Mrs. Mary Carlton and P. G. Holmes are improving slowly from their late sick spell.

Misses Alice Wilson and Delia Wingate are visiting relatives at Lawrenceburg, Ind.

Mrs. Ellis, mother of Mrs. Z. T. Kelly, will return to her home in Ludlow, this week.

Will McConnell will move on his mother's place on the classic stream of Lick Creek.

Quite a flutter in colored circles over the coming nuptials of two of their society people.

Sid Stephens and his fair bride will move into the Kelly house on Middle Creek, next week.

John P. Ryle, we are glad to state, has entirely recovered from his late attack of pneumonia.

Tom Willis, candidate for assessor, was in this precinct all last week, waking up the voters.

Mr. Clem Stephens, of Rising Sun, has moved into our neighborhood. Our advice to Clem is to get a coat of arms.

We have not learned all the facts in Jerome Wilson's streak of bad luck, so will not say anything about it until next week.

The fine weather for the last few days has started farm work. Sowing oats and burning plant beds are now the order of the day.

City election one week from next Tuesday. S. R. Mock for Mayor and Ed Passons for City Clerk, are the only two men in the field, so far.

B. H Stephens, of Big Bone, was over, one day last week. The "Major" was not in very good humor. Cause—the fight did not go his way.

O. W. Adams has quit meddling tobacco at Aurora, and has rented a large warehouse in Rising Sun, where he will handle the weed this season.

Our K. of P. lodge is progressing finely. The boys are taking great interest in the work, and it bids fair to be one of the best lodges in the district.

As it always is Cal and Bud picked the wrong man in the fight, consequently they will have to wear their last year's socks the coming summer.

It makes no difference what we write, Mr. Editor, it will be blamed on "Lincoln" and "Charlie" anyhow, but the wise ones will get left this week, sure.

Rising Sun is now all excitement over an alleged ghost some of her citizens have seen lately. We knew their whisky was poor, but did not think it was that bad.

Mr. Z. T. Kelly, who has been seriously ill for the last four weeks, we are glad to state, is mending slowly. As a neighbor and citizen, we could find no better man in the State.

We have now five hucksters in the neighborhood. They say when they drive up to a farm house they help to churn and hunt hen nests. Some of them are right industrious.

Since the heavy rains all the roads are in a very bad condition, the weather being so bad the overseers have had no chance to work them. Judge Stephens was fortunate in selecting the men that he did, as since they have been in we have had better roads and more pains have been taken to keep them up than ever before.

Mr. James A. Wilson has just completed one of the finest meat houses in the county. The foundation is laid with the finest "Elston marble," frescoed ceiling, two large bay windows and a steam heating furnace, painted a natural wood color. Chas. Burns was the architect and builder. Cost, $500.

Gov. Bradley has demonstrated to the public that he is trying to run the affairs of the State in the interest of its citizens and humanity in general. The stand our Governor took in the Jackson and Walling cases has won for him a great deal of admiration, not only in this State but among people all over the United States, who hold life and virtue higher than anything else on earth. We say hurrah for Bradley, but we repudiate his politics.

The candidates have forgotten this precinct.

A "Slick Duck" struck the town a few days since, and introduced himself as Tobe Smith, claiming to be a jeweler, located and doing business in Cincinnati. He was not long in winning the confidence of some of the people, and secured several watches, rings, etc., which was to be taken to the city to be repaired by him. Smith left between two days and "he never came back." It has been learned that this same Smith visited this locality about ten years ago, and secured, on the same plan, watches, rings, chains and gold, all amounting to about $40. A thorough search was made but he could not be found. Smith can be identified by a deformed hand. He is likely to be run down in a few days.

The doctors found it necessary to amputate one of his feet, and a few days ago removed the toes from the remaining foot. No circulation of blood in the extremities is given as the cause. He leaves two sons and two daughters, all of whom reside in Cincinnati.

Whatever else may result from the case of Jackson and Walling, there is one lesson it is hoped will be heeded by the young men and boys of this land, viz: Carefulness in the choice of companionship. There is no doubt that Jackson was instrumental in Walling's ruin. Had the latter steered clear of the former, he might have been living today with as good a character as ordinary mortals possess.

Local News.

A spring weddding of unusual interest to residents of Boone county, was that of Miss Anna L. Clore to Mr. J. L. Morris, of Rushville, Ind., which took place at the residence of the bride's father, Fletcher Clore, Bullittsville.

The bride was very handsome in a stylish gown of tan and green novelty cloth trimmed with velvet and a profusion of lace, hat en suite. She was attended by her cousin, Miss Sara Campbell, of Delhi, Ohio, a beautiful girl, clad in an exquisite dress of white organdy, lace and pink trimmings. The best man was the bride's only brother, Mr. James Clore.

At half past 2 o'clock the bridal party entered the parlors to the strains of the wedding march, performed by Miss Mary Corn, and after a short but very impressive ceremony the Rev. Mr. Curry, of Petersburg, pronounced the two man and wife.

The warm congratulations which followed, and the valuable collection of silver, cut glass, linen and bric-a-brac, told of the high esteem in which the bride is held by the community.

The guests were served with an elegant course dinner, tendered with true Kentucky hospitality.

After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Morris will go to housekeeping in Rush county, Ind.

The guests from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kingsley, of Walnut Hills; Mr. and Mrs. Verner Ewan, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. H. Rust, of Covington; Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Brac Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Gibson, of Delhi, O.; Mr. and Mrs. George Allen, of Cincinnati; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, of St. Louis, Mo.; Mr. and Mrs. O. A. Lucas, of Kansas City, Mo.; Miss Belle Stonestreet, of Louisville; Misses Norman, of Union; Mrs. E. Hall, Mrs. Ryle and Mrs. Clutterbuck, of Burlington; Mr. and Mrs. Corn, Mr. and Mrs. Watts, Mr. and Mrs. Gaines, Mr. and Mrs. Walton, Mr. and Mrs. Riley, Mrs. Balsly, Mrs. Hedges, Mrs. Goodridge; Misses Winston, Stephens, Gaines Kinsley, Cropper, Corn, Willis, Duncan; Messrs. Chas. Kinsley, of Cincinnati; Ben Norman, of Union; Chas. Curry, of Owen county; Messrs. Dr. Hayes, Duncan, Gaines and Clutterbuck.

Died—At the residence of his parents near Plattsburg, Tuesday morning, the 23d inst., at 4 o'clock, Grant Hensley, of congestion of the brain. He was born at Plattsburg, this county, March 1st, 1862, consequently he was 35 years and 21 days old. About sixteen years ago he had a severe sun stroke from which he never entirely recovered, and which finally culminated in his death. He joined the Christian church at Petersburg two years ago, and his funeral was conducted by his pastor, Rev. Curry, last Wednesday morning in the presence of a large concourse of relatives and friends, after which his remains were placed in the vault at Petersburg to await final interment. Six young men, associates of his in life, acted as pall-bearers: Stephen Gaines, D. B. Hoffman, Foster Hensly, J. R. Tobin, Hubert Walton and Marshall Terrill.

Dr. W. E. Grant, youngest son of W. H. Grant and brother of Dr. J. M. Grant, of Petersburg, was elected last week, to fill the chair of Operative Dentistry, made vacant by the death of Dr. Francis Peabody in the Louisville Dental College. Dr. Peabody was Dean of the faculty. Dr. Grant is the youngest man in the State ever honored with such a high position in the medical profession, he only being 24 years of age. He was born near the mouth of Woolper creek, where he resided until about six years ago, when he went to Louisville to practice his profession, that of dentistry. Besides the high honor there is a salary of $2,500 that goes with the position.

George Blyth is of the opinion his shepherd dog went mad last Wednesday. His little boy was out in the yard and discovered the dog's strange actions and being frightened began screaming, "Sheep is mad," when George ran out with his gun and saw that the dog was frothing at the mouth considerably. It was leaving the yard, but was shot down going off the stiles into a field where there was considerable stock. If the dog was ever bitten by another that had rabbies the fact was not known. It may be well enough to keep an eye on your dog.

Next Monday is County Court, and on the Monday following Circuit Court convenes. Until within the last few years the first Monday in April has been a popular court day on account of the large number of stallions exhibited on the streets on that occasion, but for three years last past the show has amounted to nothing, although if the weather is good next Monday the show will indicate somewhat of a revival in the interest taken in horses some years since.

H. W. Harrison, dentist, of Rising Sun, Ind., will be in Burlington on the first and third Monday in each month, to do work for those who wish anything in his line. He will be here two days each visit. He is a son of the late R. F. Harrison, of Carrollton, and a graduate of the Pennsylvania College of Dentistry at Philadephia. He is highly recommended in his profession.

Calvert Kirkpatrick, who lives at Bromley, and is a son of John W. Kirkpatrick, of this place, came very near being drowned last Wednesday morning. He and another man started to cross over to Riverside, Ohio, where they worked in a cooper shop, when the wind capsized the skiff. They hung to the skiff, and after floating about a mile, were rescued.

Last Wednesday morning a large barn belonging to Mrs. McKee, of Francesville, was struck by lightning and burnt, together with its contents consisting of five horses, a lot of hay and farming implements. The barn was insured for $1,000 in the Phoenix Company, while $100 insurance on contents was carried by the Boone County Co.

It is said that the competition between the huckster-peddlers down on the East Bend road overshadows the campaign being made in that neighborhood by the candidates.

Considerable excitement was caused, last Wednesday about noon, when A. M. Acra came up in town and surrendered himself to County Attorney Lassing (he being the first officer he met) for shooting Dave Sanders, as stated. Sanders had received the contents of 2 chambers of a Smith and Wesson 38-caliber pistol, and was left lying on the ground where the shooting occurred, supposed to be in a dying condition. Acra owns a tract of land southeast of town, and some days previous to last Wednesday he had forbid Sanders trespassing up on it, at which time they came very near having serious trouble. Last Wednesday Acra was going home from work, when he saw Sanders going through the gate onto his land, and hallooed to him not to enter upon his land. Sanders put down a basket of clothing which he was carrying, and started back to Acra, who was about 50 yards distant. A war of words was kept up until Sanders got within a few yards of Acra, who ordered him to stop, telling him if he did not he would get hurt. Sanders failed to obey the order, and Acra drew his pistol and fired at him twice, both balls taking effect, Sanders going down at the last shot.

The shooting took place in the street near Mrs. David Hogan's, and it is said that she and her daughter saw it. Sanders was taken home shortly after the shooting, and Drs. W. O. Rouse and J. F. Smith were summoned, and commenced searching for the balls. The ball that struck in front, near the left hip bone, ranged down and backward, and was soon located in the left buttock, not far beneath the skin, and was removed without trouble. The other wound was about the eighth rib on the right side, but the ball could not be located, and having suffered no inconvenience whatever from it, Sanders declares the bullet that made that wound did not enter and only made a flesh wound. Judge Stephens fixed Acra's bond at $1,000 which he gave.

At first it was thought Sanders' wounds would prove fatal, but in an hour or so he rallied and has been improving right along.

Most likely the best way to travel in Turkey this year will be to buy an illustrated guide book and stay at home.

The new postmaster-general may be accepted without hesitation as a man of affairs. He has eight marriageable daughters.

A physical culture lecturer says that "if woman would eat more onions she would have fewer calls from the doctor." Well, the doctor would be justified.

A sandbagger arrested in New York the other day died from fright when the officer took him in charge. It is not a safe occupation for people with delicate nerves.

The present year promises to be an important one in railroad construction. Steel rails are cheap, and some roads that have long been under construction will be put through.

Notwithstanding the slow passing of the horse the old sign still holds good. No sooner is a red-headed woman seen upon the street than a white bicycle looms up in the offing.

The present extra session of congress is the sixteenth that has been held since the foundation of the government. The first extra session was called by President Adams, and convened May 16, 1797.

Argentina's new census gives a total population of about 4,092,000, of whom 1,646,000 live in cities. The leading city, Buenos Ayres, has a population of 663,854, making it the largest in South America.

An English writer asserts that there never was any Grub street in London, the name having been invented by Pope. Hungry authors became identified with that street because they were always trying to find it.

All but 19 of the towns in Massachusetts are provided with public libraries, and they contain but one per cent. of the population of the state. Massachusetts will soon reach a clean score on the library question.

The Cripple Creek millionaire, Stratton, is a rara avis among wealthy men. Talking about going into money-making schemes the other day, he said: "What I'm trying to do is to keep my income down within the limits of decency."

Some interesting figures concerning President McKinley's mail are given by his stenographer. From February 17 up to the time he left Canton for Washington 98,331 letters were received, and since the inauguration the daily mail has become larger.

The Boston Transcript says that "the seven wonders of America are Niagara falls, Yosemite valley, Mammoth cave, Muir glacier, Natural bridge, Yellowstone park and Grand canyon." And the eighth wonder is that the Transcript has just made this discovery.

Among the "personals" in a New York newspaper is the following: "A refined woman, handsome, stylish, good figure, vivacious, congenial, affectionate, sprightly, witty, companionable, neat, sympathetic, desires correspondence; millionaire only." Object, doubtless, matter o' money.

A committee of Quakers appeared before the Oklahoma legislature the other day and asked for the abolition of capital punishment. One of them started in to read from the New Testament, when a backwoods member interrupted him with the remark that he "needn't bring any of the eastern law books in here."

After a long illness Mrs. Henry Ward Beecher, the widow of the great preacher, died at the home of her daughter in Stamford, Conn. By one of those strange coincidences that sometimes occur, her death occurred exactly ten years from the time her distinguished husband, whom she loved so well and whose loss she had mourned so deeply, passed away.

A scientist connected with the United States fish commission claims to have discovered that fish have the power to change color. It is probable that they turn red for shame, on getting loose from anglers' hooks, to hear the grotesquely exaggerated statements made by the fishers as to the size of their escaped prey. No well-regulated fish could abide the colorless lying of the average Izaak Walton.

The state of New Jersey is not large, but bruisy. Her common roads are the best in the union, and her legislature proposes to spend $1,000,000 more for "good country roads." Greater states might well imitate the example of New Jersey and make money by it. There are plenty of richer states which are swamped and unable to transact business during one-third of the year because of impassable roads, and have been that way ever since the oldest citizen can remember.

Acceleration ought to be given to the flying machine industry in this country by the report that Dr. Nansen proposes to inspect some of these American airships. The great Arctic explorer appears to be considering the possibility of using one of these aerial devices in order "to surmount the ice peaks which surround the pole." It is probable his interest has been excited by recent newspaper accounts of the success of experiments in the far west, and that he is wholly unaware that the story is founded on an amiable and active fancy. As yet, no airship has proved a success.

GREEK VESSELS

Prevented Running the Blockade by an Austrian Ironclad—Turks Driven Off by Insurgents at Malaxa and Furseed.

CANEA, March 25.—An Austrian ironclad Wednesday prevented a Greek steamer and a sailing vessel from running the blockade.

Another attempt was made by the Turks Wednesday to convey a supply of provisions to the fort at Malaxa, but the essay resulted in failure, the Turks being driven off by the insurgents around Malaxa and pursued to the environs of Suda, where the fire from the Turkish warships compelled the rebels to retreat. Another effort to supply the fort with provisions will be made Wednesday night.

COL. VASSOS.
[Commanding Greek Troops in Crete.]

A strong force of insurgents, it is said, are preparing for an attack upon Kissamo, and the admirals commanding the foreign warships have issued a warning similar to that contained in Admiral Canevaro's proclamation.

The townspeople of Canea have been greatly encouraged by the proclamation issued Wednesday by the Italian admiral enjoining the insurgents and Greek troops not to attack certain forts.

LONDON, March 25.—The Daily News says Thursday that the powers have accepted the proposal for the establishment of a neutral zone along the Greco-Turkish frontier and will require the Greek and Turkish troops to withdraw from the territory included in the zone.

The Daily News will publish a dispatch from Athens denying the statement that the Greek government is in favor of making the island of Crete a principdom under Prince George of Greece.

ATHENS, March 25.—The Emphemera, which is regarded as reflecting the views of King George, in an article upon the Cretan difficulty, emphatically reaffirms the position of the king. The article concludes as follows:

"The king will never join himself with the powers in pressing the Cretans to accept autonomy and the suzerainty of the sultan, nor will he ever consent to such a solution of the difficulty.

"The Cretans reject autonomy, which their king rejects also, and will accept only one solution, namely, that upon which the will of the nation and the will of the Cretans shall agree. Every pressure exerted by the powers in Crete will have its counter stroke on the frontier and beyond."

ENTIRE FAMILY DEAD.

Tramps Had Probably Murdered Them All—Tragedy Near Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., March 25.—A terrible affair is reported from Paradise Ridge, in this county, a rural settlement 13 miles from Nashville.

The house of Jacob Ade, a German farmer, was partly burned, and in the ashes were found the charred remains of Ade, his wife, his daughter Lizzie, aged 14, and the 10-year-old daughter of Henry Moirer, a neighbor, who was spending the night with the Ades.

Henry Ade, a boy about ten years old, is missing and no trace can be found of him in any direction.

The bodies were all so badly burned that it was not easy to discover marks of violence on their persons, but it is thought they were all murdered before the house was set on fire.

The deed is supposed to have been the work of tramps, who have been numerous in the locality. Officers from Nashville went out to Paradise Ridge early Wednesday morning, carrying bloodhounds, and every endeavor will be made to discover the perpetrators of the terrible deed.

At the request of Minister Yang Yu, the treasury department has given the usual instructions for the extension of customs courtesies for the new envoy and his multitudinous suit and their baggage. The board will meet a month from now at Dayton, O. The present meeting was badly crippled by the illness and absence of members, and did little or nothing.

Spain's Struggle Hopeless.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—Spain is at the end of her string, and Cuban independence is in sight. This is the greatest news of the day in the national capital. It is an open secret in diplomatic circles that Spain has practically abandoned her effort to crush the Cuban patriots. The war in Cuba has now reached the negotiations stage. The question of the future is as to whether the people of the island will buy their independence or whether they will win it by the sword.

Within a short time the Spanish government will initiate negotiations with the United States looking to the settlement of the Cuban trouble.

NEARING HAVANA.

The Town of Calabazar Attacked by the Insurgents and Many Houses Burned.

NEW YORK, March 26.—A special cable dispatch to the Sun from Havana says:

The town of Calabazar, very near Havana, was attacked Tuesday by the insurgents under Aranguren. They burned many houses, pillaged several stores, and then retired. Maj. Albuerna and nine other Spanish officers, including five captains have been made prisoners by the insurgent leader, Telio Sanchez, brother of the late Gen. Serafin Sanchez. In the engagement previous to the surrender 29 Spanish soldiers were killed and many wounded.

LITTLE GREECE

Protest Against the Blockade of Crete by the Powers—It Is Declared Contrary to the Sentiments of Humanity.

ATHENS, March 27.—The government has handed to the representatives here of the several powers a note protesting against the blockade of Crete. The note declares that in view of the bonds uniting the Greeks and the Christians of Crete the blockade, which is depriving the island of the means of provisioning itself, is contrary to the sentiments of humanity inspiring the powers.

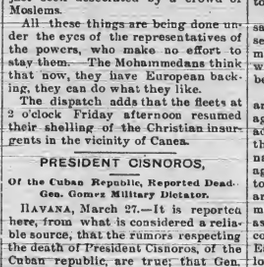
The president of the boule, in behalf of that body, has sent to Mr. Gladstone a message of gratitude for the stand he has taken in behalf of Greece and the Cretan Christians. The message says in part:

"All your glorious life has been full of combats for justice and liberty. Now that the Hellenic nation has risen to fight in favor of Crete, which is bedewed with blood, you come to uphold anew the rights of an oppressed race."

LONDON, March 27.—The Telegraph Saturday publishes a dispatch from Vienna stating that all the powers have now accepted the project to blockade the entire Greek coast, beginning with the ports of Piraeus, Volo, Corinth and Arta.

ATHENS, March 27.—For some as yet unexplained reason Crown Prince Constantine, who, it was announced Thursday night, would leave Athens at 4 o'clock Friday morning to assume command of the Greek forces in Thessaly, has not yet left the city. It is now reported that he will go to the Piraeus, whence he will sail for Volo, in Thessaly, Saturday evening.

LONDON, March 27.—The Canea correspondent of the Times telegraphs that many complaints are heard of the partiality shown by the powers to the Turks. He adds that Mohammedans have burned part of the village of Perivolia. Animals belonging to Turks are feeding upon the vines of Christians. The church of St. John has just been desecrated by a crowd of Moslems.



All these things are being done under the eyes of the representatives of the powers, who make no effort to stay them. The Mohammedans think that now, they have European backing, they can do what they like.

The dispatch adds that the fleets at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon resumed their shelling of the Christian insurgents in the vicinity of Canea.

PRESIDENT CISNEROS,

Of the Cuban Republic, Reported Dead—Gen. Gomez Military Dictator.

HAVANA, March 27.—It is reported here, from what is considered a reliable source, that the rumors respecting the death of President Cisneros, of the Cuban republic, are true; that Gen. Gomez has become military dictator of the patriot government, and that Gen. Calixto Garcia has been made commander-in-chief of the army.

SENOR SALVADOR CISNEROS.
President of the Provisional Government of the Cuban Republic.

No more welcome news has lately been received by Gen. Weyler in the palace, but it is not believed that the death of Cisneros will have any more disastrous effect upon the Cuban cause than did the death of Maceo. Maceo's murder seemed only to add to the patriot flames.

Proved to Be a Failure.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—Consul Buford, at Paso del Norte, Mex., reported to the state department that of the families who had come to the colony of Hidalgo, not a single one had remained after a short trial, and instead of the colony being a prosperous reality, with several hundred inhabitants, it appears to be a failure. The colonization company, which has concession in Chihuahua, has been advertising extensively in the United States, and some of its stock has been sold out at Kansas City and other places.

Rebel Stronghold Captured.

NEW YORK, March 27.—Senor Don Arturo Baldasato, the consul general for Spain, in this city, is in receipt of a telegram from the Spanish minister in Washington, reporting the capture of Imuso, a rebel stronghold in the Philippine islands.

Cavile Viejo, another stronghold, had also been surrounded and was in flames, the telegram said. Senor Baldasaco thinks the rebellion in the Philippine islands nearly at an end.

Desperado in Jail.

WASHINGTON, Ind., March 27.—John Slatton, who Wednesday evening fired a dozen shots at Sheriff Leeming and other officials who attempted to arrest him, was captured early Friday morning at the home of his brother, north of the city. Slatton was armed with a rifle, but the posse of deputy sheriffs covered him with revolvers and compelled him to surrender. He is now in jail.

TRENTON, N. J., March 27.—At Friday's session of the New Jersey Methodist conference, a vote was taken on the question of the admission of women as delegates to the general conference and resulted: In favor, 68; against, 103. There was no debate.

DENVER, Col., March 27.—Superintendent of Construction H. E. Jennison, of the Western Union Telegraph Co., died Friday as a result of being overcome by gas in the Busk tunnel, on the Colorado Midland railroad Friday.

THE MASSACRE

Of Seven Hundred Armenians at Tokat in Sivas by the Moslems.

Sir Philip Carrie, British Ambassador, Made a Vigorous Protest to the Porte—Arrest of Turkish Officials in Tokat Ordered—Special Commission.

CONSTANTINOPLE, March 26.—Further and probably more accurate details of the recent massacre of Armenians at Tokat in the Sivas district of Anatolia, have been received at the Armenian patriarchate here. The first report of the affair was issued by the government.

This declared that fifteen Armenians and three Mussulmans have been killed. Little reliance was placed in the report, for the officials have always made it a rule to understate the number of persons killed in the various massacres. Later information was received at the embassies showing that fully one hundred defenseless Armenians had fallen victims to the fury of the Moslems at Tokat, and this number, it was thought, was probably correct. The news received Thursday at the patriarchate shows that both statements were incorrect and that the number of victims was fully 700. It was stated at the patriarchate Thursday that these figures were obtained from reliable persons at Tokat and the vicinity, and that the number of victims stated is without doubt correct. Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador, made a most vigorous protest against the massacre in a note to the porte, a note which was said to have been the strongest ever delivered by an ambassador to the Turkish government. The result of his action was shown Thursday, when the sultan ordered the dismissal and arrest of the Turkish officials in Tokat who are suspected of complicity in the massacre and the appointment of a special commission to try them.

It is belived that the British ambassador will watch the trial closely to see that it does not prove a farce as so man trials of Moslems officials charged with the murder of Christians have been.

Mgr. Ormanian, the Armenian patriarch, has made a protest to the sultan against the murders at Tokat, and has added force to his protest by insisting that the sultan shall accept his resignation, which was tendered some time ago. At that time the sultan refused to accept it, and promised the patriarch that further concessions would be made to the Armenians. His majesty asked, however, that the granting of concessions be deferred until after Easter. The massacre at Tokat followed.

Eight Armenians were arrested here Thursday as a measure of precaution, the government fearing that the news of the Tokat massacre might precipitate an outbreak. The prisoners are suspected of having been engaged in an attempt to make a demonstration here.

IT IS EVIDENT

That Dr. Hunter Can Not Be Elected United States Senator, and May Withdraw.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 26.—The second joint ballot for United States senator was taken at noon Thursday, but without result. There are no changes from Wednesday's vote, except a closing up to Davie of sound-money democrats. The Hunter managers were afraid to attempt to force another ballot, and the joint session adjourned at 12:45.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 26.—A dispatch from Frankfort, Ky., to the Courier-Journal says Dr. W. G. Hunter can not be elected United States senator, and he might as well withdraw. Senator Stege, of Louisville, has notified Dr. Hunter that he will not vote for him again, and three other supporters will leave him Saturday unless he shows that he can win. There will be no election this week, but a permanent deadlock is next to impossible.

Dr. Hunter's managers were busy Thursday night getting signatures to an agreement never to desert Hunter. It is reported that 42 members signed the agreement, but it was not given to the press. Gov. Bradley's friends have overlooked no point to compass the defeat of Hunter, and Hunter has tried to deal Bradley his death blow, but has failed.

AN APPEAL

For Sympathy and Financial Aid Issued by the United Mine Workers.

COLUMBUS, O., March 26.—The national executive committee of the United mine workers issued an appeal to the public to-day for sympathy and financial aid. The circular describes the miners as being reduced to miserable poverty and quotes a Pittsburg paper to the effect that miners' children are seen driving dogs away from garbage and eating it themselves in the mining regions there. The committee by name, blames the New York and Cleveland Co., and its president and directors, whose names are also given, for bringing about the demoralized condition of the coal mining business. The miners announce that they are determined to end this state of affairs at once, and to that end solicit aid. The circular is indorsed by President Samuel Gompers.

McKinley Fills Two Naval Academy Vacancies.

The Appointees Are Sons of Army and Navy Officers.

Confidential Clerk Lamoreaux Resigns—Debate on the Tariff Bill—J. P. Smith Calls at the State Department—Other Washington Matters.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The president filled the two vacancies at the naval academy by the appointment of John Downs, jr., of Quincy, Mass., son of Lieut. John Downes, of the navy, and John Rodgers, jr., son of Lieut. Commander John Rodgers, executive officer of the battleship Indiana. The president has followed Mr. Cleveland's rule of making these appointments at large from sons of army and navy officers who have no other means of securing such appointments. The president has selected these names from a list of about fifty applicants and more applications have been coming to him daily from all parts of the country.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The necessity of the continued presence of a quorum of the committee of the whole was demonstrated at the beginning of Saturday's session of the house.

To the first paragraph that was read after the house had gone into the committee on the tariff bill, Mr. Richardson (dem., Tenn.) moved an amendment reducing the duty on whiting from one cent to half a cent. On the division the vote was yeas 14, nays 37, and on the announcement Mr. Richardson made the point of no quorum.

Chairman Sherman counted slowly and in ten minutes was enabled to announce 101 members present and that Mr. Richardson's amendment had been rejected.

The duty on acetate of lead white and in colors was increased half a cent a pound to four and three and one-half cents respectively.

Mr. Richardson called attention to the increase of rates proposed in the pending bill on the articles in the chemical schedules, and in reply to Mr. Dockery (dem., Mo.) said the duties in the Dingley bill were absolutely greater than in the McKinley bill. He gave in detail the average percentum of duties on the several schedules (14 in number) showing, as he claimed, an increase all along the line.

Mr Dingley responding to Mr. Richardson, said his speech showed how a juggling with figures could be made to show an apparent increase of duties when in fact there was an actual decrease. Except upon earthenware, glass, tobacco, sugar and silks, the duties in the pending bill were less than those in the McKinley bill and many other schedules, the figures were those of the present law.

Mr. Dockery (dem., Mo.) said that a bill that increased the taxation upon the people $113,000,000, and imposed an average rate of duty of 57.03 per cent., while the Wilson bill was but 39.04 per cent. and the McKinley bill 49.58 per cent. was likely to cause the people to call attention to it frequently and forcibly.

Mr. Hopkins (rep., Ill.): "The bill proposes to increase the revenue of the government $113,000,000, not the taxation of the people, because the bulk of that sum will come from the foreigners who pay the tax. [Loud democratic laughter.] And if the gentlemen had taken as long to study the question as they have to perfect that guffaw, they would know it to be true."

Replying to a question, Mr. Hopkins said the reason why no duty was put on hides was because they were a by-product. No one raised cattle for the hides, but for the meat products; and the country could not possibly produce enough hides, or more than a small percentage, to meet the demands of trade.

They had been on the free list since 1873, and the consensus of opinion was that there should not be a change.

D. P. Lamoreaux, confidential clerk to Commissioner Lamoreaux, of the general land office, has resigned. He left for his home in Wisconsin Friday morning.

Joseph P. Smith and two other applicants for the place of director of the bureau of American republics, called at the state department Saturday for examination. The examining board was also there, but the examination was postponed until Monday.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 29.—Richard McCullough, night engineer at the mines of the J. W. Ellsworth Coal Co., at Industry, Allegheny county, four miles north of West Newton, was fatally shot by his wife Sunday. McCullough was brought to the Mercy hospital at 10 o'clock Sunday morning and died at 10 o'clock Sunday night. His wife was arrested and claims the shooting was accidental.

Two Brothers Drowned.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 29.—Elmer and William Dewall, aged eight and five years respectively, were drowned in Chartler's creek at McKee's Rocks Sunday. The boys were playing on the bank of the creek when the ground gave way and William fell into the stream. Elmer jumped in to save his brother, but as the current was swift both were drowned.

Fanatics Fight.

RIO JANEIRO, March 29.—Fighting is now going on in Bahia between the federal troops and the fanatics. The fanatics are reported to be retiring slowly toward the great forests. It is feared that the combined movement to surround Constabeiro will be a failure. In Uruguay the rebels are forming to attack the government forces.

Negotiating for Peace.

LONDON, March 29.—A dispatch from Madrid to the Central News says that negotiations for the conclusion of peace are in progress between the government of Spain and the Cuban insurgent leaders with favorable prospects.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—SENATE—Not in session.

HOUSE—The house Saturday pushed through the two remaining "left-over" appropriation bills, according to Friday's schedule, the agricultural bill carrying $6,842,902 and the Indian carrying $7,570,240. The sentiment of the house against the provision in the Indian bill opening to entry, under the mining laws, the lands in the Uncompahgre reservation in Utah, containing gilsonite or asphaltum deposits, which was inserted in the bill by the senate, was so intense that it was stricken out by unanimous consent.

WASHINGTON, March 23.—SENATE.—The legislative session of the senate Monday lasted but 49 minutes, the arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain being taken up thereafter behind closed doors. In the short open session nearly 200 bills were introduced and many others were reported back from committees. Included in the latter were the "free homestead" bill and the immigration bill, with the provision as to Canadian laborers eliminated — both of which were under consideration in the last congress, the latter failing to become a law owing to President Cleveland's veto. Of the four great appropriation bills—the agricultural, the Indian, the sundry civil and the general deficiency—which also failed for lack of Mr. Cleveland's signature, which were reintroduced and passed by the house, were referred to the committee on appropriations.

HOUSE—The tariff debate was fairly and regularly launched in the house Monday and will be kept up for the next three days, after which time the discussion will be on amendments that may be ordered.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Sherman, (rep. N. Y.) as chairman of the committee of the whole. The opening speech was made by Mr. Dingley, (rep. Me.) chairman of the committee on ways and means, and was an exhaustive explanation and defense of the measure. The first speech in antagonism to it was made by Mr. Wheeler (D., Ala.), a member of the committee on ways and means. At 5 o'clock, under the order governing the consideration of the tariff bill, the house took a recess until 8 o'clock, the evening session to be devoted to a continuance of the debate. Mr. Hopkins (R., Ill.) was designated to act as chairman at the evening session.

WASHINGTON, March 24.—SENATE—The senate indulged Tuesday in an almost one sided denunciation of the civil service law and its administration. The matter came up in the shape of a resolution offered by Mr. Allen (pop., Neb.), directing the committee on civil service to inquire into the dismissal of some half dozen employes (microscopists) of the bureau of animal industry in South Omaha, Neb. Mr. Allen's motion, after a long debate, was agreed to, with an amendment. Bills passed: To establish the official survey of fractional townships in Nebraska; to amend the act repealing the timber culture laws; the Torrey bankruptcy bill (modified) was reported and was, on motion of Mr. Hoar, made the unfinished business, not to be called up immediately, however. A constitutional amendment to make the 30th of April inauguration day was introduced by Mr. Hoar. Mr. Turpie (dem., Ind.) made an argument in favor of a constitutional amendment to make United States senators elective by popular vote instead of by state legislatures.

HOUSE—Tuesday was spent in debate on the tariff bill. The senate joint resolution appropriating $15,000 to enable the secretary of war to purchase tents for the houseless victims of the Mississippi river flood was agreed to. At 5 o'clock a recess was taken until 8 o'clock, the evening session to be occupied on the tariff bill.

WASHINGTON, March 25.—SENATE—The senate spent only half an hour in open session Wednesday, the remainder of the time being given to the consideration of the arbitration treaty behind closed doors. The agricultural bill—one of the four money bills that failed at the last session—was reported back in the shape in which it passed the house last week, and was placed on the calendar. It will be acted on at an early day. A bill prohibiting the exhibition in the District of Columbia of kinetoscopic illustrations of prize fights, and also prohibiting the transportation of materials therefor through the mails or through the avenues of interstate commerce, was introduced by Mr. Hoar (rep., Mass.) and was referred to the judiciary committee.

HOUSE—Large audiences in the galleries, and an unusually large attendance on the floor of the house of representatives heard the tariff bill's general debate on the tariff bill. The principal speeches of the day were those of Messrs. Johnson, of North Dakota; Grosvenor, of Ohio, and Evans, of Kentucky; republican members of the committee on ways and means in favor of the bill, and of Mr. McMillin (Tenn.), the oldest democratic member, against it. Other speeches were made by Messrs. Fox (dem., Miss.), Sims (dem., Tenn.), Williams (dem., Miss.), Terry (dem., Ark.), Sayers (dem., Tex.) and Maddox (dem., Ga.) against the bill, and by Messrs. Apsley (rep., R. I.) and Walker (rep., Mass.) in favor of it. The general debate will be closed Thursday.

WASHINGTON, March 26.—SENATE—The senate spent two hours and forty minutes in discussing in secret session the pending amendments to the arbitration treaty. No special progress was made toward the final result before taking up that matter the question of acting on the appointment of senators by governors of states, where the state legislature should have elected senators, came up in the case of John A. Henderson, appointed by the governor of Florida to fill the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of Senator Call on the third of March. After the executive session the bankruptcy bill was taken up and read in full, and then Mr. Nelson (rep., Minn.) offered a substitute for it, which was also read in full. The reading of the two bills occupied an hour and twenty minutes.

HOUSE—Thursday was the last day of general debate on the tariff bill under the order adopted last week, but because Mr. Bailey's illness would not allow him to speak Thursday afternoon, an agreement was made to give two hours to general debate just before taking the vote next Wednesday, which will be occupied by himself and Mr. Dingley.

WASHINGTON, March 27.—SENATE—With the exception of the first hour the whole of Friday's session was spent by the senate behind closed doors, where not only was the arbitration treaty discussed in some of its bearings, but also the party organization of the senate—no definite results being arrived at on either subject. During the opening session the civil service commission was subjected to another raking down at the hands of Mr. Gallinger (rep., N. H.). Resolutions of inquiry were offered and adopted as to the future disposition of the Union Pacific railway property, and as to the arrest and imprisonment of the American sailors in Cuba. At 4 p. m. the senate adjourned until Monday next.

HOUSE—The consideration of the tariff bill under the five-minute rule for the purpose of amendment which it was expected would be greatly in the hands, opened with the liveliest political contest of the session, lasting for nearly three hours. It began promptly on the reading of the prefatory paragraph of the bill, to which Mr. Dockery (dem., Mo.) offered an amendment authorizing the secretary of the treasury to admit free of duty any article the production and price of which was controlled by a trust in the United States.

THE SITUATION

In Greece Is Reported to Be Extremely Grave.

War Inevitable If the King Recalls His Army From Crete.

Cretans and Greeks Board a Steamer and Overawe the Crew—Two Entire Cargo Consisting of Supplies for the Turks and Combined Powers Jettisoned.

LONDON, March 29.—The Graphic Monday gives prominence to a statement which it claims to have received from an unquestionable source, to the effect that the Greek situation is extremely grave. It says that with the departure of Crown Prince Constantine from Athens to take command of the troops in Thessaly, the die seems to have been cast. War would have been inevitable if Greece recalled her army. It would march to Athens and dethrone the king. The most serious element of the situation is the undoubted fact, despite denials, that the concert of the powers is no longer solid. There has not been an actual rupture but the members have come to the conclusion that concerted action is a failure. If the so-called concert continues for a week it can not continue longer.

The statement ascribes the position to the impatience of the powers with Greece's reckless conduct and Great Britain's reluctance to coerce her. The powers will not accept Lord Salisbury's proposal for the establishment of a neutral zone a mile wide on either side of the Turko-Grecian boundary because Turkey holds all the best strategic positions on the frontier, and fears that if she withdraws her troops the Greeks will find a pretext later to return and occupy the positions which would enable her to invade Turkey. This would prevent the powers localizing the war, would set all the balkans aflame, induce general brigandage in Turkey, induce Austria and Russia to interfere and blow up the European mine.

ATHENS, March 29.—Saturday 600 armed Cretans and Greeks suddenly boarded the steamer Heraklion, which was lying at the Piraeus, and overawed the crew by a display of revolvers. They then proceeded to jettison the entire cargo of the steamer, which consisted of flour for the Turkish troops at Canea, 25,000 eggs for the Russian fleet, and quantities of provisions for the English fleet in Cretan waters.

There was a remarkable display of enthusiasm when Crown Prince Constantine went on board the royal yacht en route for Volo, in Thessaly, where he will disembark and proceed to the frontier. The houses of the town were brilliantly illuminated, and there were frequent feux de joi.

CANEA, March 29.—Three hundred international troops have been dispatched to the village of Outsonnaria, where are located the springs which furnishes this city with its water supply. They will guard the springs to prevent their capture by the insurgents who were they to obtain possession of the water supply, would practically have Canea at their mercy.

Since the capture of Mulaxa by the insurgents they have massed themselves on the heights above the town of Suda and commenced an attack upon the Izzedin fort. Sunday the Italian warships in Suda bay, supporting the Turkish garrison, fired upon the Christians.

THE GIBSON MURDER.

He Was Choked to Death While His Heartless Wife Lay in Bed Beside Him.

MONTGOMERY, W. Va., March 29.—Work was suspended in the old mines Sunday. The blackened bones of Chas. Gibson lie in a box in a window of the mayor's office and present a gruesome sight to the scores of passersby who come to look with morbid curiosity.

The Gibson woman seemed perfectly indifferent when asked about her husband's murder, and pleaded with the officers to deal leniently with Viars and Lewis, saying they had been very good to her and that she believes that her husband was killed in self-defense. In the same breath she admits that the three men choked him to death, and it is said she lay beside him in bed while the deed was done. Thirty dollars and a watch was taken from the victim.

Clark Lewis, Wylie Lewis, Albert Vairs, John Hudson and Wilbur Slaughter, charged with the murder of Charles Gibson, have all been arrested and are in jail. The wife of the murdered man is also under arrest and is charged with being an accomplice in the crime. Gibson's body was found in a mine.

"OLIVER OPTIC,"

The Well-Known Writer of Juvenile Fiction, Passes Away.

BOSTON, March 29.—Wm. T. Adams (Oliver Optic) died shortly after 9 o'clock Saturday morning.

Mr. Adams had been sick for a long time with heart trouble. He was 75 years of age.

For more than thirty years he lived and worked at his home in Boston, on Dorchester avenue, except when taking his summer trips abroad or through this country.

They Blew Out the Gas.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 29.—Harry O. O'Neill, of Fayette City, was found dead, and Jos. Marker was found dying in the Oxford hotel Sunday night. They had gone to bed Saturday night and had apparently blown out the gas with the usual result. O'Neill was 23 years of age. Marker was taken to a hospital and it is not thought he will recover.

John Lattimore Sentenced to Death.

CHICAGO, March 29.—John Lattimore was Saturday sentenced to be hanged for the murder, last November, of Louis Marvic, a boarding-house keeper on the Drainage canal. His accomplice, Henry Rucker, was given 25 years at hard labor.

THE LEVEES

On the Lower Mississippi Show Signs of Succumbing—The Situation at Helena, Ark., Is Pronounced Very Ticklish.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., March 27.—The river Friday night stands 36.55, a slight decline for the 24 hours. Reports from southern river points Friday evening are not altogether reassuring. The situation at Helena is pronounced ticklish, and at Greenville decidedly precarious, the levees at these points showing signs of succumbing to the water pressure. Large forces are employed upon them day and night, state convicts being at Greenville in force. Gov. McLaurin also went there Friday evening in response to a telegram. But there was a small break in the Arkansas district Friday night, but it is viewed with no particular concern.

A number of other Mississippi points report the levees somewhat critical, with water crowded over them in places, while in others they are sloughing off. Helena reiterated Friday night the charge that Desha levees had been cut, parties declaring that they saw the levee board engineer do the cutting. The main witness against the alleged levee cutting engineer says he protested, but without avail, and stood on the levee and saw his cribs and contents, some of his live stock, fowls and household effects swept away by the water thus let through the levees.

JACKSON, Miss., March 27.—A special from Greenville says that the river was seven inches higher during 24 hours ending at noon Friday and more is coming. The town of Greenville, between which and the river there is a protection levee, is now six feet below the level of the water, but the natives have confidence in their ability to hold the fort. A letter from Greenwood says:

"The levees seem strong, but the water is within nine inches of the top and rising. A break would mean the destruction of millions of dollars' worth of property in the great delta, where crops of cotton and corn have already been pitched."

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 27.—A dispatch from Valdosta, Ga., says the rapidity with which the Withlacoochee river rose Thursday night indicates that there was a water spout in the country about here. The river rose at the rate of two feet an hour and nearly twenty feet during the night. It ran over the tracks of the Plant system at Ousley station and washed away a large part of the bridge there. All traffic on that line west of this city is suspended.

Seven washouts are reported between Valdosta and Montgomery. The construction trains on both roads here are working night and day to make repairs.

A dispatch from Quitman, Ga., reports the surrounding country flooded and Quitman cut off from the outside world. Several trestles have been washed away.

THIRD JOINT BALLOT.

Dr. Hunter Still Two Votes Short of Election to the United States Senate.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 27.—The third joint senatorial ballot still found Dr. W. G. Hunter two votes short, although only 66 were necessary to a choice, there being three pairs. The vote was: Hunter, 64; Blackburn, 46; Davie, 13; Boyle, 6; Stone 1. The republicans who were paired had heretofore voted for Hunter; one was Senator Steg, who announced Thursday night that he would not vote for Hunter again. On motion of the Hunter people the joint session adjourned without taking another ballot. The republican state central committee deny the story that they have prepared an address condemning Gov. Bradley for his course in the senatorial contest.

FRANKFORT, Ky., March 27.—A story was afloat Friday night that the anti-Hunter leaders will attempt to prevent a quorum at Saturday's joint session, owing to a persistent report that the Hunter people have secured the vote of another democrat and will attempt to elect while so many members are paired.

Destructive Fire at Des Moines.

DES MOINES, Ia., March 27.—The wholesale and retail millinery house of M. Riegelman & Co., suffered a loss of about $80,000 by fire Friday afternoon. The second and third floors were burned out and the stock on the first floor was ruined by water and smoke. The insurance amounts to $30,000. The stock was worth about $160,000. They will resume business at once in new quarters.

An Alderman Found Dead in Bed.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., March 27.—Alderman J. Rafferty, of the Sixth ward, was found dead in bed Friday. The cause of his sudden death has not yet been ascertained. He was at his work in the city assessor's office Thursday apparently in usual health. He was one of the best known young men about town. Mr. Rafferty was 30 years old. He leaves a widow and two children.

The Hazelton Wreck Victims.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 27.—There is little hope now of recovering the bodies of the men in the Evansville & Terre Haute wreck at Hazelton. Divers have found the bottom of the smoking car, but all the top and seats have been washed away, so that if there were any bodies beside that of Conductor Sears in the car the fact will probably never be fully established.

Flood in the Illinois River.

BEARDSTOWN, Ill., March 27.—The highwater is assuming alarming proportions. The Illinois river is four miles wide here and steadily rising. Many families living on the bottom lands have taken refuge in the bluffs. The river is within 18 inches of the disastrous flood of five years ago.

May Abolish the Death Penalty.

DENVER, Col., March 27.—The state senate has passed the Engley bill providing for the abolition of capital punishment. The bill recently passed the house and now only waits the governor's signature.

TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL

Everything Will Be Ready for the Opening Day.

An Unparalleled Display of Flowers is Promised by the Management — Notable Conventions to Be Held.

(Special Nashville (Tenn.) Letter.)

The work on the unfinished buildings of the Tennessee Centennial exposition at Nashville was pushed with vigor during the past week, especially on the magnificent structure for the United States government, and all buildings will be ready for the exhibits by April 1, or April 10. Such a satisfactory state of affairs reflects the greatest credit on the executive, and the public will be thus spared the endless number of disappointments that are always occasioned by delays. The Tennessee Centennial exposition will be ready for the opening day, May 1, and the sight presented will be incomparably grand. A description of the handsome and stately buildings has previously been given, so suffice it to say that it is the unanimous verdict of all competent judges who have visited the exposition grounds that from an architectural standpoint the world has never before seen so many majestic and infinitely beautiful buildings in such an area. Each building is "a dream," from a poetical view; "frozen music," as some one has said, and is a complete study in itself.

The Parthenon, for instance, is an exact reproduction of the "noblest feat of architecture" that crowned the summit of the Acropolis at Athens. The Machinery building is a specimen of the purest style of Greek architecture, and the Agriculture building is a triumph of the builders' art, and, in fact, the Minerals and Forestry building, the History building, Commerce building and all the rest tell their own story, and tell it in language eloquent and sincere.

During the past week a number of meetings of the executive committee were held, and it has been decided to hold a live stock exhibit upon a scale never before attempted in the south, and the first amount placed to the credit of the special committee was $30,000 for premiums. The live stock industry in Tennessee is far greater than most people imagine, and it is increasing every year. Another specially interesting feature will be the floral display, and for the past year work has been in progress to perfect the greatest flower show, au naturel, as the critics say, ever seen on this continent.

By "au naturel" in this instance is meant that the flowers will be seen in bloom where they were grown, in the flower beds on the vast lawns, and arranged in an endless number of beautiful forms and devices. In the beautiful lake will be all the varieties of lotus and water lilies known to science, and the banks will be fringed with shrubs of rare beauty.

Another and a very attractive feature will be the military camp on the grounds, where a battery of United States artillery will be stationed, and there will be daily parades, sunset gun, and flag lowering, with all the imposing military ceremonies.

To attempt to give any idea of the exhibits in the various buildings would result in a complete failure, for no pen can tell of the wonders and triumphs in art and science that will be displayed. The electrical display will prove to be one of the wonders of the nineteenth century, and the art display has never been excelled. In machinery the triumphs of the crafts are bewildering, and in commerce, hygiene, education and transportation the vast strides that science has made during the past few years are made apparent.

A number of conventions and public gatherings are to be held during the progress of the exposition, and up to the present time, March 20, about a hundred have been arranged for and the railway companies have made rates lower than ever before. For instance, on June 22, 23 and 24, the confederate veterans will hold their annual reunion and the railways have made a rate of one cent a mile. On those days over 125,000 people will be on the grounds.

Then July 20 will be "Baptist Day." The Baptist Young People's association meets at Chattanooga on July 18 and 19, and on the following day will visit the exposition. On May 1—3 the Essenic Knights will hold a meeting of the supreme senate, and a procession will include 20,000 of the brethren. The Surviving Terry Texas Rangers will meet June 1 to 5; Tennessee Press association June 15, and June 29-30 Sigma Alpha Epsilon and a number of others. There are to be many more meetings, for which no dates have been given, including the National Conference State Board of Health, National Traveling Passenger Agents' association, Commercial Travelers and many more. The large cities have special days, such as Chicago Day, Cincinnati Day, New York Day, and so forth. June 1 is Governor's Day, and it is the 100th anniversary of Tennessee's admission into the union. On that day over 150,000 people will visit the exposition.

There is now over five weeks to the opening day, and everything is so far advanced that, barring accident, there will be no delays.

There is another and really very important feature that must not be overlooked. "Vanity Fair," an improved adaptation of the Midway Plaisance and Streets of Cairo, with the spice of the mobile without the objectionable features. At the Tennessee centennial "Vanity Fair" has assumed enormous proportions and it is still growing. There are already more novelties than have ever before been collected together in the south, and they include palaces of illusions, haunted spring, Chinese village and theater, cycloramas, battle of Gettysburg, electrical illusions, mirror maze, an ostrich farm from Southern California, Venetian canal, and, in fact, it would be almost as easy to state what will not be there as what will be.

The music will be inexpressibly grand. Among the noted bands will be Victor Herbert's (formerly Gilmore's), the great Innes, Bellestedt and Ballen-

berg, the Conteriros and several others, and also the grand organ, one of the largest in the south, now being erected in the auditorium by Hood & Hastings, of Boston. This auditorium has a seating capacity for 6,000 people, and the acoustic properties are said to be perfect. In fact, all along the line everything is on the same grand scale, and those who, in late years, have visited numbers of exhibitions in all parts of the world emphatically assert that not one of them can compare with the Tennessee Centennial exposition.

Too Much of a Good Thing.

An old farmer went into a grocer's shop and ordered a sovereign's worth of goods. When they were ready for delivery he laid down a couple of half crowns in payment. This isn't enough," called the shop assistant, as the old farmer was about to leave. "Oh, yes; that's all right," replied the customer. "I've got permission from the judge to pay five shillin' in the pound." The farmer had lately settled an insolvency upon this basis, and expected to continue that method indefinitely.—Tit-Bits.

CROP AND STOCK.

In Central Kentucky wheat looks well and is growing nicely.

J. W. Cole, of Anderson county, has 55 ewes that are raising 110 lambs. W. H. Crossfield has 27 ewes that are raising 55 lambs.

Mr. H. F. Hillenmeyer, of the Blue Grass Nurseries, is not inclined to the opinion that peaches are badly injured or killed. He considers the prospect for all kinds of fruit above the average for this period.

About 800 cattle at Mt. Sterling on court day; quality fair; no good feeders on the market. Sales were brisk. Some yokes of cattle sold as high as 4 cents, but the best sale of steers was at from $3 25 to $3 60.

At Danville on court day there was a healthy demand for good stock cattle and those sold brought good prices. Forty head of 900 pound cattle sold at $3 65, 100 good stockers at $3 75 to $4. Plug horses and mules dull.

The Democrat has straight information that several offers have been made in Fayette county, of 75 cents a bushel for the growing crop of wheat. Mr. Leland Moore, son of C. C. Moore, has 250 acres which he thinks will make 30 bushels if conditions remain favorable. He has been offered 75 cents for it at harvest time, but has refused the offer. —Harrodsburg Democrat.

Notwithstanding several trying ordeals, says the report of Lucas Moore, Commissioner of Agriculture, the wheat crop passes the winter with conditions averaging 88. In the opinion of 118 corsespondents out of 144 the crop has suffered the cause assigned being sudden and hard freezing while without snow protection. The per cent of the '96 crop still in farmers' hands averages 9 per cent, and in view of the shortness of that crop it may be said that there is practically no wheat so held. The price of No. 2 wheat in the State averages 84 cts. per bushel. The recent rain have wrought great damage, both to the crops in low lands and in washing the soil.

STATE NEWS.

There is a negro candidate for Jailer in Lincoln county, and the local paper wants the Republicans to vote for him.

The Frankfort penitentiary investigation has developed that two female convicts, who have been in prison some years, each gave birth to a child recently. One of the women is white, the other, colored.

Lafe Brooks was taken back from the Lexington jail to West Liberty to be again tried for killing Gus McKenzie. He received a death sentence in his former trial and last week was given 21 years.

A ten thousand dollars reward has been offered for the arrest and conviction of toll gate raiders in Garrard county.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[News]

The fruit seems safe up to this time and the prospects for a good crop are flattering.

The County Judge is very busy apportioning the road hands on the turnpike system and appointing the overseers.

J. J. Hardin bought for L. L. Smith, of Louisville, a crop of tobacco of 11,225 lbs., of F. A. Taylor and Chas. Wainscott at 6c for three-fourths of crop and 1½ for balance. This crop was considered an extra crop, over two-thirds of it was leaf and lugs.

There was a large crowd in Owenton last Monday, county court day, and although there was an open license saloon for the first time in fifteen years, there was very little drunkenness. The truth is there is no more drinking now than there was under the local option system.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

D. E. CASTLEMAN Chairman,
B. L. RICE, Secretary.

Indianapolis grain dealers and mills are receiving reports from all over Indiana indicating a damage to wheat extending from the Ohio river to the Michigan state line on the north. From reports they have received the damage in the state, taken as a whole, will be from 25 to 30 per cent. Gibson county, which is always reckoned upon to bring in the biggest wheat crop of any county in the state, will not, it is predicted, make half a crop. It is said that in central Indiana not 5 per cent of last year's crop is now remaining in farmers' hands, and like conditions prevails all over the state.—Lawrenceburg Press.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 7, 1897. NO. 24.

THE Democrats elected their city ticket in Cincinnati, Monday, by majorities ranging from 337 to 7,404.

THE House has passed the bill reducing the salary of a Circuit Judge from $3,000 to $2,500 per annum. The bill will encounter strong opposition in the Senate, and it is very doubtful if it passes.

STORER won the first heat over Senator Foraker in the contest for Assistant Secretary of State, but Foraker will oppose his confirmation by the Senate, and may yet succeed in knocking him out of the job.

W. E. VEST's announcement as a candidate for surveyor will be found in the proper column. He is a good and faithful official, and his long experience in the office gives him especial qualification for the performance of its duties.

SECRETARY BLISS has incurred the displeasure of the politicians by promoting a Democrat in his department from a $1,400 to $2,000 per annum position. Several of the pie hunters in the Republican party would have been very thankful for the job.

GLANDERS has appeared among the horses in Bourbon county, and a bill has been introduced in the legislature requiring the animals to be killed, and provides that the State shall pay not to exceed $50 for each horse killed. If the legislature is not careful it will provide a substitute for a market for plug horses. It would be better to provide that the county in which the animal is required to be killed shall pay for it. But why should a glandered animal be paid for? An animal with that disease has no value and there is no sound reason for requiring the State or even a county, to pay for it if destroyed.

The Courier-Journal a few weeks go was expressing its willingness to accept the highest of high tariffs rather than embarrass the Republicans in their efforts to do nothing with the finances. Today it is deploring the fact that Democrats are not getting together in opposition to the tariff. But they are getting together on the tariff. Harmony is the watchword of the tariff, and not even the support of the Courier-Journal can sow dissensions in the ranks. That newspaper is about to "flop" on the harmony issue, as it "flopped" on the fight on the constitution on silver, on every public question in the past ten years. But the united party can survive even the aid of the Courier-Journal. Forward!—Louisville Post.

THE Senatorial contest at Frankfort has developed an unusual state of affairs in the Republican party in Kentucky. When the General Assembly convened in special session on the thirteenth of last month, the Republicans had a majority on joint ballot and three gold Democrats voting with them, but with this advantage in their favor insubordination prevailed in the ranks until the rank and file of the party became so incensed at the conduct of their Governor and several of the Representatives, many indignation meetings have been held in which Governor Bradley and the bolting members were denounced in strong terms, but even this did not bring them into line for the caucus nominee, and the crevasse in the Republican party in this State has been growing wider and deeper ever since the legislature reconvened. Let'er go.

[Louisville Post.]

In public and in private life Dr. Hunter has shown himself at least the equal of Gov. Bradley.

Twice in Congress, Dr. Hunter has served his district well and been faithful to his party pledges and to his party associates.

Mr. Bradley has been one year in office, and has twice conspired to defeat his party nominee.

As a political leader Dr. Hunter has shown great capacity. He managed the campaign of 1895 with consummate skill; he was alert, far-seeing, untiring in his attention to details and full of resources. But for Dr. Hunter there would have been no Gov. Bradley.

In private life Dr. Hunter is faithful to his friends; a good citizen, a man whose personal character in all his relations is free from reproach.

In mental endowments he is the equal of any Republican leader in Kentucky, and in all the quantities of a Senator superior to Gov. Bradley. He is a man of few words, but his actions accord with his words, and his performances equal his promises.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, April 2nd, 1897.

There is no limit to Republican audacity. Not only was the McKinley tariff bill number two put through the House—forced through is nearer true—before an opportunity had been given members to go through even the farce of offering amendments to have them overruled by the chair, instead of being voted down by the members, to more than about one-sixth of the entire bill, but an amendment was forced down the throats of the republican members which is generally conceded to be unconstitutional, and to be in direct conflict with a decision handed down by the U. S. Supreme Court since the Wilson tariff bill became a law. This amendment makes the duties which will finally be imposed by the bill go into effect April 1, although no one expects the bill to become a law for at least three months, and no one has any means of knowing how the duties will stand when the bill passes the Senate. This amendment is a bluff pure and simple, intended to frighten importers into stopping importations while the bill is pending in the Senate. It it works, the importers are a timid set, as there are no lawyers of any prominence who regard the amendment as worth the paper it is printed on.

Mr. McKinley is still daily wrestling with the office-seekers, but he isn't making many appointments and the few that he is making are unsatisfactory to the rank and file. He has sprung a new dodge on the Senators and Representatives. When he gets ready to make a personal appointment he lets the Senators and Representatives from the same State know his intention, thus giving them the opportunity to save their prestige by adding their endorsement. It may be imagined that this sort of thing isn't pleasant to the Senators and Representatives, but they are afraid to kick at this stage of the game.

Representative "Champ" Clark, of Missouri, made a semi-humorous speech on the tariff bill, just before the gag rule under which it was forced through the House stopped all talk, which contained some very serious ideas. For instance, he said: "If this is not a sectional bill, how does it happen that the Western farmers find their green hides not only on the fence, but on the free list, while the New England shoe manufacturer has a high tariff on his finished products? How does it happen that cotton growers find their products on the free list while the cotton manufacturers have theirs on the protected list? I will tell you why. It was stated with brutal frankness by the gentleman from Indiana, the other day, that the Southern and Western people would have to vote the republican ticket or what is equivalent to that, vote for a high tariff, or else be debarred from the benefits of your tariff legislation. "Mr. Clark's concluding words were: "We may be fools and leather heads and all that sort of thing, but I tell you, gentlemen, the people living west of the Alleghany Mountains and south of the Potomac have got sense enough to know when they are sand-bagged and held up; and fools as we are, we have some rights that the New England highwaymen ought to respect."

Senator Hansbrough's measure entitled "a bill to prevent inventors and others from being deceived and defrauded by alleged patent attorneys" is now betore the Senate Committee on Patents. The bill is the result of numerous complaints which have come to Washington, and is intended to put a stop to a practice which makes the U. S. Government appear in the eyes of some people as an abettor of a lottery scheme. It makes it unlawful for patent attorneys or solicitors to offer or award any prize or premium or chance to win one, as an inducement to lure inventors into entertering alleged competitions of ideas, and provides as penalties fines for $500 to $1,000 or imprisonment from six months to one year. The bill also directs the Commissioner of Patents to prepare rules of practice for patent attorneys.

Senator Foraker has introduced a bill to permit pooling by railroads. This speakes for itself. Only last week the U. S. Supreme Court decided that railroad pooling was illegal, and now a Republican Senator promptly comes forward with a bill to meet the Court's decision and to legalize railroad pooling, which is only another name for railroad trusts. It seems that all the campaign debts to corporations and trusts were not paid in the tariff bill.

The new Republican members of the Senate did so much vigorous kicking that a Republican caucus has decided to try to fill the vacancies on Senate Committees. Whether they succeed will depend on how much they try to grab. Senator Gorman, chairman of the Democratic steering committee, made them a fair offer weeks ago—that Republican vacancies be filled by Republicans, Democratic vacancies by Democrats and Populist vacancies by Populists. They have so far refused to accept that offer.

Pith of the Press.

Richmond Pantagraph (Rep.): The Little Six at Frankfort ought to be strung up by their thumbs and strapped a thousand each.

Peoria Herald: It must be acknowledged that the Kentucky Legislature, while it is not doing much business, is having lots of fun.

New York Advertiser: It can be said for ex-Queen Lil that her chances for restoration are at least no worse than Mr. Cleveland's.

Cleveland Leader: It seems to be almost as hard for a Kentucky Legislature to elect a Senator as for a camel to crawl through the eye of a needle.

Hopkinsville Banner (Rep.): Gov. Bradley is a great man, but he has done more towards ruining the Republican party in Kentucky than any man in the State.

Owingsville Democrat: Lost, strayed or stolen—Six votes from the Republican party at Frankfort. A liberal reward will be paid for their return to Dr. Hunter, and no questions asked.

Sandy Herald: "The one word, harmony, is all that is needed for State success for the Democratic party. Let's have the needed quantity. Everybody join in the chorus and let's make the welkin' ring."

Glasgow Times: "Harmony in Democratic ranks is the one thing needful just now to insure party success. Without it, the little we now hold may be taken away from us; with it, all things may become ours."

Dallas News: The motion of a member of the Kentucky Legislature to remove that august body to Louisville to avoid small-pox in the penitentiary must have been a joke. What show would small-pox have in the Kentucky Legislature?

New Haven Union: Ohio editors have called Senator Sherman "The Human Icicle," and have accused him of being unable to weep anything save ice-water tears, but the meanest thing on record is by the scribe who says that "he hasn't a red corpuscle in all of his blood."

Philadelphia Inquirer: One of ex-Ambassador Bayard's English horses has arrived at New York, but the ex Ambassador has not yet had the courage to show up. Still, the horse wasn't foolish enough to allude to the people of the United States as "a violent people." He had too much horse sense.

Livingston Press: "The Evening Post's effort to bring on a harmony love feast in the Democratic party is the most important step taken by that able newspaper. It is bringing in the silver sheaves as well as the golden. Harmony is a good word, and the purpose of the Evening Post is just as good. Keep it up brother."

THOSE who read the daily papers closely are better posted as to what is taking place in the political field at Frankfort, than many who are on the ground.

THE Covington Branch of the Northern Bank of Kentucky, has gone out of business. Until within a few years ago it was one of the best banking institutions in the West, but of late it has not been making the money to justify its continuance in business. Nobody will lose anything by the bank.

Slavery will be abolished in the Niger country on the date marking the sixtieth anniversary of Queen Victoria's coronation.

Large cities change rapidly in these times. Boston's new railway terminal will require the clearing away of more than 200 buildings.

A leading railway journal says that 300 lines, aggregating 17,511 miles, are under construction in this country, but that only 20 per cent. will be finished this year.

After reading several articles advising women how to look young one becomes impressed with the idea that perhaps one of the best ways is to refrain from worrying about it.

The New York Ledger mentions the striking fact that when Robert Bonner bought his first trotting horse in 1856 only 19 horses, living and dead, had trotted a mile in 2:30. Now there are more than 13,000 in the list.

A Boston writer says that science "has demonstrated the existence of a finer ether in which a finer body lives and moves." The statement, while interesting as it stands, could be improved by a few particulars.

The recent decision of the supreme court of the United States on railroad trusts reaches all kinds of monopolies in restraint of trade and upholds the Sherman anti-trust law of 1890 at every point as valid, applicable and constitutional.

The air is so clear in the Arctic regions that conversation can be carried on easily by persons two miles apart. It has been asserted on good authority that at Gibraltar the human voice has been distinctly heard at a distance of ten miles.

San Francisco is alarmed about the heavy Japanese immigration, and will ask that the Chinese exclusion act be applied to them. Some of the California papers contend that the greatest danger of the state is that it may become orientalized.

The production of aluminium in the United States has increased from 163,000 pounds in 1891 to 1,300,000 pounds in 1896, the price in the same time declining from eight dollars to 40 cents a pound. A place for the new metal in the industries of the country is assured.

Farmer Brandt, of Kansas, put a "few pounds of powder" into his stove "to blow the soot out of the chimney" and people are still dodging the bricks. The correspondent who chronicles this interesting performance neglects to add what became of Mr. Brandt; but perhaps he hasn't found out yet.

Georgia claims to have a new variety of cotton which yields four bales per acre on average land, and Florida reports a new variety of corn which is wonderfully productive. The American farmer is a close observer of new things, and this is one reason why he does so much toward feeding the world.

In the sixteenth century the average length of a doctor's life was 36 years 5 months, in the seventeenth century it was 45 years and 8 months, in the eighteenth century 49 years and 8 months, and in the nineteenth, 58 years and 7 months. It thus appears that doctors were 300 years in learning not to take their own medicine.

A doctor asks why it is that a man in his hours of relaxation crouches down in a chair, puts up his feet or assumes some other abnormal attitude. "I am convinced," he says, "that a man can sit much longer in an upright position, with his spine straight, than he can in any other. That he does not sit correctly I can only consider the force of habit."

C. A. Totten, the forecaster, comes forward once more to remark that "we are at the initial date for the long-predicted beginning of the end." "Long-predicted" is the proper term to use in this connection. Since the days of Mother Shipton, and even centuries before that, these predictions of the approaching end of the world have been made with frequency and regularity. Even Mr. Totten has made quite a number of them, changing his dates when the expected failed to come to pass.

The Indian is coming to the front with greater rapidity these days. Last fall Metoxen, Lone Wolf and other young students of the Carlisle Indian school won distinction on the football gridiron, and now it is announced that a full-blooded Indian rejoicing in the poetic name of Sockalexis is to play on one of the National league baseball teams this season. When the aborigine gives up lacrosse and takes to the American national game it is about the best evidence that his complete civilization and redemption from savagery are only a question of a very short time. So mote it be.

A. D. WHITE,

Of New York, Selected as Ambassador to Germany.

Benj. Butterworth, of Ohio, as Commissioner of Patents—The Public Debt Statement—Secretary Long's Economy—Col. Shafter's Promotion.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The president Thursday sent to the senate the following nominations:

Andrew D. White, of New York, ambassador to Germany.

Wm. E. Draper, of Massachusetts, ambassador to Italy.

Chandler Hale, of Maine, secretary of the embassy at Rome.

Samuel L. Gracey, of Massachusetts, consul at Fuchau, China.

Anson Burlingame Johnson, of Colorado, consul at Amoy, China.

Benjamin Butterworth, of Ohio, commissioner of patents.

Oliver L. Spalding, of Michigan, and William B. Howell, of New Jersey, to be assistant secretaries of the treasury.

Capt. Robert Craig, signal corps, to be major.

Withdrawn — Anson Burlingame Johnson, consul at Fuchau.

ANDREW D. WHITE.

Secretary Long, in an effort to stop some of the most wasteful leaks in the navy, has issued two orders, the first of which is designed to do away with the charges that are made by the bureaus on ships in course of construction. It has been found that as these new vessels progress fault is found with details, and as a result of modifications adopted the contract price of vessels is greatly exceeded. Much of this trouble from the alteration of quarters to suit the future commanding officers of vessels nearly ready for commission, and as an instance, it was mentioned that all the maroon leather upholstered furniture of the battleship Indiana was ripped and dark green leather was substituted to suit the taste of her expectant captain.

The other order restricts the use of electric lights and dynamos in port.

Col. Wm. R. Shafter, First infantry, has been selected for appointment as brigadier general by the president, but his nomination will not be sent to the senate until Brigadier General Wheaton is confirmed as major general to fill the vacancy caused by General Ruger's retirement Friday.

The debt statement issued Thursday afternoon shows a net decrease in the public debt, less cash in the treasury, of $8,638,253. Total cash in the treasury, $875,239,759.

Tariff Bill in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The senate had not been in session five minutes Thursday morning before the clerk of the house appeared and reported the Dingley tariff bill as it passed the house Wednesday. The bill was conveyed to the vice president's desk and without a motion on the part of a senator Mr. Hobart referred the bill to the finance committee. With this action all legislation in the senate in regard to the bill ceases until the finance committee reports the bill back to the senate.

Col. Grant for Assistant Secretary of War

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Frederick Dent Grant, of New York, called on President McKinley at the white house Thursday by invitation and was tendered the position of assistant secretary of war. He had a talk with the president of nearly an hour's duration and left McKinley with the understanding that a definite answer to the affair would be given Thursday or Friday. Col. Grant was disinclined to take the position, but his conversation with the president may help the effect of causing him to change his mind.

A WASHOUT

Causes a Wreck on the Central Georgia Road—One Man Killed and Two Injured.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 2.—Freight train No. 42, on the Central Georgia road, which left Macon Wednesday night, ran into a washout four miles south of Oconee, Ga., soon after midnight. The washout was 75 feet long and 4 feet deep.

The engine and 9 cars went into it. The other 16 cars of the train remained on the track.

Brakeman Joel S. Bragg, of Macon, was caught under the tender and crushed to death. Engineer W. A. Ryan, of Savannah, had his left leg broken and was bruised about the head.

Fireman Hugh Grady was bruised and shaken up. The wrecking train from Macon arrived on the scene six hours after the accident.

Passenger trains met at the scene of the accident and their passengers were transferred.

National Bank Notes Outstanding.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—National bank notes outstanding on March 31, 1897, $233,708,894, a decrease during the month of $441,046, but an increase from March 31, 1896, of $12,481,089. The gold coinage during the month amounted to $13,770,900, while 1,400,250 silver dollars were struck off.

Terre Haute's New Chief of Police.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 2.—The new police board elected Capt. Charles Hyland to be superintendent. Capt. Hyland has been on the Terre Haute force 12 or 13 years, and the selection is in the direct line of promotion.

OFF THE EARTH.

Everything in Chandler, Ok., in Ruins—Many Wind-Wrecked Buildings Took Fire, and the Inmates Buried in the Ruins Were Burned to Death.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 1.—The cyclone reported in these dispatches Tuesday night struck the town of Chandler at 6 o'clock and swept it off the face of the earth. The storm came from the southwest and swept across the town, leaving scarcely a building of any importance standing. Everything in the town was a mass of ruins in a few minutes and the air was filled with groans and cries of the wounded and shrieks for help from every side.

The wrecks of the many of the store buildings took fire and in a short time an awful holocaust was in progress, many of those injured and buried in the ruins being burned to death. A large number of the injured are badly burned. Between the fire, the wind and the rain, the provisions, medicine, clothing, etc., in the stores were all destroyed or so badly injured as to be worthless, and unless new supplies arrive at once there will be much suffering.

The storm broke upon the city suddenly, the sky being clear an hour before. The cloud soon developed into a funnel shape. It touched the ground and tore up trees like twigs. The roar was deafening. A cloudburst preceded it. About 20 dead bodies have been recovered and 75 or more of the injured have been cared for. But one physician in Chandler was uninjured and physicians were sent from this city at midnight and also from Stillwater, arriving there soon after daylight and assisting in the care of injured.

There was not half coffins enough there to bury the dead.

About half a millions dollars worth of property is destroyed. Ten thousand people are now on the ground from the surrounding towns and country.

From this city four wagon loads of clothing, bedding and provisions have been sent and the Guthrie club has raised $1,500 in cash to send Thursday. Not until noon Wednesday was there any regulation of any note toward alleviating the suffering. The people are slow to recover from their terror.

The mayor, M. D. Kinney, is doing all he can. The city has put to use all its cash, about $700, for immediate aid.

J. D. Dale saw the storm approaching, and, taking Mrs. Dale, ran to a hollow, where he placed her behind a boulder and crouched by her side, both escaping uninjured.

A 2-days-old baby was carried four blocks and not injured, while the mother was crushed in her bed.

MORE EXCITING

Grows the Condition of Affairs in the Mississippi Valley.

JACKSON, Miss., April 1.—The condition of affairs in the Mississippi valley grows daily more exciting, and it is probable the worst has not been experienced. One or two more big breaks, one of them 1,000 feet wide, occurred in Bolivar county Tuesday night, and the waters, joining forces with other streams, are now pushing toward the south, carrying destruction to houses, barns, gins, fencing, live stock, etc. Fortunately the people of the delta had taken time by the forelock and reduce the volume of water in the main channels. They have great faith in their ability to hold out, but the weather Wednesday night, being stormy and blustery, accompanied by thunderstorms, is not of a nature to inspire confidence or lend encouragement.

ST. LOUIS, April 1. — A special to the Scripps-McRae Press Association from New Orleans states that rain has been pouring down in torrents all Wednesday morning throughout Louisiana and southern Mississippi. Water filled the streets to the depth of nearly a foot, and street cars in many places are forced to suspend. The gauge at noon showed the water at New Orleans to be 18 feet, or two feet above the danger line. The worst is not due to arrive for three days yet. The river commissioners say New Orleans never was in greater danger of inundation than at present. Many citizens are almost panic-stricken by the continued reports of the coming high waters.

Another Flood at Sioux City.

SIOUX CITY, Ia., April 1.—Much of the bottom lands in the neighborhood of Sioux City is inundated again. A hard rain commenced here Tuesday night and has been falling ever since. Streams are greatly swollen and from farther up the big Sioux and Missouri rivers reports of fresh overflows are coming in. Both streams were rising here Wednesday. From South Dakota towns near here similar conditions are reported.

Monster Gas Well in Pike County.

PETERSBURG, Ind., April 1.—Gas was struck here by drillers who have been at work for several weeks. The flow of gas is extremely strong, as rocks and water are shot 100 feet high every two minutes. Gas was struck at 1,153 feet and nine inches below the surface of the earth. Experts pronounce the well one of the best they have ever seen. Thousands of people are visiting the well. Bells were rung, whistles were blown and everything done to demonstrate the joy of the people. Everything is on the boom and prospects for the future of this town are exceedingly bright.

REBELS ROUTED.

Spanish Troops and Guerrillas Meet a Party of Insurgents.

Reinforcements Come to the Relief of the Troops and the Rebels Are Dislodged—Spanish Commander and Four Privates Killed and Four Wounded.

HAVANA, April 1.—Lieut. Col. Perez Blanco, with a battalion of Spanish troops and a detachment of local guerillas, left Artemisa Wednesday and at Brujo encountered a party of rebels occupying strong positions. The fighting was stubborn on both sides, and the insurgents were dislodged with difficulty. Hearing the firing from a distance Col. Boy, with three companies of Spanish troops, came to the assistance of Lieut. Col. Perez Blanco's command and the insurgents were finally driven from the field, carrying with them a number of their dead and wounded. Lieut. Col. Perez Blanco, a lieutenant and four privates were killed, and four privates were wounded.

At Hato Nuevo, in the Matanzas province, Maj. Valtina, two captains and 14 privates, comprising the remainder of the defeated insurgent party under the leader Barrots, have surrendered to the Spanish authorities.

KEY WEST, Fla., April 2.—A gentleman who arrived by the Olivette Wednesday night says that General Ruis Rivera was to have been summarily courtmartialed and condemned Thursday morning and shot at sunrise Friday morning.

HAVANA, April 2.—The queen regent has cabled her congratulations to Capt. Gen. Weyler on the capture of Gen. Ruis Rivera and the success of the latest operations against the insurgents.

HAIL AND WIND.

A Storm Throughout Missouri Does Much Damage to Property—Lives Lost.

ST. LOUIS, April 2.—Reports received Thursday morning show that a severe storm of rain, hail and wind prevailed throughout Missouri Wednesday afternoon and night. At Mount Vernon, Mo., hail stone weighing 10 and 12 ounces fell with such force and rapidity that not a house in the community escaped without broken window glass. Live stock of all kinds suffered intensely. Immediately following the hail came the heaviest rain-storm and wind at that place in a score of years.

At Dexter, Mo., a hail storm struck the town, and a thousand window glasses were destroyed.

At Boonville, Mo., rain fell to the depth of two inches in 24 hours. The rain was preceded by a hail storm, and heavy wind was reported to have caused great damage in the surrounding country.

At De Soto, Mo., the rains were so severe that all trains on the Iron Mountain railroad were ordered tied up to avert accidents.

Reports received from southeast Missouri state the deluge of water was equal to cloudburst and every storm is raising banks full. So far no loss of life is reported.

Wednesday night's rainstorm was one of the heaviest in this vicinity in the past year, and the wind at times reached a velocity of over forty miles an hour. The rainfall in the suburbs caused the small streams to rise at an alarming rate and in some places they overflowed their banks and flooded the adjoining territory to a depth of several feet.

The suburban tracks of the Frisco railroad were flooded to the depth of two feet and trains were temporarily abandoned. Through traffic is being operated over the tracks of other roads.

The river Des Peres, in the western suburbs, ordinarily a small stream, overflowed its banks and submerged several houses in the low lands. Geo. W. King, aged 70, living at Brentwood, was awakened by the flood and found that his house was succumbing to the waters. He seized his daughter in his arms and jumped from a second-story window. He was carried into the swift current of the river and both were drowned.

The river Des Peres rose to the height of 15 feet on the southwestern portion of the city and overflowed the adjoining property to the depth of from two to six feet. The brick works at Cheltenham, seven miles southwest of St. Louis, are flooded to the depth of three feet and the fires in the furnaces have been drawn.

About 40 men employed in grading suburban property, were camped on the lowlands near the suburb of Lintwood, and were awakened by the rising waters as they flooded their tents. The men made a rush for skiffs and reached the adjoining high ground. About a dozen of them however, are missing, and it is feared that they were drowned. The mounted police are making a search of the district but state that they are unable to locate the missing men. The locality was occupied by about fifty small houses and the inhabitants were rescued with great difficulty. It is feared that their homes will be swept away as the flood is still rising and the water is four feet deep. The Mississippi river rose over a foot here Wednesday night and is now within three feet of the danger line. From reports received from Upper Mississippi places it is predicted that the danger point at this city will be reached by Saturday. The occupants of stores along the levee on both sides of the river are moving their property

Will Be Able to Settle in Full.

NORWALK, O., April 2.—The hardware firm of Butt & Peck, of this city, was levied on Thursday by Sheriff Rout to satisfy a judgment obtained by Geo. Butt and the Norwalk national bank for $22,000. The stock on hand is enough to satisfy all claims and the firm will be able to settle in full.

Drilling for Oil.

RANDIN, O., April 2—An oil well is being drilled here by Findlay (O.) parties. The drill is now at a depth of 900 feet and work is progressing day and night

OLD HANDS

Take Charge of the Government Printing Office—Secretary Gage Strikes Against the Importunities of Office Seekers.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Public Printer Palmer Friday resumed charge of the government printing office after an absence of three years. He found a handsome bouquet of roses on his desk from the employes, all of whom were glad to see him back. He appointed W. H. Collins to his old place of chief clerk, vice W. S. Waterbury, who served with Mr. Benedict.

Mr. Waterbury, as are all the employes of the department, was under the protection of the civil service law, but his appointment having been a personal one with the retiring public printer, he had made arrangements to go into business elsewhere. Mr. Collins went into the government printing office as an apprentice over thirty years ago and worked himself up through various grades of service. Mr. Palmer also reappointed Capt. H. T. Brian, foreman of the office, which he has filled for many years.

WASHINGTON, April 3 — Secretary Gage has struck against the importunities of office-seekers. For the short period he has been in office little opportunity has been given him to attend to office business. His room has been crowded early and late with people who want positions and those who had friends who are candidates. Friday morning the secretary had no opportunity to look into the affairs of the department before going to the cabinet meeting. Friday afternoon he took the bit in his teeth and issued this order:

"Hereafter the secretary will receive visitors only between the hours of ten and one on days other than cabinet days. On cabinet days visitors will be received from 9 until 10:30. No visitors will be received at other hours except on urgent official business."

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Another employe of the treasury department, discharged under the last administration, was reinstated by Secretary Gage Friday. He is H. W. Harrington, of New York, who was dismissed from the service after serving 28 years. Mr. Harrington gets his old position of chief of the accounts division, and the incumbent, F. D. McDowell, who succeeded him, is transferred to the architect's office as an assistant chief of division. The reinstatement of Mr. Harrington is in conformity with the policy of Secretary Gage, with reference to veterans of the late war who were dropped from the rolls of the treasury department.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Stephen Gambill, brother-in-law of Senator Gorman and chief of the division of requisition and accounts of the war department, was Friday reduced to a small clerkship in that division and Charles B. Tanner, an old soldier, who formerly held the position but had been removed several years ago, was reappointed.

R. J. Whitton, formerly Assistant Secretary's Doe's private secretary and recently chief of the war department supply division, was removed Friday and Martin R. Thorp, who had formerly held the position, but had been reduced to a clerkship, was promoted to the vacancy.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The monthly statement showing the amount of gold and silver coins and certificates, United States notes and national bank notes in circulation on April 1, issued by the treasury department Friday, gives the circulation per capita as $23.01, based on an estimated population of 72,547,000.

The gold coin in circulation on the date named was $517,125,757, an increase for the month of $810,061; standard silver dollars, $34,507,314, a decrease of $871,443; gold certificates, $37,456,339, a decrease of $88,480; treasury notes, $90,244,810, an increase of $4,498,189; United States notes, $248,513,640, a decrease of $12,220,976; national bank notes, $223,420,183, an increase of $3,189,840. The total circulation on April 1 was $1,669,000,694, a net decrease of $6,694,259.

The net increase in the money and bullion in the treasury during March was $7,598,482.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—T. A. Rhodes, an old soldier formerly employed as a compositor in the government printing office, has entered suit against T. E. Benedict, ex-public printer, claiming $300 damages for violation of the civil service rules. It is understood that a number of similar claims will be entered.

Mr. Robert L. Baines, chief of the returning division, dead letter office, was Friday afternoon thrown from his bicycle and his throat struck on a sharp picket of the post office department fence, making a terrible gash and knocking out a number of teeth. He was taken to the Emergency hospital. The accident may result fatally.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—Rear Adm. John H. Russell, retired, died at his residence here Friday after an illness of about a month. He was born in Frederick, Md., in 1827, and entered the navy as a midshipman when only 14 years old. He saw much active naval service during the Mexican war.

Found Dying Under a Bridge.

MARION, Ind., April 3.—John D. Timmony, for many years a justice of the peace of this city, was found Friday morning unconscious and fatally injured at the foot of one of the abutments of the Branson street bridge. His gold watch was missing. Murder is suspected.

Big Oil Deal.

CHICAGO, April 3 —A Chronicle special from Hartford City, Ind., says: Another big oil deal has just been consummated in the Indiana oil field. The Standard Oil Co. has purchased the leases of the Big Sandy Oil Co., of Indianapolis, operating in the Godfrey reserve, northwest of this city. The lease includes the 300-acre tract of land recently purchased by John T. Brush, baseball magnet of Indianapolis and Cincinnati, for which he paid $30,000. This gives the Standard 1,100 acres in the reserve, the most productive oil territory in the Indiana field.

Standard of the World.

For nearly two score of years the Winchester has been the standard rifle of the world. It is found in all lands and it is always very highly thought of on account of its accuracy, strength and durability. There are over two million Winchester guns in use to-day, but the makers have yet to learn of any dissatisfaction with them. Such a recommendation as this should convince everybody of the exceptionally high quality of Winchester guns. Winchester ammunition is of as exactly as high a standard and always gives entire satisfaction. When used in Winchester guns the results obtained cannot be equalled. Did She See For Months—Can Now Sleep Well, Eat Well, and Pains Have Disappeared.

"For several months my health had been failing, and I did not have a well day in this time. I had severe pains in my back, my limbs ached and I was restless at night. I suffered with loss of appetite and severe nervous headaches. A friend advised me to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. After taking this medicine for a while I found I was gaining in health rapidly. I now have a good appetite, can sleep well, and the pains with which I suffered have almost entirely disappeared. I am gaining in flesh. FORECAST

Of Business to Be Transacted in Congress This Week.

Disposition to Halt on the Arbitration Treaty Discussion.

The Chances of the Ratification of the Treaty Remains Precarious—The Agricultural Bill May Be Called Up in the Senate—The Bankruptcy Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—It is said that Acting Chairman Davis, of the senate foreign relations committee, does not intend to press the arbitration treaty for consideration during the present week. The debate on the treaty has been protracted and now that the last amendment permissable has been offered and voted and the convention, as a whole, is in shape in which it must be finally ratified, or rejected, there appears to be a disposition to halt for a short season. Several reasons combine to make such a policy probable. No arrangements has yet been made with respect to pairs on the final vote and as this is a matter solely between individual senators some time must ensue before the pairs can be adjusted, arising out of the fact that two affirmative votes will be paired with one negative vote, the action of the senate being determined by a two-thirds vote. It is also understood that Chairman Davis desires to permit the state department to have a few days in which to study the changes that have been made in the treaty. Unless, therefore, some one desires to speak on the subject Mr. Davis will not move an executive session for the purpose of continuing the debate until several days have elapsed. The chances of the ratification of the treaty remains precarious.

The senate appropriations committee reported the agricultural bill early in the session, and it may be called up at any time. By Tuesday the sundry civil and the Indian bills will be ready. The latter bill will no doubt lead to some discussion owing to one or two senate amendments that will open the door to the fight that was made over this bill at the last session.

Mr. Elkins, of West Virginia, will deliver a speech Monday on his bill providing for a 10 per cent. discriminating tax on goods brought to the United States in ships not those of this country. This speech has been prepared with great care, and treats of this subject exhaustively. The purpose of the bill is indorsed by a plank in the national republican platform, and has been approved in the state conventions of 15 states. Mr. Elkins intends to force the bill to the front, and believes that congress will enact it into a law. While the subject has been touched upon in the discussion, it has never been so fully and thoroughly treated as it will be by Mr. Elkins Monday. The bankruptcy bill still remains the unfinished business on the senate calendar.

Unless the senate shall have passed one or more of the appropriation bills now on its calendar by Wednesday, when the house of representatives next meets, another adjournment will be taken by that body until Saturday. The probabilities are strongly in favor of a no-nothing week in the house.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Headsman Bristow will begin to swing the fatal ax in a lively fashion next week, and the necks of Cleveland's fourth-class postmasters will be chopped off mercilessly. The small post offices are juicy plums, and bushels of applications are rolling in. The clerks of the department have all they can do to open and classify the papers.

WASHINGTON, Ind., April 5.—Col. Chas. E. Woodward, well known proprietor of the Hyatt house, this city, died Saturday morning of Bright's disease. He was 56 years of age, a Knight Templar, and known to the traveling public throughout the country. He leaves a family.

D. B. MARTIN

Appointed Manager of Passenger Traffic of the B. & O. Road by the Receivers.

BALTIMORE, April 5.—D. B. Martin, of Cincinnati, has been appointed manager of passenger traffic of the Baltimore & Ohio R. R. by the receivers, the appointment to become effective April 15. The office is a newly created one and is for the purpose of giving the very closest attention to passenger business. Mr. Charles O. Scull will remain general passenger agent of the road.

Mr. Martin is now general passenger agent of the Big Four, and has been with it and its predecessor, the Bee Line, for more than 30 years.

Railroad Sold.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 5.—The St. Louis, Chicago & St. Paul railroad (Bluff line) was sold Saturday under a decree of foreclosure issued by Judge Creighton, of the circuit court, upon the application of the bondholders. The road was bought in by Thomas Carmichael, of London, Eng., representing the English security holders for $630,000. A new company will be organized, to whom the purchaser will convey the title of the property. The road will be eventually consolidated with the Chicago, Peoria & St. Louis railroad, in which the purchasers have a controlling interest.

The Porte Demands the Withdrawal of Greek Troops.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 5.—The porte has prepared a note to Greece demanding the withdrawal of the Greek troops in Crete. The note declares that in the event of the demand being refused the porte will hold Greece answerable. It is stated that the note has already been presented to the government at Athens.

Steamer R. T. Cole Sinks.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 5.—The steamer R. T. Cole sank in the Cumberland river at Hunter's Point. She had a full cargo. Three Negro roustabouts were drowned.

AT GREENVILLE

The Streets Are Now Navigable Only by Boats—Plantations Never Before Under Water Are Now Submerged.

JACKSON, Miss., April 3.—The only change in the situation in the delta is for the worse. The water is still pouring through the breaks and encroaching upon places heretofore thought above the danger line. Plantations never before under water are now submerged. The streets of Greenville are now navigable only by boats. The flood from above having met and joined forces with that from below, nearly one thousand families in Greenville are surrounded by water; still some portions of the little city are dry. The levees there still hold, however.

Citizens of Huntington telegraphed the governor Friday to send 30 tents at once. They were forwarded by the first train, but will have to make several miles of the journey by skiffs. The state is doing all in its power to assist its delta people but the depleted condition of the treasury can afford little else than the labor of her 800 convicts.

Mr. J. F. Price, of this city, returned Friday morning from Leferve, which is a border county. reports that the waters have not yet reached there, but the small streams are all overflowing on their own account. The bottom lands are under water, but plowing and planting are going right along on all the higher places, and even down to the water's edge.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 3.—The second break in the lower Louisiana levee system occurred this morning on Bayou La Fourche. Friday afternoon the break had widened to 100 feet, and there is no hope that it will be closed. The break is 30 miles below Tribodaux, where the levees are neither large nor modern.

In that section there are a large number of truck farmers who have well cultivated and extremely fertile lands. It is quite probable that these unfortunate people will suffer severely because the crevasse comes too large for the water to run off for them to make another crop.

The situation in New Orleans Friday, in spite of the brimmingful river, is not discouraging. The river is rising slowly and it will continue to rise for eight or ten days more. The high water here is several inches short of the record of 1893. The authorities are on the alert and have all prepared to meet any emergency. New Orleans can stand a foot and a half more water and escape a flood.

MERRITT'S SUCCESSOR.

Gen. Wheaton Promoted Past Gen. Brooke, Who Ranks Him.

CHICAGO, April 3.—Maj. Gen. Wesley Merritt, Thursday received the first official information of his transfer to the New York command. Gen. Ruger's stay at Governors island expires at noon Friday, and his successor will, probably take charge within two weeks. Gen. J. R. Brooke, of St. Paul, is expected to succeed Gen. Merritt in Chicago.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—The army changes resulting from Maj Gen. Ruger's retirement Friday have been arranged and according to the state Gen. Wheaton, who was Friday promoted past Gen. Brooks, who ranks him, will make another vacancy by retiring May 8, when Gen. Brooks will receive his deferred promotion to major general.

NEW TARIFF BILL

Discussed by American Business Firms in Paris.

PARIS, April 3.—The Dingley tariff bill now before the American congress has materially excited American business houses here. The American chamber of commerce has held a largely attended meeting to consider the effects of the bill.

Vice President Peartree related statistics of the mutual trade of France and the United States, showing that the latter country had sent into France, duty free, goods to the value of 180,000,000 francs, while France had sent into the United States, duty free, only 80,000,000 francs worth of articles.

France, he further said, favors American exports by admitting 30,000,000 francs' worth on the minimum tariff, but the market for American manufactured articles was very restricted.

Owing to the reduction of duties to some countries, not the United States, the chamber suggests that the United States reduce its tariff on some of the most important French exports. France would then admit many American articles at a reduced rate.

The chamber hopes that the additional discretionary powers asked for by President McKinley in his inaugural address will be granted, so that reciprocal relations between France and the United States can be established.

Victory Against the Railways.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 3.—Never in the state of Tennessee has such a victory been won against the railway companies as was won Friday when the senate passed the railroad commission bill. The fight against this measure by the corporations has been a bitter one. It has been the sole topic in legislative halls for the last two months, and the people of the state have been aroused to the highest pitch.

New Ohio Postmaster.

WASHINGTON, April 3.—G. W. Munch was Friday commissioned as a fourth-class postmaster at Hanover.

THE TROOPS

Are Being Quietly Withdrawn From Cuba by Spain.

About 200,000 Men Will Be Embarked During the Next Fortnight.

Capt. Gen. Weyler Issues a Proclamation Announcing the Pacification of the Island—Weyler's Emissaries Again Make Overtures for Peace.

NEW YORK, April 5.—A special cable dispatch to the Journal from Havana, says:

Weyler's proclamation announcing the pacification of Cuba is known to be already in the government printing office here. It only awaits telegraphic approval from Madrid to be formally issued. Its object is believed to be to mislead Washington and prevent unfriendly action by congress. For a month or more small squads of Spanish infantry listed as convalescents have been quietly embarked from Havana and other Cuban ports by regular passenger steamers or Puerto Rico and the Canary islands, whence they are transferred to transports bound for the Philippines.

As fast as interior Cuban posts are abandoned Weyler's men are brought to Havana to await shipment. It is expected that 200,000 will be embarked in the next fortnight.

Private intelligence from Cuban camps in Sancti Spiritus and Puerto Principe province, coming through Cubans of prominence here, gave another important reason for Weyler's decree, saying that Gomez and the rebel government have again been approached by the captain general's emissaries with fresh overtures for peace on a basis of home rule or sale of the island under an American guarantee, the Spanish flag to remain until indemnity is fully paid.

Cubans positively refused to listen to any proposition, however favorable, unless Spain first withdrew the great bulk of her troops from the island, and then acknowledged a virtual truce by retiring her remaining forces from the field to the fortified coast towns.

At Weyler's recent conference in Cienfugoes with ex-insurgent leaders of influence, these are understood to have laid before him Gomez's ultimatum.

Here in Havana Spanish merchants and Cuban planters loyal to Spain, with property at stake, and fearing to become victims of the revolutionary success, regard Weyler's decree as a farce, and, convinced of the futility of Spain's efforts to crush the revolt by such ridiculous proclamations, are now outspoken in favor of annexation to the United States.

The wanton destruction of American property by Spanish troops continues throughout the island. Near Madrugo Saturday Col. Moncada, commanding the regular government forces, set fire to the great sugar plantation Cayajabos, owned by Andreas Terry, an American citizen now in Paris, destroying buildings as well as canefields. Losses are estimated at half a million dollars.

PROPHET CONTRERAS

Says There Will Be Several Earthquakes in Mexico During April.

GUANAJUATO, Mex., April 5.—Juan N. Contreras, the noted astronomer and earthquake prophet, has made the following prognostications:

Earthquakes will occur during the first two weeks of April in the zone comprising Vera Cruz and Mexico, and in Oaxaca, Guerro and Coloma. On April 10 he vy northers will blow at Vera Cruz and Tampico, with a possibility of rain from the 12th to the 14th. Earthquakes are also announced for the second half of April, superceded by heavy gales and rains along the gulf coast.

Death of Edward G. Doherty.

NEW YORK, April 5.—Edward G. Doherty, for several years an inspector of pavements in the department of public works, died at his home in this city Saturday. Mr. Doherty was born in Canada and in the union army. On April 25, 1865, he was in command of the party which captured John Wilkes Booth and David E. Herold, the former the assasin of President Lincoln and the latter implicated in the plot, at Garrett's farm, near Pleasant Valley, Va.

The St. Louis-Milwaukee Game.

ST. LOUIS, April 5.—The game Sunday between the Milwaukee and the St. Louis baseball clubs was won by the latter by a score of 12 to 1. The Browns scored in every inning, except the fifth, while the Brewers got their one run in the first. Hill, Evans, Kissinger and Donahue pitched for the Browns and Rettger, Taylor and Jones for the visitors. Attendance 4,000.

New Press Association.

NEW YORK, April 5.—The publishers of a large number of newspapers met at the Astor house Saturday afternoon for the purpose of forming a news association to be controlled temporarily by the "Publishers' Press Association." The purpose of the new organization is to furnish a general news service by leased wire or otherwise. D. J. Keenan, jr., of the Pittsburgh Press, was chairman of the meeting.

French Crops.

NEW YORK, April 5.—The wheat crop of France, according to semiofficial cables, is in a bad way. Dornbusch enbroiled: "Instead of the position improving it is retrograding. The area planted will not equal either of the previous years." At the same time information comes from the east that India will not be able to offer any wheat before next fall.

The Blockade is Ordered.

ROME, April 5.—A dispatch from Suda says that the powers have ordered the admirals of the international fleet to begin a pacific blockade of Athens, and it is understood at Suda that the admirals are now considering the best way of carrying out the instructions.

DISCUSS THE TARIFF.

Synopsis of the Debate in Congress Over the Dingley Bill.

Washington, March 25. Mr. Tawney (rep., Minn.) Thursday defended the Dingley schedule, which had been attacked by Mr. Gunn (pop., Idaho). The latter said he had no criticism to make of the rates. He only asked that they be collected. Mr. Tawney asserted that the classification in the Dingley schedule was such that the duties could not be evaded.

Mr. Simpson (pop., Kan.) read from Mr. McKinley's speech at the Minneapolis convention the declaration that the foreigner paid the tax. Since last congress, he proceeded to say, had increased appropriations $50,000,000, and now, according to Mr. McKinley's theory, the taxes were on the foreigners were to be increased to pay for the extravagance. The foreigner would be glad, he said, that the last congress had not been a two-million-dollar congress. If taxes on foreigners could be sufficiently increased, he observed, sarcastically, the surplus could be distributed periodically—say, annually—and every day would be Sunday over here. If the republicans had desired to do something in favor of the laboring men, why, he asked, had they left hides on the free list? Mr. Simpson announced himself as a free trader.

The latest democratic cry of more money and less taxes, said Mr. Grosvenor (rep., O.), was preposterous. The democratic administration had demonstrated its lack of statesmanship by being unable to keep out of the poorhouse.

Mr. Burke (rep., Tex.) said the bill should be entitled: "A bill to build up trusts and corporate influences and oppress the industrious people of the United States."

Mr. Lentz (dem., O.) protested because but 20 minutes were given to the six Ohio democrats, representing 600,000 persons who had voted for William J. Bryan.

Mr. Daizell (rep., Pa.) defended the ad valorem system of the Wilson bill as giving opportunity for immense undervaluations. He defended the Dingley bill from the charge that it fostered trusts. "The industrial world has been revolutionized by the introduction of the cheap factory system," he said, "no longer the single farmer or the single handmade. But now massed in vast wealth necessary to carry on vast enterprises which are recognized by the laws of every state." He were sorry that there were not abuses incidental to the system, but if, free trade England there are more monopolized trusts than in this country, he knew nothing about.

Mr. Colson (rep., Ky.) argued in favor of a higher duty on cannel coal. He said in the issue in Kentucky had been free silver and Mr. Kentucky's record had been cast to Bryan.

Mr. Steele (rep., Ind.) gave it as his opinion that the pending measure was the most complete tariff bill ever framed. While he was discussing the question of the duty on cattle in the present law, Mr. Simpson (rep., Kan.) asked if it was not a fact that the price of cattle had increased since the reduction of the duty.

"It is not a fact," replied Mr. Steele.

"I insist that it is," persisted Mr. Simpson. "What are known as 'stockers' are worth a third higher than they were three or four years ago."

Mr. De Armond (dem., Mo.) charged that the real purpose of the Dingley bill was to pile up a surplus in the treasury, which would be used to retire the greenbacks and treasury notes and thus so contract the currency that the people, in desperation, would even consent to accept the offer of their schemes for the aggrandizement of the national banks.

Mr. Payne (rep., N. Y.) challenged anyone to show that the pending measure favored trusts. On the contrary, he established the tinplate industry in this country. The Dingley bill, he said, would establish the linen industry. The wool bill, he concluded, "reduce the revenue when it becomes necessary by producing our own sugar, our own tinplate and our own woolens. This is a self-regulating bill."

Washington, March 26.—The Dingley bill was thrown open for amendment under the five-minute rule in the house Friday. Mr. Dockery (Mo.) and Mr. Cooper (Tex.) and others, backed by the entire opposition, attempted to secure a vote on an amendment, offered in a multitude of forms, which provided that in case any article, made dutiable by the bill, was controlled by trust or combination the duty upon such article should be suspended. Mr. Dingley made the point of order that the line of indictment was not germane to the dutiable list and would not be in order until the free list was reached. The chair sustained the point of order. An appeal was taken, but the chair was sustained by a vote of 172 to 102.

Mr. Hepburn (rep., Ia.) said that this amendment, if adopted, would defeat the purposes of the bill. He went on to say that how easy it would be for a few men who really desired free wool and free sugar to effect a combination to raise the prices of sugar and wool, and thus under the amendment force those articles on the free list. Mr. Bailey thanked Mr. Hepburn for his frank admission that the destruction of trusts would interfere with the purpose of the bill. The democrats offered various amendments as the reading of the bill proceeded, but were defeated. The duty on carbonate of ammonia was increased from 1½ cents to 2½ cents a pound. The duty on crude tartar, wine, lees, etc., testing less than 40 per cent. of bitartrate of potash, was fixed at 5 per cent; over 40 per cent., 1½ cents. The rate on rochelle salts running 90 per cent. of bitartrate was fixed at 15 cents a pound. Mr. McMillin criticised the increased rate on celluloid articles, declaring that the purpose was to decrease importation that meant decreased revenue. The paragraph relating to sulphuric and nitrous ether was amended so as to make the rate from 25 to 40 cents, as reported by the committee. Mr. Bromwell (rep., O.) and Mr. Grosvenor (rep., O.) got into a controversy over the protection accorded by the bill to sugar. "You call us the unwashed democracy," said Mr. Clark (Mo.). "Give us free soap." Mr. Clark characterized the statement that Jefferson had stopped the coinage of silver and supported the gold standard as terrific. When the item of white lead was reached Mr. Mahany (rep., N. Y.) moved to increase the rate from 2½ to 3 cents a pound. After some debate, in which the lead trust figured extensively, the amendment was adopted—85 to 83.

Washington, March 27.—By a committee amendment, Saturday, the rate on paints of white lead was increased from 2½ to 4 cents per pound; in colors from 2½ to 3 cents. Mr. Richardson declared that the rates in 12 out of the 14 schedules of the bill were higher than those of the McKinley law.

Mr. Dingley replied that Mr. Richardson's remarks, if true, would be a tribute to be done by "juggling with percentages." Except for the increases in the rates on tobacco, sugar and wool, he said, the rates in this bill are, at lower than those of the McKinley law.

During a discussion concerning a duty on hides Mr. Hopkins (rep., Ill.) said there is no demand for hides in this country.

Mr. Walker (rep., Mass.) explained that there are few hides imported, except those used for sole leather. The duty on hides would be of little benefit to the farmers. With regard to wools, Mr. Walker argued that great combinations necessarily reduce the cost of production and consequently the price to the people.

Mr. Grow (rep., Pa.) explained how the duty on tin plate had established that industry in this country.

Mr. Simpson (pop., Kan.), referring to the question of a duty on hides, said that a duty on hides would be of more importance to the farmer than all the other duties in the agricultural bill. It would mean to him an increase of one dollar apiece on every one of the 4,000 hides taken from the cattle slaughtered last year.

Mr. Wheeler (dem., Ala.) and Mr. Cox (dem., Tenn.) asserted that the southern iron industry did not want any protection. It was selling iron in Pittsburgh and the iron centres, and was invading England without the aid of protection.

Mr. Underwood (dem., Ala.) said it was absurd to claim that the reason southern pig-iron manufacturers were able to ship their products as far north as Ohio because of the low prices paid to labor in the south. He said the report of the labor commissioner showed that the average labor cost of a ton of pig iron in the north is $1.47 and in the south $1.52.

Mr. Daizell asserted that iron ore is being made and coal being mined in Tennessee by convict labor, and that the store system prevails in Tennessee.

Mr. McMillin denied that the scrip system prevails in Tennessee. It is the south, he said, which is driving Pennsylvania out of the market. "We have only just begun," said he. "We propose to make it hot for you, not only in politics, but in coal, manufacture, and we won't ask government aid in either."

Mr. Lewis (dem., Ala.) argued that every high tariff agitation is an invitation to the hordes of Europe to come here, and he produced some figures to show that immigration had been largely increased after the enactment of the McKinley law, and decreased after the enactment of the Wilson law.

Washington, March 29.—Mr. Dingley announced that the ways and means committee had several amendments to offer. The first increased the rate on gelatine, now prepared from fish bladders valued at not above 10 cents per pound, from 15 to 25 cents. The second placed a duty of one dollar per pound on bauxite not refined. In answer to a question by Mr. Wheeler (dem., Ala.), Mr. Grosvenor replied that a strong appeal had come up from Georgia and Alabama for protection to this article. These two vast deposits in those two states—sufficient to supply the world. Mr. Dockery said this was a novel proposition in connection with protection. Heretofore, he said, protection was accorded to equalize labor conditions. Now, for the first time, it was proposed to equalize freight rates. Mr. Simpson offered some amendments which were ruled out of order. He also stated in effect that the tariff had been the football of politics for a century, and that the populists had no faith in the ability of either the republican or democratic tariff law to remedy the evils of the existing gold standard.

Mr. McCall (rep., Mass.) was the first republican to step the bill in the face. He boldly expressed the opinion that the duties in the bill were too high. He especially mentioned wool.

"Are the duties on woolens manufactured in New England too high?" asked Mr. Hopkins (rep., Ill.).

"The duties in this bill are too high," reiterated Mr. McCall. Then, turning defiantly to Mr. Hopkins, he continued: "To put it categorically to your question, I do not hesitate to say I think these duties could be reduced without detriment either to the wool grower or the wool manufacturer."

Mr. Loverin (rep., Worcester, Mass.), a large manufacturer, followed Mr. McCall's lead, and again aroused the plaudits of the opposition by declaring that the manufacturers of New England did not want the duties in the woolen and worsted schedules in the bill, neither the compensatory nor the straight duties. "We want a tariff law that will live and stand," said he, "we do not want to be strangled with free trade, neither do we want to be smothered with protection." Mr. Linnell, one of the members of the ways and means committee from Connecticut, exposed the fact in the course of his remarks that Mr. Loverin, who is a cotton manufacturer, had asked for increase on the finer grades of cotton yarns. Mr. Walker (Mass.) also attacked the position of his colleagues, and in extraordinary discussion, as Mr. Dingley termed it, drew from the majority leader a vigorous argument upon the cotton and woolen schedules. He said it was the unanimous testimony of the cotton manufacturers that they could not maintain their own in the manufacture of the finer goods unless the duties were left as they are. The Wilson law, they testified, furnished adequate protection to the coarser goods, which were produced in a dollar a head. But the New England manufacturers, including Mr. Loverin, testified to the necessity of these increases.

Washington, March 30.—The ways and means committee Tuesday offered a number of important amendments. Among them was one admitting free of duty "books, maps, engravings, charts, models, etc., for scientific and educational purposes."

Mr. Cannon (rep., Ill.) declared that he was for spending the bill. He was not pleased with all its features. He thought there could well be a duty on hides, as the farmers there are deeply interested. He went that a duty on hides would raise the price of cattle a dollar a head.

Mr. Slayden (dem., Tex.) argued that a duty on hides would be of greatest benefit to the great cattle raisers of the plains of Texas, Kansas and the Dakotas.

Mr. Bell (pop., Col.) warned the republicans that if they passed this bill containing high duties, without imposing at least a revenue duty on hides, distinctly a product of the farm, they would regret it. He should the wool men of a few states be so generously dealt with and the cattle-raisers be denied anything?

Mr. Dingley defended the action of the committee, saying that when the bill of 1890 was being prepared the present occupant of the white house made a very exhaustive investigation of the subject and found first, that the great body of hides produced in this country were a by-product of the slaughter of cattle for food; second, that their price was made here; second, that goat and other skins dutied under the country law not produced here, and third, that the hides imported, except in a few instances, were dry hides, used in making sole leather, a large proportion of which was exported. We could tan hides with our own material for the foreign market. Our tanning industry, he said, was adjusted to free hides, and it was decided that a duty on hides would be of advantage to the farmer, and would be a distinct disadvantage to our export trade.

Mr. Hopkins (rep., Ill.) declared that the wool interests dwarfed in contrast with the vast cattle interests of the country. Iowa was one of the largest states in hides. Ohio marketed annually 33,000,000 worth of hides, and 60 per cent. of its shipment was of wool. "We insist," he shouted, "that the tanning industries of New York, Pennsylvania and New England should not be allowed to stifle the demands of the west."

Mr. Buckner (dem., Mich.) denounced the duty on logs and lumber as robbery. The lumber barons were permitted to go into Canada and have their lumber sawed by cheap labor there. "It is a free trade in labor and protection for the manufacturer.

Mr. Lentz (dem., O.) presented a number of protests from bituminous coal miners against the restoration of 75 cents a ton duty on coal. He said that restoration was in the interest of the anthracite coal trust of the east.

Mr. Grosvenor (rep., O.), in reply said Mr. Lentz' remarks had demonstrated his ignorance. He said that no "Ohio coal operator had asked the restoration of the duty on coal had come until after the bill had been reported to the house. The east was in favor of a lower duty on coal.

Change of Programme.

American Girl—Ma, the Scotch lord has invited me to see the new tragedy with him to-night, and I see by the papers that the star is ill and the drama will not be produced. It's awfully provoking.

Ma—That does not matter, dear; you have seen the tragedy once, and no doubt some other play will be presented. Go with him, of course.

American Girl (after the performance)—You sat through the comedy without a smile, and it was awfully funny, too; I nearly died laughing.

Scotch Lord—Why didna ye tell me it was a comedy? I bought stalls for a tragedy.—N. Y. Weekly.

Josephus Clamwhooper, who resides in Hardtown, married his deceased wife's sister shortly after the death of the former. Not long after his marriage, Clamwhooper met Pete Amsterdam, who had just returned from a trip to the south, and had not heard of his friend's bereavement, so Pete asked, sympathetically:

"For whom are you wearing crape?"

"I am in mourning for—for my—for my late sister-in-law," replied Clamwhooper diplomatically. — Tammany Times.

Habit of Doing Well.

Learning to do well is like learning to swim. You wade into the water, out not far, for fear you will drown. You try again, and do a little better. You swallow a good deal of water, but you keep on splashing, and finally can swim. So you must keep on doing well until you learn how. A habit is something which we have. That is what the word means. It often becomes something which has us.—Detroit Free Press.

Unanticipated Pleasure.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—SENATE—Roosevelt session Saturday.

HOUSE—The progress of the house on the tariff bill was even slower Saturday than Friday. Only five more of the 162 pages of the bill were disposed of, making 14 pages in all in the two of the five days allowed for consideration. At this rate only 35 pages of the bill will be disposed of before the bill comes to a final vote. Only five amendments were adopted Saturday, all of minor importance, and each an amendment of the ways and means committee. All the questions involved in the tariff, with occasional incursions into the realm of the financial theories, furnished fruitful topics for the members.

WASHINGTON, March 30.—SENATE—The senate Monday spent about an hour in open session and about two hours and a half in secret session discussing the arbitration treaty. A remonstrance against the treaty was presented from the Monroe Democratic club, of Philadelphia, which characterizes it as "craftily contrived to advance the interests of England and to coerce the United States into the adoption of a reciprocity treaty with Canada." A bill appropriating $250,000 to be expended in saving life and property endangered by the great floods in the Mississippi valley was reported and passed.

HOUSE.—The rumored dissatisfaction among the members of the house with the schedules of the tariff bill was manifested when the Merchants' association club, of Philadelphia, which characterizes it as "craftily contrived to advance the interests of England and to coerce the United States into the adoption of a reciprocity treaty with Canada." A bill appropriating $250,000 to be expended in saving life and property endangered by the great floods in the Mississippi valley was reported and passed.

James J. Allphin, of Berkshire, this county has a very rare coin, one of the few ever in circulation. It is a half cent coined in 1804. On one side is the wreath encircling the words "United States of America," the words "half cent" in center of the coin and 1-200 at the bottom. On the reverse side is the head of Columbia with 1804 and the word "Liberty" underneath. The coin is a very rare one and Mr. Allphin would not part with it for any reasonable sum.

The toll-gate raiders are extending their anarchistic supervision to all branches of business in Washington county They have destroyed many tobacco beds, and left notices that no poor man shall raise any tobacco for three years, and that rich men must quit raising it altogether. Many tenants, who will thus be unable to live without a tobacco crop, will move out of the county. Some of the millers have been notified that they must not charge to exceed $2 per 100 pounds for flour.

"About sixteen years ago," says the Warsaw Independent, "Ben Estill the blacksmith, was shot in the arm by Con North, while standing in front of the old Arcade building, and the bullet from a 32-calibre pistol, was never extracted. The bullet would work up and down the arm from the wrist to the elbow, and last week he noticed a lump on his wrist, and surmising it to be the bullet, Estill cut it out with apparently no difficulty. It was flattened on one end where it had struck a bone but was in a fine state of preservation. Estill suffered very little inconvenience from the wound but feels better since the leaden missle has been extracted."

A Card.

The report having gain a general circulation in the North end of the county, that when I was sick at the residence of my sister, Tabitha Green, in the town of Petersburg, Ky., in the winter of 1896, she drove me from her house before I recovered, and while I was yet sick, now, for the purpose of setting at ease the minds of those persons who take so much interest in the affairs of other persons, I denounce the whole report as an infamous falshood, made of whole cloth, and state that when I was sick at my sister's house during the winter of 1896, I was cared for and nursed by my sister as good and constantly as any one could ask, and that when I went away I did so of my own accord.
W. B. SHOTWELL.

A Magnificent Road.
It is a revelation to most people to know that such railway equipment exists south of the Ohio river as that of the Queen and Crescent Route. The block system; electric equipments such as track signals, electric headlights and crossing gouge; together with a perfectly lined rock-ballasted roadbed, all provide for the swift and safe movement of passenger trains of the most luxurious pattern. The Vestibule Limited leaves Chattanooga over the Queen and Crescent Route daily, on schedules which each year are made a little shorter, though scenery which is unsurpassed. Solid trains to Cincinnati, 9½ hours. Through Pullmans to Louisville ten hours.
O. L. MITCHELL,
Div. Pass'r Agt. Chattanoogo, Tenn.

The following shows the net amount of money each magisterial district in the county will receive for road purposes this year:

Burlington	$920 68
Bullittsville	573 01
Petersburg	582 03
Bellevue	359 15
Carlton	434 70
Hamilton	411 32
Beaver	334 55
Union	579 22
Verona	476 96
Walton	622 58
Florence	829 52
Constance	413 78
Total,	$6,637 50

In each magisterial district there are four overseers, and each will receive one-fourth of the money to which his district is entitled.

They have very bad whisky, or decidedly strauge kind of fish at Carrollton. The specimens caught are described as follows by the Democrat: "They are entirely unlike anything ever seen in this part of the country before. They were caught in the Ohio river on handlines—one by Charley Robinson and the other by Dave Ward. One is a foot long the other eight inches. The shape of this strauge creature is much like that of an eel. However, it has two short weak legs near its head and two near the tail. Its head resembles that of a catfish; its mouth is large; the eyes are defective—indeed it seems almost blind, the body is covered with a skin like that of an eel. A peculiarity of the ugly stranger is that its gills are on the outside of its head, entirely. The Enquirer of Tuesday contained an account of the capture, up in Ohio, of an animal exactly like the two above described. According to that account the thing is a Proteus—something very rare in America. It is well worth while to call in and see the curiosity when in Ghent."

J. J. Berkshire made a large delivery of fruit trees here, last Monday. What do the people of this county do with all the fruit trees they purchase? Large deliveries are made every spring and fall.

RUINS BY MOONLIGHT.

There Must Be an Exploration Made Before Reconstruction.

In the Ruins of One's Heart the Converted Must Search and Find True Religion—The Experience of Jeremiah—Sermon by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

Rev. Talmage's text Sunday was Nehemiah ii, 15: "Then I went up in the night by the brook and viewed the wall, and turned back, and entered by by the gate of the valley, and so returned."

A dead city is more suggestive than a living city—past Rome than present Rome—ruins rather than newly frescoed cathedral. But the best time to visit a ruin is by moonlight. The Colisoum is far more fascinating to the traveler after sundown than before. You may stand by daylight amid the monastic ruins of Melrose Abbey and study shafted oriel, rosetted stone and mullion, but they throw their strongest witchery by moonlight. Some of you remember what the enchanter of Scotland said in the "Lay of the Last Minstrel."

Wouldst thou view Melrose fair aright,
Go visit it by the pale moonlight.

Washington Irving describes the Andalusian moonlight upon the Alhambra ruins as amounting to an enchantment. My text presents you Jerusalem in ruins. The tower down. The gates down. The walls down. Everything down. Nehemiah on horseback, by moonlight looking upon the ruins. While he rides there are some friends on foot going with him, for they do not want the many horses to disturb the suspicions of the people. These people do not know the secret of Nehemiah's heart, but they are going as a sort of body guard. I hear the clicking hoofs of the horse on which Nehemiah rides, as he guides it this way and that, into this gate and out of that, winding through that gate amid the debris of once great Jerusalem. Now the horse comes to a dead halt at the tumbled masonry where he can not pass. Now the ashes of at the charred timbers. Now he comes along where the water under the moonlight flashes from the mouth of the brazen dragon after which the gate was named.

Heavy-hearted Nehemiah! Riding in and out, now by his old home desolated, now by the defaced temple, now amid the scars of the city that had gone down under battering ram and conflagration. The escorting party knows not what Nehemiah means. Is he getting crazy? Have his own personal sorrows, added to the sorrows of the nation, unbalanced his intellect? Still the midnight exploration goes on. Nehemiah on horseback rides through the fish gate, by the tower of the furnaces, by the king's pool, by the dragon well, in and out, in and out, until the midnight ride is completed, and Nehemiah dismounts from his horse, and to the amazed and confounded and incredulous body guard declares the dead secret of his heart when he says: "Come, now, let us build Jerusalem." "What, Nehemiah, have you any money?" "No." "Have you any kingly authority?" "No." "Have you any eloquence?" "No." Yet that midnight, moonlight ride of Nehemiah resulted in the glorious rebuilding of the city of Jerusalem. The people knew not how the thing was to be done, but with great enthusiasm they cried out: "Let us rise up now and rebuild the city." Some people laughed and said it could not be done. Some people were infuriated and defied physical violence, saying the thing should not be done. But the workmen went right on, standing on the wall, trowel in one hand, sword in the other, until the work was gloriously completed. At that very time in Grecce Xenophon was writing a history, and Plato was making philosophy, and Demosthenes was rattling his rhetorical thunder, but all of them together did not do so much for the world as this midnight, moonlight ride of praying, courageous, homesick, close-mouthed Nehemiah.

My subject first impresses me with the idea what an intense thing is church affection. Seize the bridle of that horse and stop Nehemiah. Why are you risking your life here in the night? Your horse will stumble over these ruins and fall on you. Stop this useless exposure of your life. No, Nehemiah will not stop. He at last tells us the whole story. He lets us know he was an exile in a far distant land, and was a servant, a cupbearer in the palace of Artaxerxes Longimanus, and one day while he was handling the cup of wine to the king, the king said to him: "What is the matter with you? You are not sick. I know you must have some great trouble. What is the matter with you?" Then he told the king how that beloved Jerusalem was broken down; how that his father's tomb had been desecrated; how that the temple had been dishonored and defaced; how that the walls were scattered and broken. "Well," said King Artaxerxes, "what do you want?" "Well," said the cup-bearer Nehemiah, "I want to go home. I want to fix up the grave of my father. I want to restore the beauty of the Temple. I want to rebuild the masonry of the city wall. Besides, I want passports so that I shall not be hindered in my journey. And besides that," as you will find in the context, "I want an order on the man who keeps your forest for just so much timber as I may need for the rebuilding of the city." "How long shall you be gone?" said the King. The time of absence is arranged. In hot haste this seeming adventurer comes to Jerusalem, and in my text we find him on horseback, in the midnight, riding around the ruins. It is through the spectacles of this scene that we discover the ardent attachment of Nehemiah for sacred Jerusalem, which in all days has been the type of the Church of God, our Jerusalem, which we love just as much as Nehemiah loved his Jerusalem. The fact is that you love the Church of God so much that there is no spot on earth so sacred, unless it be your own fireside. The church has been to you so much comfort and illumination that there is nothing that makes you so irate as to have it talked against. If there have been times when you have been carried into captivity by sickness, you longed for the church, our holy Jerusalem, just as much as Nehemiah longed for his Jerusalem, and the first day you came out you came to the house of the Lord. When the temple was in ruins, like Nehemiah, you walked around and looked at it, and in the moonlight you stood listening if you could not hear the voice of the dead organ, the psalm of the expired Sabbaths. What Jerusalem was to Nehemiah, the church of God is to you. Skeptics and infidels may scoff at the church as an obselete affair, as a relic of the dark ages, as a convention of goody-goody people, but all the impression they have ever made on your mind against the Church of God is absolutely nothing. You make more sacrifices for it to-day than any other institution, and if it were needful you would die in its defense. You can take the words of the kingly poet as he said: "If I forgot thee, O Jerusalem let my right hand forget her cunning." You understand in your own experience the pathos, the home sickness, the courage, the holy enthusiasm of Nehemiah in his midnight moonlight ride around the ruins of his beloved Jerusalem.

Again, my text impresses me with the fact that before reconstruction there must be an exploration of ruins. Why was not Nehemiah asleep under the covers? Why was not his horse stabled in the midnight? Let the police of the city arrest this midnight rider, out on some mischief. No, Nehemiah is going to rebuild the city and is making the preliminary exploration. In this gate, out that gate east, west, north, south. All through the ruins. The ruins must be explored before the work of reconstruction can begin. The reason that so many people this day, apparently converted, do not stay converted is because they did not first explore the ruins of their own heart. The reason that there are so many professed Christians who in this day lie and forge and steal and commit abominations and go to the penitentiary is because they first do not learn the ruins of their own heart. They have not found out that "the heart is deceitful above all things and desperately wicked." They had an idea that they were almost right, and they built religion as a sort of extension, as an ornamental cupola. There was a superstructure of religion built on a substratum of unrepented sins.

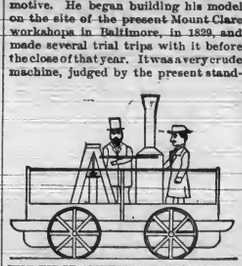
The trouble with a good deal of modern theology is that instead of building on the right foundation, it builds on the ruins of an unregenerate nature. They attempt to build Jerusalem before, in the midnight of conviction, they have seen the ghastliness of the ruin. They have such a poor foundation for their religion that the first northeast storm of temptation blows them down. I have no faith in a man's conversion if he is not converted in the old-fashioned way—John Bunyan's way, John Wesley's way, John Calvin's way, Paul's way, Christ's way. God's way. A dentist said to me: "Does that hurt?" Said I, "Of course it hurts. It is in your business as in my profession. We have to hurt before we can help." You will never understand redemption until you understand ruin. A man tells me that some one is a member of the church. It makes no impression on my mind at all. I simply want to know whether he was converted in the old-fashioned way, or whether he was converted in the new-fashioned way. If he was converted in the old-fashioned way he will stand. If he was converted in the new-fashioned way he will not stand. That is all there is about it. A man comes to me to talk about religion. The first question I ask him is: "Do you feel yourself to be a sinner?" If he say, "Well, I—yes," the hesitancy makes me feel that that man wants a ride on Nehemiah's horse by midnight through the ruins—in by the gate of his affections, out by the gate of his will; and before he has got through with that midnight ride he will drop his reins on the horse's neck and will take his right hand and smite on his heart and say, "God be merciful to me, a sinner;" and before he has stabled his horse he will take his feet out of the stirrups, and he will slide down on the ground, and he will kneel, crying, "Have mercy on me, O God, according to Thy loving kindness, according unto the multitude of Thy tender mercies; blot out my transgressions, for I acknowledge my transgressions, and my sins are ever before Thee."

Ah, my friends, you see this is not a complimentary Gospel. That is what makes some people so mad. It comes to a man of a million dollars, and impenitent in his sins, and says, "You're a pauper." It comes to a woman of fairest cheek, who has never repented, and says, "You're a sinner." It comes to a man priding himself on his independence, and says, "You're bound hand and foot by the devil." It comes to our entire race and says, "You're a ruin, a ghastly ruin, an illimitable ruin. Satan somctimes says to me, "Why do you preach that truth? Why don't you preach a Gospel with no repentance in it? Why don't you flatter men's hearts so that you make them feel all right? Why don't you preach a humanitarian Gospel, with no repentance in it, saying nothing about the ruin, talking all the time about the Redemption?" I say, "Get thee behind me, Satan." I would rather lead five souls into safety than twenty thousand into perdition. The redemption of the Gospel is a perfect farce if there is no ruin. "The whole need not a physician, but they that are sick." "If any one, though he be an angel from Heaven, preach any other Gospel than this," says the apostle, "let him be accursed." There must be the midnight ride over the ruins before Jerusalem can be built. There must be the clicking of the hoofs before there can be the ring of the trowels.

Again. My subject gives me a specimen of busy and triumphant sadness. If there was any man in the world who had a right to mope and give up everything as lost, it was Nehemiah. You say, "He was a cupbearer in the palace of Shushan, and it was a grand place." So it was. The hall of the palace was 230 feet square, and the roof hovered over 36 marble pillars, each pillar 50 feet high; and the intense blue of the sky, and the deep green of the forest foliage, and the white of the driven snow, all hung trembling in the upholstery. But, my friends, you know very well that fine architecture will not put down homesickness. Yet Nehemiah did not give up. Then when you see him going among these desolated streets, and by these dismantled towers, and by the tornup grave of his father, you would suppose that he would have been disheartened, and that he would have dismounted from his horse and gone to his room and said: "Woe is me! My father's grave is torn up. The temple is dishonored. The walls are broken down. I have no money with which to rebuild, I wish I had never been born. I wish I were dead." Not so says Nehemiah. Although he had a grief so intense that it excited the commentary of his king, yet that penniless, expatriated Nehemiah rouses himself up to rebuild the city. He gets his permission of absence. He gets his passport. He hastens away to Jerusalem. By night on horseback he rides through the ruins. He overcomes the most ferocious opposition. He arouses the piety and patriotism of the people, and in less than two months, namely, 52 days, Jerusalem was rebuilt. That's what I call busy and triumphant sadness.

My friends, the whole tempta tion is with you when you have made trouble, to do just the opposite to the behavior of Nehemiah, and that is to give up. You say: "I have lost my child and can never smile again." You say, "I have lost my property, and I can never repair my fortunes." You say, "I have fallen into sin, and I never can start again for a new life." If Satan can make you form that resolution, and make you keep it, he has ruined you. Trouble is not sent to crush you, but to arouse you, to animate you, to propel you. The blacksmith does not thrust the iron into the forge and then blow away with the bellows, and then bring the hot iron out on the anvil and beat it with stroke after stroke to ruin the iron, but to prepare it for a better use. Oh, that the Lord God of Nehemiah would rouse up all broken-hearted men to rebuild. Whipped, betrayed, shipwrecked, imprisoned, Paul went right on. The Italian martyr, Algerius, sits in his dungeon writing a letter, and he dates it, "From the delectable orchard of the Leonine Prison." That is what I call triumphant sadness. I knew a mother who buried her babe on Friday and on Sabbath appeared in the house of God and said: "Give me a class; give me a Sabbath-school class. I have no child now left me, and I would like to have a class of little children. Give me real poor children. Give me a class off the back street." That, I say, is beautiful. That is triumphant sadness. At 3 o'clock every Sabbath afternoon, for years, in a beautiful parlor in Philadelphia—a parlor pictured and statuetted—there were from 10 to 30 destitute children of the street. Those destitute children received religious instruction, concluding with cakes and sandwiches. How do I know that that was going on for 10 years? I know it in this way: That was the first home in Philadelphia where I was called to comfort a great sorrow. They had a splendid boy and he had been drowned at Long Branch. The father and mother almost idollzed the boy, and the sob and shriek of that father and mother as they hung over the coffin resound in my ears today. There seemed to be no use of praying, for when I knelt down to pray, the outcry in the room drowned out all the prayer. But the Lord comforted that sorrow. They did not forget their boy. If you should go any afternoon into Laurel Hill you would find a monument with the word "Walter" inscribed upon it, and a wreath of fresh flowers around the name. I think there was not an hour in 20 years, winter or summer, when there was not a wreath of fresh flowers around Walter's name. But the Christian mother who sent those flowers there, having no child left, Sabbath afternoons mothered 10 or 20 of the lost ones of the street. That is beautiful. That is what I call busy and triumphant sadness. Here is a man who has lost his property. He does not go to hard drinking. He does not destroy his own life. He comes and says: "Harness me for Christian work. My money's gone. I have no treasures on earth. I want treasures in Heaven. I have a voice and a heart to serve God." You say that that man has failed. He has not failed—he has triumphed!

Oh, I wish I could persuade all the people who have any kind of trouble never to give up. I wish they would look at the midnight rider of the text, and that the four hoofs of that beast on which Nehemiah rode might cut to pieces all your discouragements, and hardships, and trials. Give up! Who is going to give up, when on the bosom of God he can have all troubles hushed? Give up! Never think of giving up. Are you borne down with poverty. A little child was found holding her dead mother's hand in the darkness of a tenement house, and some one coming in, the little girl looked up, while holding her dead mother's hand, and said: "Oh, I do wish that God had made more light for poor folks." My dear, God will be your shelter. God will be your home.

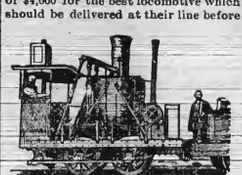


The total yearly demand for ivory billiard balls when trade in general is good is estimated to be about 110,000 to 115,000 balls, of which America and France absorb half, the remainder being used by England, Germany and other countries. Bad times reduce the number of balls required to about 80,000 to 85,000 per year.

ABOUT LOCOMOTIVES.

The Evolution of the American Steam Engine.

Peter Cooper's Crude Affair—Various Other Types in Early Use and Their Peculiarities—The Modern Flyer.



Although Peter Cooper never built a successful full-sized locomotive, he is none the less entitled to the renown of being the father of the American locomotive. He began building his model on the site of the present Mount Clare workshops in Baltimore, in 1829, and made several trial trips with it before the close of that year. It was a very crude machine, judged by the present standard, having an upright boiler with a single cylinder of 3¼ inches diameter and a stroke of 14½ inches. Instead of using the exhaust steam from the cylinder to produce a draught for the fire, as in all modern locomotives, Mr. Cooper placed a fan, revolved by a belt from one of the axles, in the funnel of his engine. The power was applied to the other axle by means of a toothed wheel. The strength of the engine was one horse-power, and attained the then extraordinary rate of 18 miles an hour.

On the following January 4, 1831, the directors of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad company issued their famous offer of $4,000 for the best locomotive which should be delivered at their line before the following June 1. The winner of this contest was Phineas Davis, who called his engine the "York," from York, Pa., where it was built. It was the first of the class known as "grasshoppers," and had a vertical boiler and cylinder. The exhaust steam revolved a fan which in turn revolved a second fan close to the ash pan by which air was forced up through the fire. Under favorable circumstances the "York" ran at as high a rate of speed as 30 miles an hour with three or four cars, and throughout the year 1832 had an average run of 50 miles a day. It was a little later than this that the horizontal boiler was substituted for the vertical one, and the name of the engines using the horizontal boilers were "crabs" to distinguish them from those of the "grasshopper" class.

Ross Winans invented the projecting journals on the axles of car wheels, thus producing at a stroke the friction of hauling them from twelve pounds to a ton to three pounds.

Mr. Winans' first two engines, manufactured in the fall of 1836, though eight tons each in weight, had a greater drawbar pull than any of the 12-ton engines made by Stephenson in England. In the following years the first of the famous "mud-diggers" was turned out at the Mount Clare works. This type of engine had driving wheels three feet in diameter, and cylinders 17 inches in diameter, with a 24-inch stroke. Assuming that the steam pressure in the boiler was 160 pounds to the square inch, such an engine must have had a draw-bar pull of 13,366 pounds, or enough power for even a good-sized engine of to-day, but if the bad balancing of all early locomotives be added to the friction of the toothed wheels, and the lateral and longitudinal play of the connecting rods, it may be safely inferred that the "mud digger" class was never able to apply more than half its nominal draw-bar pull.

The variety of locomotive still known as the "camel back" was first built by Ross Winans between 1850 and 1853. These were the first 30-ton engines ever used in any part of the world. Next to one modern class of engines, which shall here be nameless, they were perhaps the ugliest locomotives which have ever been built. Yet the "camel backs" could pull trains no other engine built up to this time could, and kept their scheduled time, summer and winter, over the mountain grades of the Alleghanies, and so well built were they that some of them put into service 30 years ago are still pegging away, much too good to be relegated to the scrap heap.

The "Dutch wagons" were introduced by Samuel J. Hayes in 1857. They were wood-burning engines with inside cylinders. As inside cylinders demand forged cranks on the driving axles, and as these crank axles are liable to fracture with excessive strain or after long use, American builders have wisely avoided them.

Between the era of the "Dutch wagons" and the mammoth locomotives of to-day lie the classes of engines familiar to every one, because examples of them are still to be found working on every branch road. But the latest example of engine building, as illustrated by the ten-wheeled consolidated passenger engines at present in use on the B. & O. road, brings up such magnificent concentration of speed, strength and endurance as were never before seen in the history of the world. These engines have six coupled wheels, six feet six inches in diameter, cylinders 21x26 inches, and a steam pressure of 170 pounds to the square inch. They haul the Royal Blue line trains, and on many occasions have gone a mile in 50 seconds, while one of them has been timed covering a mile in 32 seconds. When it is borne in mind that a "horsepower" really means what a very strong horse can lift in a minute, the force of one of these engines will be realized by concelving 1,100 horses all able to make one mighty pull at the same moment. As to speed, one of these engines will advance at the almost inconceivably rapid rate of 100 feet in a second. There may be inventions which may be considered more marvelous than the modern high-power locomotive, but surely none displays in concrete result the power of man to imprison so mighty a force in so small a compass.

COST SEVEN MILLIONS.

Baltimore & Ohio Receivers Issue a Statement.

Messrs. John K. Cowen and Oscar G. Murray were appointed receivers for the B. & O. railroad on February 27, 1896, and since they have had charge very large sums of money have been expended in placing the road in first-class condition. The following is a statement prepared by them of expenditures from March 1, 1896, to February 1, 1897:

Within the past few days the receivers have prepared a statement of expenditures from March 1, 1896, to February 1, 1897, for additions to the plant, equipment of the road and betterments made thereon. From this statement it is learned that a total of almost $7,000,000 have been spent for locomotives, passenger and freight equipment, extraordinary repairs to equipment and expenditures made by the engineering department in the way of improvements to the maintenance of way, structures, terminals, and the construction of new alignments and miscellaneous improvements. It is shown that the betterments to locomotives amount to $18,000; the new freight equipment, which includes new dining cars and other passenger cars and betterments, amounts to $96,000; the new freight cars built by the road, and the repairs to those already in service, amounted to $177,000, the total being something over $250,000. The 5,000 new freight cars and the 75 locomotives which were added to the equipment last summer cost about $3,300,000 in round numbers. The extraordinary repairs to locomotives, passenger equipment and freight equipment aggregate $1,340,000; the total expenditures in the motive department being within a few thousand of five millions. The engineering department has also spent a great deal of money.

SCHOOL AND CHURCH.

—Capt. Mahan has been elected a vestryman in All Angels Protestaut Episcopal church in New York.

—The London school board rule forbidding collections in schools was suspended in order to allow subscriptions to the Indian famine fund.

—It is said that an engineer and chemist, who died in Italy a few weeks since, bequeathed his possessions, about $10,000,000, to the university at Stockholm, Sweden.

—Some years ago Rev. Crane, the father of Stephen Crane, the novelist, wrote a tract on popular amusements, in which he condemned novel-reading as one of the vices of the age.

—Fewer deacons and priests of the Episcopal church were ordained in England last year than for any corresponding 12 months since 1876. But as the number ordained was 1,321, the supply must be regarded as ample.

—Mrs. Daniel Howard, of Jeffersonville, Ind., had her home connected by telephone with the Presbyterian church, being at times prevented by illness from attending the service. The experiment was very successful.

—The czar has assigned a sum of 65,000 rubles from the imperial treasury for the erection of residential quarters for the female students attending the St. Petersburg Medical Institution for Women. The building will be opened this year.

—Could there a better, more fitting memorial to Mrs. Stowe, than a Harriet Beecher Stowe scholarship at Hampton, Fiske or Tuskegee, as suggested by her son, Rev. Charles E. Stowe, in preference to the statue or monument proposed by her admirers? It is the children's privilege to place a monument over their mother's grave. This other memorial would certainly be, as her son says, quite in keeping with his mother's tastes, and far more useful to God and man.

REPRESENTED THE OLD SCHOOL.

Oddities of the Late Dowager Empress of Japan.

The empress dowager of Japan, whose death was recently announced, was one of the few surviving members of the old regime in the imperial circle. She had her separate palaces and courts at Kioto and Tokio, where the ancient system prevailed. She seldom appeared at official functions and had made but one concession to modern ways. She used a landau, with men in livery on the box. She had charge of the imperial nurseries, where the children of the emperor by his various wives are kept until they reach the age of five or six. There were rooms set apart for her at the palace of her son, but she seldom occupied them, for she visited but little, and could not reconcile herself to the change that had come over land and people.

The great change was no change of her making. She had brought up her son, Mutsu Hito, in the most orthodox and respectable way. At the age of 16, when he came to the throne, he could read the Chinese classics, write poetry, arrange flowers according to the elaborate system of the Japanese, and give a tea party with appropriate ceremony. That was about all, and the fond mother no doubt thought it was quite enough. The 120 predecessors of Mutsu Hito, in the same line, who had ruled Japan for 2,500 years, had never known more, and most of them had known less. The lad was worshiped as a god, like his fathers before him; and that sort of reverence covers a multitude of sins in the object of adoration. No man might look upon his face and live. He was never allowed to wear the same garment twice, nor to eat of the same dish a second time, both clothing and crockery being destroyed at once.

So things went on until he ventured to look at the sun without a veil, liked it, and thenceforth turned his imperial countenance upon his whole people. The new man had come to town. Changes followed with startling rapidity. Forty-nine superior persons, with their wives and sisters, were sent around the world to report on constitutions, manners, customs and education for men and women. The poor dowager empress must have stood by, like the mother of Aladdin, with her hands in the air; but her astonishing boy was not be gainsaid. She lived long enough to be about the only "dowdy" in the court circle and to see haughty China on its knees before her son's throne.—London News.

Hunting Trophies in the Household.

One of the curious fads of the day is the use of some hunting trophy as an article of household furniture or decoration. Man and womankind are both enthusiasts upon the subject. The man's den, studio or library must contain a piece of this kind, the foundation of which was gained in some fall or winter hunting trip, while the feminine boudoir or drawing room also boasts one presented by a masculine admirer. Among the skins figuring most prominently in this way is that of the elephant. Strange as it seems, the hide of this ungainly creature can be and is used in a dozen unique ways. The leg of the elephant forms an odd corner closet. The skin of a "baby" of the species makes an arm-chair. Another weird chair is covered with the skins of small animals, such as the red fox, otter, etc. The arms and legs of the seat terminate in the heads of these tiny beasts, which are placed where knobs would occur in the everyday article. Bears are greatly in use among those who go in for this fad. One fashionable house owns a stuffed bear arranged as a species of dumb-waiter. Entrucks from small legs and feet of deer and kindred creatures are much in evidence. —Buffalo Commercial.

BATTLE IN A TREE.

How Bold Robin Redbreast Vanquished His Enemy.

They were a very devoted couple just at this time, though I have reason to believe that at other seasons of the year they nagged at one another a good bit, like other husbands and wives. He was a handsome fellow, and as for her she was as fond and affectionate as a loveslek little robin redbreast can be. They had built and furnished their house in the topmost branches of the only tree in our street, close to my study window—a poplar—and I enjoyed a splendid view of their honeymooning, and of his kindnesses and courtesy to her—behavior which made me smile as coming from him, because it was so very unlike him as he was for 11 months or so of the year. Well, they built what appeared to be a satisfactory home from their own point of view, and chirped and congratulated one another endlessly over the accomplishment. Soon after it was finished she laid an egg therein, and presently another; then a third and a fourth, and I think a fifth.

Then there came a time of comparative quiet; there was less chirping and idle conversation. She sat and dozed on her eggs as he did much the same upon the garden paling, or on an adjacent branch of the poplar, or anywhere that came, looking deeply dejected. Occasionally when she left the house in order to get a bit of dinner or breakfast, he would go and sit on the edge of the neat, and sometimes hopped in and fussed around, and kept poking the eggs with his beak, turning them over and over and gloating over them in a way which displeased the missus, seemingly; for he was always turned out with personalities on her return, and would then sail away to the fence and sit there more dejected than ever.

At last the eggs hatched and a busy time began; a time of innumerable expeditions on the part of both parents, foraging expeditions to every point of the compass; a time of funny noises from tiny, unseen personalities among the straws which formed their home; a bad time for the worms and such like game, for the youngsters were voracious and insatiable and kept their parents on the move all day and every day.

About a week after the hatching of the eggs, Thomas, the cat from No. 15, down this row, began to take an interest in the family. He had, apparently, made his calculations as to the hatching of those eggs, having watched the parent birds at their honeymooning, and, probably, taken a note of the date of the laying. When the youngsters were a week or so old, Thomas gave up his other engagements in order to come and lie in my garden and gaze up into the poplar tree, and blink, licking his lips at intervals. During this time nothing could seduce Thomas from this fascinating occupation. His friends would come over the wall and speak to him, and try to wean him from the contemplation of the robin's nest, but he took no notice of them, he hadn't time; his calculations were too absorbing. It was so difficult, you see, to decide as to the exact age at which a young robin has attained his high water mark of succulency.

So Thomas' friends would come and shake their heads over him and go and talk to their other acquaintances about the deplorable falling away of dear Thomas and the hope they entertained that he might still recover his lost ground when he should have got over that unfortunate craze of his. Some of the community laughed consumedly over this phase of Thomas' career; they said they could not help recalling what happened to Eliza—another member of the society—a couple of years ago, when she took to bird hunting. She had made a bid for the season's brood of this very couple of robins and had fared badly at their hands—or heads; it had been a killing sight, they said—killing! It might be there would be a parallel spectacle on this occasion, if Thomas really intended to make a bid for the youngsters up aloft.

Mr. and Mrs. Robin took no notice whatever of Thomas—indeed, they never once betrayed the fact, that they knew he was there, though Thomas lay and blinked up at their happy domestic home and calculated and licked his lips all day long. I thought it odd that these devoted parents should feel no anxiety as to the proceedings of Thomas. To me it seemed clear that his intentions were far from being honorable; yet these optimistic people either disregarded him altogether, or—if they observed his presence at all—desired to show their contempt for his machinations by pretending to be unaware of his existence.

But presently the little speckle-breasted boys and girls had nearly grown out of the parental mansion; they would take to flying soon; their fat little bodies were as succulent and delicious as they would ever be, and Thomas knew that the time had come for his climb. Thomas knew very well what had befallen Eliza. She had been foolhardy. Eliza had rushed the thing, and had been detected and ignominiously sent home by a combined attack of the enemy. Thomas intended to act with discretion and intelligence.

One morning Mr. Robin had left the premises upon a foraging expedition. Mrs. R—— had absented herself upon a similar enterprise; the time had come. Thomas crept, snakelike, along the grass of the lawn, looked up the poplar, blinked, opened his mouth without speaking, and jumped four or five feet up the long bare trunk of the tree. At the same instant Mr. Robin pere arrived on the scene. He darted quickly in from the opposite side, so that the trunk was between Thomas and himself, and settled himself quietly upon a branch, whence he could see all that passed.

The cat Thomas, ignorant of the proximity of danger, clung on to the trunk like grim death and hauled himself up a few feet. Mr. Robin, supremely ignorant of the circumstance, interested himself in a feather far away under his wing; he worked hard to find the feather, pulling it out at last, and letting it float away out of his beak.

Thomas clung on to the tree trunk, all the claws of all his feet being requisitioned for the exertion, and stared up at the nest, gathering strength for a rush. Mr. Robin yawned and pretended to be deeply interested in the foliage of the poplar, which, of course, formed no portion of his real diet, though he picked at it now and nibbled a little, for effect. He did this in case Thomas should have caught sight of him, in order that Thomas might, in that case, suppose that his own movements had not been observed. The bare trunk of the poplar was a long one, you see, and Mr. Robin was anxious that Thomas should not be alarmed before he had reached an elevation which would suit the plans he had laid out. As a matter of fact Thomas had not seen him at all, up to now.

At length the assassin—the would-be assassin—took a long breath, blinked twice or thrice, and scrambled about 20 feet higher up the tree. Then he stopped to rest. Mr. Robin yawned again, spat out the leaf he was pretending to eat, chuckled concealment to the winds and his own round body into the air, and flopped down upon the branch nearest to Thomas' head; for the unutterable dishonest individual, who thus found himself suddenly in an extremely awkward position between the devil and the deep sea—Mr. Robin representing the devil, whom he rather resembled just now, and the drop of nearly 30 feet the deep sea.

Thomas looked upwards and perceived a climb of 15 feet, at least, to the nearest bough; he looked downwards—and it made him quite giddy, so high had he climbed. Also his paws and muscles generally were strained and weary, and the devil, in the shape of Mr. Robin, sat and yawned and watched him, as though with indifference, though with a very nasty look about the eye, up above. Thomas blinked and his ears lay back on his head with rage and fear, and his back fried to arch, but failed by reason of his uncomfortable attitude, which did not lay itself out for arching; and Thomas opened his mouth to swear or say his prayers, and I cannot say for certain which, because no sound came.

Mr. Robin allowed Thomas to thoroughly enjoy his position for a minute or two; then he called up his wife. "Come on, missus," he cried, "and you shall see some fun; I have Thomas, the cat, on toast; no hurry!" or words to that effect. Mrs. Robin arrived at once and sat down to watch, and I verily believe the five little ones popped their heads out of the nest and watched also.

Mr. Robin now took the field. He quietly left his bough and poised himself in air close to Thomas' distracted person. Thomas rudely spat at him and viciously struck at him with one of his front paws, which he unfastened from the bark of the tree for the purpose. This nearly lost him his hold and he quickly grabbed the trunk again and spat freely. Then Mr. Robin dellvered his main attack. He swooped at Thomas and dug his businesslike beak into his head and his body; once, twice and a third time he repeated his blow, and Thomas found his voice and rummaged his vocabulary for all the worst things it contained.

But hard swearing did not save Thomas. He could not hit Mr. Robin back, because he knew that if he did he must let go his hold and fall to the earth. Nevertheless he did strike at Mr. Robin, for that hero had aimed a fourth and a fifth shot at him, and the attack was painful, as well as dangerous to the eyesight. Thomas flashed his wicked green orbs at the enemy—swore, spat and struck out at him. The inevitable happened, of course. Thomas fell.

A baffled, beaten, dejected cat was Thomas as he crept across the lawn, accompanied by Mr. Robin, who was now joined by his lady; and over the paling into No. 4 he went, and across No. 4 garden and into No. 3, still jeered at and insulted by his escort, and there I lost sight of the party. What sanctuary the defeated one sought I do not know; but this I know—that I saw no more of Thomas for many days, and when he did return his countenance wore that chastened expression which is assumed by those who have seen the error of their wicked ways and have made good resolutions for the future.

As for the little Robins, they grew up in peace, and in peace they took their ultimate departure, whither I know not.

It was after the departure of these birds and their heroic parents that Thomas reappeared in society.

LOST IN CARS.

Some curious things are picked up by sleeping car porters and a goodly proportion of them are turned over to persons in authority to be restored to their owners if called for. The "found" bureau of a palace car company often affords an interesting study. An innumerable variety of ticketed articles there displayed bears ocular testimony to the freaks of absentmindedness. There are pathetic as well as amusing suggestions in these lost articles, for some of them are obviously mementos of tender associations. A baby's tiny worsted shoe, for instance, found in a sleeping berth where no baby had been, tells its own touching little story.

Each article, as soon as it is handed to the custodian of the "found" bureau, is made into a neat parcel and marked with the day and hour of finding, name of the sleeping car number of the train and the name of the finder. Most of these mislaid personal effects are found under the seats or in the lavatories of the cars. Fully two-thirds of the women's belongings which are picked up by the sleeping car porters are toilet articles or jewelry left in the lavatories. It was only a few days ago that a porter found two valuable finger rings in a washbowl. They had been sucked into the escape pipe together and fortunately became wedged there so that they were not carried away by the outflowing water. The owner of the rings said, when they were restored to her, that she was sure she had put them in her satchel" and seemed quite indignant at the temerity of the porter in insisting that he found them in the washbowl.

Umbrellas, canes and shawl-straps constitute a majority of the "finds" in sleeping cars. They are seldom reclaimed, although kept by the company's custodian for a year. Some of the oddities in the bureau's collection may be enumerated as follows: One white satin slipper, a woman's bead and lace bonnet, chafing dish, pair of trousers, two hair switches, one set of false teeth, silver candlestick and wax candle, one fine linen nightrobe, package of perfumed letters tied with pink ribbon, an ear trumpet, one crutch and three or four caged birds.

One in a great while a pocketbook containing money is turned in at the "found" bureau. Such "finds" are quickly called for. The loss of money is usually discovered before the loser leaves the car, consequently if it has been mislaid on that particular car it is searched for then and there. Passengers usually feel for their money the first thing after awakening in the morning and, finding that all right, apparently do not tax their minds with anything else. Occasionally, however, men who carry their money loosely in their pockets lose it by pulling it out with a pair of gloves, a handkerchief or a notebook. Not long ago the conductor of a sleeping car which had just been emptied of its passengers in the Grand Central station found $400 in bills lying on the platform just outside the door. He took it to the office of the general superintendent and it was called for within an hour.—N. Y. Times.

WHITE AND BLACK CRAVATS.

In Former Times They Were Badges of the Wearer's Profession.

Years ago the white tie in this country was the characteristic wear of the reverend clergy, their monopoly. Thence it passed into general use and disputed popularity with the black. The black neckcloth was early in this century likewise a professional badge. Those who followed the profession of arms claimed the right to wear it as their monopoly and sometimes enforced that right. Cooper in "Wing and Wing" makes a very dramatic use of this custom. A French privateer captain in disguise has fallen into the hands of the English and is brought before a court martial. So skillfully does he stick to his assumed character of a fisherman that his judges are puzzled until one of his accusers suddenly places around the prisoner's throat the black neckcloth which all officers wore. Then his true character blazes forth and he is condemned, but escapes execution to die sword in hand. Cooper knew what he was writing about, for he too had been an officer.

Military and naval men wore black cravats when in plain clothes and civilians aped them until black became the only wear. Before the rise of the black cravat carelessly tied white lace, the Steenkirk, had been in vogue for neckwear. Its popularity likewise was a civilian tribute to military valor. At the battle of Steenkirk the French loyal guards, the household troops being suddenly called from their tents to meet the oncoming English, had no time to tie their rich lace cravats with their accustomed neatness and loosely knotted them about their throats. They were the dandies of Europe, the perfect pinks of military propriety, and were correspondingly brave. They did up the English in about one round, and thenceforward the Steenkirk cravat was the fashion, and the more carelessly it was knotted the more Steenkirky it was.

As white is now the color of peace, may not the psychologist be justified in hailing snowy cravats as evidence of man's recognition that peace hath her victories not less fashionable than those of war and as worthy of being commemorated at the neck? — Boston Transcript.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

On the Verge of a Total Collapse.

The Wear and Tear Incident to the Life of a Traveling Salesman Very Often Results Seriously.

From the Press, Cleveland, Ohio.

J. H. Whann, who lives in suite No. 20 in the Body block, corner of Payne and Wilson Avenues, Cleveland, Ohio, had suffered for months from nervous prostration and extreme nervousness. His nervous system had become undermined by irregular habits, and he was reduced to the verge of total prostration. Mr. Whann is no longer a traveling salesman, that occupation was fraught with too much danger to his health, and he abandoned it. At present he is connected with the Manning Coal Company, and has charge of a mine three miles distant from Alliance, Ohio, and there he spends most of his time.

"Traveling salesmen have to put up with a great many inconveniences when they are on the road," said Mr. Whann. "Meals, sleep and rest, are often irregular, and these causes insettle one's nerves, I was rapidly approaching a point where I would become a nervous wreck when I employed extreme measures. I found it almost impossible to read or write for a period longer than a few minutes. I would pick up a newspaper with the intention of glancing over the news of the day. In five or ten minutes I would have to lay the paper aside and get up and walk around to quiet my nerves. It was the same thing when I tried to write. I could write for a few minutes and then have to give it up, as my hands would become shaky and my whole body and mind in a quiver.

"This nervousness brought on severe headaches; it also brought a loss of sleep, all of which combined to gradually break down my health. I became run down and lost my appetite and performed my duties with no heart whatever. My friends recommended one medicine or another, and one of them suggested Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. I bought a few boxes and followed the directions regarding their use. They restored my nerves to their normal and natural condition; they drove away the violent headaches and insomnia, and made me feel like a man who enjoyed life. I am now, at times troubled with a headache while superintending the work at the mine, but the pills quickly and effectively dissipate it."

Mrs. Whann, too, is very enthusiastic in her praise of the pills. She has used them for headache and nervousness, and has recommended them to many of her friends.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restored vitality to the nerves. They are an unfailing specific for such diseases as locomotor ataxia, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, nervous headache, the after affect of la grippe, palpitation of the heart, pale and sallow complexions, all forms of weakness either in male or female. Pink Pills are sold by all dealers, or will be sent post paid on receipt of price, 50 cents per box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

South Dakota in Springtime

Is clothed with verdure green and spotted with the beautiful blue and white prairie flowers, tokens of luxuriant soil like that fair country to which Moses led the children of Israel in ancient times.

And like unto that land of plenty, South Dakota outrivals its sister states of the East in the products of its soil, sown, cultivated and harvested in less time and with greater ease than in any other portion of the United States.

And so we say unto you that now is the opportunity of a lifetime to "Go West and buy a farm." For descriptive lists and prices, address Geo. H. Heafford, G. P. A., Chicago, Ill.

THE MAYOR IN JAIL.

How the Executive of New York Came to Be Sent Up.

Judge M. May, of this city, was once instrumental in sending William L. Strong, now mayor of New York city, to the county jail for six weeks, says the Mansfield (O.) News. At that time Manuel May wasn't a judge, and Strong, who is now known all over the country by reason of the figure he has cut in New York politics, was not mayor of New York. The judge, when questioned in regard to the matter, readily gave the incident as he remembered it:

"It was 30 years ago, and I was a notary public in those days. I was directed to take some depositions in a case in which there was an alleged fraud in regard to some financial matters. Strong refused to answer some questions, as he, I think, had received the information on certain points in confidence.. He was obstinate, and I exercised my prerogative and sent him to jail. Strong moved in what was considered the elite of Mansfield society in those days, and they stuck to him through his term of imprisonment. The town was about divided on the proposition as to whether it was right to send him to jail. Strong had a real nice time while he was in jail. His friends visited him every day and helped him pass away the hours. Finally, after Strong had been locked up for six weeks, a higher court concluded that he had had enough and he was released."

THE KIDNEYS PURIFY THE BLOOD

Pistols and Pestles.

The duelling pistol now occupies its proper place, in the museum of the collector of relics of barbarism. The pistol ought to have beside it the pestle that turned out pills like bullets, to be shot like bullets at the target of the liver. But the pestle is still in evidence, and will be, probably, until everybody has tested the virtue of Ayer's sugar coated pills. They treat the liver as a friend, not as an enemy. Instead of driving it, they coax it. They are compounded on the theory that the liver does its work thoroughly and faithfully under obstructing conditions, and if the obstructions are removed, the liver will do its daily duty. STATE NEWS.

It is now claimed that there is no glanders among Bourbon county horses.

W. H. Searcy has discovered what may prove a valuable deposit of zinc and lead in Anderson county.

Diphtheria is epidemic at Richmond and the city schools have been closed for an indefinite period.

Gov. Bradley has pardoned Gilbert Salyor, who was twice convicted of killing two men in Bell county.

Three men were killed and one fatally injured by the explosion of the boiler at a saw mill near Augusta, Ky.

At Martinsburg, a four-year-old child of Giles Brumgton fell into a kettle of hot soap and was literally boiled to death.

The tax-payers of the State are paying $1,500 a day for the wrangling at Frankfort as to who shall be United States Senator.

It is rumored that the penitentiary at Frankfort is full of small pox. If this is true, of course, there is danger of the prisoners breaking out.

Mary Ellen Brown, a colored girl of Georgetown, has qualified in the Scott County Court as a notary public. This is the first instance of this kind in that county.

John Leavell, son of B. S. Leavell, died at his home in Christian county, of lockjaw, after terrible sufferings, the result of a scratch received on his hand several days since.

One of the deputies at the hanging of Jackson and Walling is authority for the statement that Mrs. Jackson advised her son to die manfully, as die he must, and to die with all his secrets buried in his breast.

Our friends, the enemy, are justly entitled to say all the mean thing they may about the situation at Frankfort. For more than a week past 67 bull-headed men have been attempting to overthrow the sovereign will of 6 self-sacrificing patriots.

The Court of Appeals has rendered a decision which exempts Georgetown from the operation of the Scott county local option law. The court holds that the county exclusive of Georgetown, is under local option, but as the town held a separate election and declared in favor of license, the town is not under the operation of the local option law.

In the house last week Representative Stoll introduced a bill providing that persons convicted of the crime of burglary shall, in addition to the penalty now provided, before being released have tattooed on each cheek the letter "B" in such manner as not to be hidden from view by any beard the convict may thereafter be able to grow.—Commonwealth.

Death Watch Murray, who was with Jackson and Walling during their last hours on earth, and who accompanied them to the scaffold, made a startling statement. He says it is an absolute fact that neither Jackson nor Walling thought they were to be hung, maintaining that belief even after the black caps had been drawn over their heads. He says that they took the entire affair to be a bluff to secure from them a confession, seeing that they were not disposed to give one in any other manner. But a few hours before their execution Walling told Murray that they could not fool him with preparations for hanging, for he knew it to be only a method to extract from them a confession of the crime. Mr. Murray says that accounts for the brave manner in which the two men met death and for the boldness with which they greeted friends during the morning of the execution.

CROP AND STOCK.

An Illinois farmer has discovered that seed corn soaked in coal oil renders the growing corn chinch-bug proof. He plowed up his wheat and planted the ground in corn. The seed for five acres was soaked in coal oil and the other forty was not. The bugs ate up the forty acres and never touched the five acres. It is worth a million if it's true.

Judge Scott decided a novel case at Nicholasville. A man from that city had bought a horse, warranted sound, at Richmond and gave a check for it. The holder of the check had it cashed at a Richmond bank. The horse proved unsound and the signer of the check stopped its payment by his home bank. The Richmond bank brought suit and Judge Scott decided that the man could not stop the payment of the check after it had passed into the hands of an innocent purchaser.

"The wheat crop is always being harvested somewhere," said a man on the Board of trade. "Just now, while the American farmer is not thinking of wheat, the crop of Australia, Chili and the Argentine republic is being put on the market. In February and March the fields of upper Egypt and those of India are harvested. That of lower Egypt, which is irrigated by the overflowing of the Nile, is harvested in April, while Syria, Cyprus, Persia and Asia Minor also gather crops during that month. Cuba's wheat will also be gathered in April.

"Texas is the first of our States to send wheat to the market. This it does during May; at the same time that the fields of Algeria, Central Asia, China, Japan and Morocco are making their yields. In June those of California, Oregon, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, the Carolinas, Tennessee, Virginia, Kentucky, Kansas, Arkansas, Utah, Colorado, Missouri, Turkey, Greece, Italy, Spain, Portugal and the South of France are harvested. July sees the crops in the other American States and all except the northernmost part of Europe harvested. Russia then begins to gather her grain, more being harvested in August, when Manitoba, lower Canada, North Dakota and the northernmost countries of Europe are the scenes of the harvest. Sweden, Norway and Northern Russia are the only wheat fields covered with the golden grain in September and October. But just as these crops are gathered the crops in Peru and South Africa are ready, and in December New South Wales gathers her harvest."—Chicago Times-Herald.

FROM CARROLL COUNTY.

[News]

Unless the banks take an appeal to the United States Supreme Court the two Carrollton banks, under the decision of the Kentucky court of appeals, will be required to pay the city tax collector about $6,400 for the years from 1893 to 1897, inclusive. While of course it is a hardship on the banks to pay these back taxes it will be a great thing for the town.

The case of W. A. Fishback, State revenue agent, vs. the Deweese estate, went to record in county court last Saturday. It was a compromise case and the State will realize back taxes amounting to $800 and the county $700, while the commission of the Auditor's agent amounts to about $300.

There is some complaint from the city warehouses that tobacco that was prized in high order has begun to funk.

FROM GRANT COUNT.

[Courier]

William Conrad, of Dry Ridge, delivered to Scott & Dickerson one of the finest crops of burly tobacco ever seen come to town. Mr. Conrad grew on between 12 and 14 acres of ground nearly 32,000 lbs. of tobacco. He sold the crop for $6 per hundred all round, which brought him the magnificent sum of nearly $2,000. While this price would appear high considering the market, tobacco men say it was cheaper than ordinary tobacco at half the price. Mr. Conrad is not only a big grower of tobacco but he is probably one of the finest, if not the finest handler of the weed in our county.

It is not commonly known that two cousins of William McKinley, President of these United States, reside in or near Williamstown. One of them, too, sails under the name of his illustrious kinsman, William McKinley. William and John McKinley have lived in Grant county for the last fifty years. Were born, raised and married here. One of them is a Democrat and the other a Republican. John is a preacher and William is a farmer. They are own second cousins of the President.

There are more than 400 children within hearing of the church bells of Williamstown. If a stranger should happen to drop into the Sunday Schools of the town either in the morning or evening of some beautiful Sabbath day he would be left under the impression that very few children grew in this neighborhood. This is not as it should be.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

D. E. Castleman Chairman,
B. L. Rice, Secretary.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 14, 1897. NO. 25.

CONGRESS made an appropriation for the relief of the southern flood sufferers.

THE Louisville National Medical College turned out six colored doctors last week.

PRESIDENT MCKINLEY will be invited to formerly open the Nashville exposition on May 1st.

A BILL has been presented in Minnesota legislature requiring saloon keepers to display a red sign with the word "danger" on it.

THE bill to abolish the State Board of Equalization was defeated in the House, last week and thus another Republican promise fails to bear fruit.

THE Maysville Ledger, Republican, thinks the most serious charge that has been brought against Dr. Hunter is that he is responsible for the election of the present legislature.

THE total annual production of whisky in Kentucky has not been less than 4,792,631 gallons since 1868. On the first of last month 79,524,023 gallons of whisky were in bond in this State.

THOSE candidates who will have no opposition at the primary election ought to be declared the party nominees by the county committee. There is no use of the ballots being encumbered with their names.

THE proposition to make two States of the territory now composing the State of New York is being discussed by the people of New York City, which will constitute nearly entirely the new commonwealth.

A FIRE in the heart of Knoxville, Tennessee, last Thursday morning, destroyed $2,500,000 worth of property and several lives. The conflagration originated in the Hotel Knox, in which more than fifty guests were sleeping.

THE first month's sales of Hon. W. J. Bryan's book, "The First Battle," netted $16,000, one-half of which he turned over to the National Democratic Committee, and it will be used to advance the cause of bimetallism.

THE pie dispensers at Washington can not be induced to reconsider their determination to withhold from Kentucky Republicans all patronage until they are able to give a United States Senator in exchange therefor.

FOURTEEN of the towns and cities in Ohio, which gave McKinley 30,000 majority last fall, gave a Democratic majority of 15,000 on the 5th inst. You can draw your own conclusions from the change of front in the Buckeye State.

THE Democrats had things pretty much their own way in the town and city elections in Ohio, on the 5th of this month. It looks very much like the gain they made in that State last fall has come to stay and continue to grow.

SENATOR BRONSTON'S adjournment resolution was met with derision by the Senators who would gladly remain in Frankort all summer. Five dollars a day is a great inducement to many to oppose all propositions to adjourn the legislature.

THE House has passed a bill providing for a stenographer for each of the Judges of the court of appeals, at a salary of $1000 per year for each stenographer of which there will be seven. How this additional expense is to expedite the business of the court is not at all plain.

MR. TAYLOR, of Ohio, who was sent over to Frankfort by Mark Hanna to have the Republicans elect a Senator, took Col. Will Lyons' measure pretty accurately, and describes the Newport Statesman as one of those fellows who "sets his mouth to talking and then goes off and leaves it."

GEO. B. COX, the Republican boss in Cincinnati, was given a terrible blow immediately over the heart on the fifth of this month, and the result was a clear knock-out. The Democrats led the fight against the boss, and were assisted by thousand of Republicans who are opposed to the Cox methods.

IT was believed by some that when the day came to pay in their assessments, some of the candidates would not come to time, and would withdraw from the contests in which they are engaged; but such was not the case, and the canvass goes merrially on, each aspirant very well satisfied with his chances.

AN effort is being made to raise money with which to sink a well 3,000 feet deep at Vevay, Indiana, believing that oil will be struck. The fellow who gets the contract for sinking the well is pretty sure of striking "oil."

THE Woodford county tax list has been increased fifteen cents to sustain free turnpikes. Free turnpikes will prove to be an expensive convenience in a country where it costs as much to maintain them as it will in Kentucky.

HON. JOHN CARNS announces through the Williamstown Courier that he will not contest with Hon. M. D. Gray for the nomination for Commonwealth's Attorney in this district. This announcement removes the last prospect of opposition to Mr. Gray, who would be a very hard man to defeat at this time.

CARTER HARRISON, the silverite candidate for mayor of Chicago, was triumphantly elected, receiving more votes than all three of his opponents. His greatest gaines were in the banner Republican wards. The Democrats also elected 24 out of 36 alderman, placing the "Windy City" completely under Democratic rule again.

THE Louisville Commercial, posing as the leading Republican journal in the South, is grieved to see Gov. Bradley allow himself separated from the party in which he has been such a valuable leader in the State for so long. The separation does not seem to annoy the Governor in the least. But when did it occur?

THE six bolting Republicans issued an address to the people of Kentucky, last Thursday. In the address Dr. Hunter, the Republican nominee for Senator, is called an "unscrupulous and unfaithful conspirator against the honor of Kentucky," and other as loving appellations. They declared that they would not oppose an honorable nominee, who had fairly won the nomination.

GUESSES on the result of the primary election are beginning to comein. One was received from Verona last Thursday from a lady whose name cannot be found on the subscription list. If anyone who is a subscriber has given her his or her right to a guess, she will please notify this office, otherwise the guess will not be considered. When filling out a guess read the conditions and see if you are qualified to guess.

THE Carroll and Gallatin county Democrats have nominated O. P. Searcy, of Carroll county, as their candidate for the legislature. There were two other candidates before the convention, and an exciting contest was the result, Searcy winning on the seventh ballot, receiving 59 of the 108 votes in the convention. Gallatin stood out until it was developed that Carroll's choice was Searcy, and then she took a hand and the work was soon done.

THE Legislature and turnpike raiders are still at work. The former costs the people $1,000 per day, while the latter do not cost near so much. Both are to be condemned, but the former is the worst.—Owen News.

And yet the editor is making as strong fight as possible to become a member of the former, but possibly he believes that the next legislature will be a great improvement over the present.

THE Democratic State Central Committee held a meeting in Lexington, last Thursday, and reorganized the city and county committee for Louisville and Jefferson county. The old committee says it will not recognize the authority of the new committee and will go ahead and order and hold conventions. It seems that some weeks ago some of the committee decided to ignore the action of the Central Committee if it refused to allow them to dictate its action.

THE first elections held this spring indicated a strong tide in the direction of the Democratic party, and when Ohio held her town and city election on Monday of last week, the result showed conclusively that there had been a tremendous reaction of political sentiment in favor of the Democrats since last fall; and when Chicago came up on Tuesday following with about 90,000 plurality in favor of Harrison, the free silver candidate for Mayor, the Republicans throughout the country were dazed. Of course there are a hundred and one causes given for this sudden and unprecidented reversal of political sentiment.

Now that the Greater New York bill has passed the Legislature and gone to the Mayors of New York, Brooklyn and Long Island City for their action, some of the features of that city under that charter will prove interesting. The population of greater New York, based upon latest estimates will be 3,195,059, which will make it rank second in the world. Greater New York will have an area of about 360 square miles, making it next in size to London. Its greatest length will be nearly 35 miles—from Mt. St. Vincent to Totten ville. The street mileage of Greater New York is estimated at about 3,000. One third of the streets are paved. If all the elevated and surf roads within the confines of Greater New York were in a single line they would reach about 1,200 miles. The elevated roads alone would reach nearly 160 miles. The assessed value of the real estate in New York, King and Richmond counties and that part of Queen's county, included in the greater city is $2,264, 142,968. The value of the personal property with the territory is $397,076,668. The total equalized value of the realty and personal property is $2,169,795,157. The indebtedness of the conbined cities and towns is about $170,000,000. Greater New York will have a capacity of 550 miles of wharfage, and in this regard will be unexcelled by any other city in the world. The incorporated city will contain 130,000 dwelling houses, 37,000 business houses, 6,500 acres of park, 1,800 miles of gas mains, 1,100 churches, 1,125 large hotels and 350 public schools. As a center of commerce and manufacture, with the thousand miles of railroads terminating within its confines and across the Hudson River, its splendid dock and harbor facilities and its warehouse capacity, Greater New York will be without a peer.

THE latest sensation in the Senatorial race is the charge of attempt at bribery, made against Dr. Hunter and J. H. Wilson, last Friday. The names of the men who were to do the work and the amount of money to be used are given. The publication of the charge created consternation in the Hunter camp. He denies the charge and declares that he never heard of the men who made it until after it was made. Prison stripes are frequently referred to on both sides when the matter is being discussed, and it is evident that somebody is going to be made dance to the music of a criminal prosecution.

IT looks very inconsistent on the part of a man to sign a lengthy article denunciatory of a candidate, and declaring that he will not vote for him under any circumstances, and then when the first opportunity offers, to record his vote for the very objectionable candidate. That is what a bolting Republican at Frankfort did last week.

THE Louisville Commercial called Senator Baldwin a lion, last Saturday, because on Friday he deserted the camp of the bolting Republicans and joined the Hunter forces. It is strange that a lion would masquerade so long in the skin of an animal that is noted for the harshness of its "voice" and the length of its ears.

THE result of the recent elections in Ohio makes Senator Hanna shaky as regards the complexion of the next legislature of that State. If the Administration neglects, much longer, to bring about that era of prosperity, which was promised in the event of McKinley's election, Mr. Hanna's defeat will be assured.

THE South has been greatly annoyed by fire and water this spring. Chattanooga's big fire was followed by a two million dollar fire at Knoxville, while along the lower Mississippi the country has been devastated by high water, the loss to property occasioned by the latter being almost beyond estimate.

Several of the candidates have signified their willingness that the overplus of their assessment for the expenses of the primary election be sent to the southern flood sufferers. Those of the remaining candidates who are willing to do the same should inform the chairman of the county committee at once.

THE Iowa Supreme Court has rendered a decision in which it became necessary to define the word "swipe." It says "swipe" means to steal.

UNCLE SAM'S battle ship, Iowa, is styled the monarch of the sea. She has shown a 16.50 clip, and claims to be the swiftest craft afloat.

The advocates of the popular election of Senators constantly find fresh arguments on their side from the frequency with which sessions of Legislatures are wrecked by deadlocks over this question. Weeks of valuable time were thus wasted in several bodies last winter, and in Oregon the entire session was practically nullified by such a controversy. The Kentucky Legislature had a large share of its energies dissipated in a fruitless struggle at the regular session a year ago, and vote after vote is now taken without result at a special session called for the express purpose of filling the vacancy in the Senate from that State. Whether the people would elect better Senators than Legislatures do is an open question, but one thing is certain—choice by the people at the polls would settle the question in one day, and there would be no chance that the interests for which legislators are elected would be neglected, as so often happens now through senatorial deadlocks.—New Nork Post.

THE following extract is from Senator Caffery's reply to the request of the New Orleans Board of Trade to vote for the Dingley Tariff Bill:

"When my political views change so as to convince me that this great country, with its vast resources, its free, pushing, enterprising, inventive population, needs protection against countries with not half its resources, with population oppressed with debt, crushed by class distinctions, or tyrannous government, without the skill and inventive genius of our people, I will hand in my resignation as being out of touch with Democratic principles. I take it that Louisiana is Democratic yet, notwithstanding the temporary split in the Democracy about finances, and the defection of the sugar planters to Republicanism, or rather to 'bounty.'" The letter closes with this description of the tariff bill: "It will blight the budding promise of increased exports of American manufacturers. It will cripple the export of our cereals—flour, fuel and raw material; it will add enormously to the burden of the toiling masses of our people, it will create greater discontent where discontent is already threatening the peace and stability of society. And it violates the cardinal, essential, cherished principles, of Democracy. I will not vote for it. I will vigorously oppose it."

Probably the most unique vehicle which ever struck Greensburg was seen on our streets Thursday morning. It was a house on wheels, made by M. E. Lasley, who, with his wife and three children (one born on the way) has traveled in it for three years. It is twelve feet long, six feet high, with a window on each side and a door in the rear. It is made of thin wood, and the inside is lined with cloth and paper. A couple of chairs, a folding bed and several boxes comprise the interior furnishings, and the whole outfit has a weather-beaten and hard-times appearance. The wagon started form Port Angeles, Washington, March 22, 1894, and is to be in New York October 1, where it will be exhibited in a museum. If Mr. Lasley is successful in arriving before that time he will receive $100 for each week between his arrival and the specified time. Two teams of horses have died on the road, and at one time they were forced to hire teams to draw them from one town to another. In all about 5,182 miles have been traversed, and the fact was mutely testified to by a home-made cyclometer constructed of a defunct alarm clock and attached to one of the wheels, whose hands pointed to 7:04. The expenses of the trip are being defrayed by the sale of books recounting the family's experience, and photographs of their wagon. It is intended to publish a large and exhaustive treatise of the whole affair on arriving in New York. A number of trials and tribulations have been experienced since leave was taken of their western home, but all seemed to have thrived, and a healthier or more contented family would be hard to find. As this strange vehicle stood on Main street near Hunter & Crew's stable it was surrounded by a large throng, many of whom were busily engaged in putting their names in a box nailed on the side of the structure, that they might be mentioned in the contemplated book.—Greensburg Review.

OFFICESEEKERS became so numerous and annoying that President McKinley had to take a boat and make a run of a few days on Chesapeake Bay in order to rehabilitate his weary nerves. Breaking down thus early in his term is a bad indication.

In bicycle literature the reader is told that nobody can ride a wheel in France without puncturing a tire, because the roads are strewn with small nails. Labored investigation discovered that these nails dropped out of the soles of peasants' wooden shoes, slightly shrunken by the sun. The man who invents a punctureless tire will make a fortune in France.

Four Buffalo (N. Y.) reporters attended a prize fight in a professional capacity, and, the "mill" being raided by the police, were promptly captured with the party. Judge King, of that city, before whom they were brought, released them, declaring that it was a principle of law as well as of common sense that three kinds of men were permitted to go anywhere without blame—doctors, clergymen and reporters.

New York city has instituted a regular medical inspection of its school children. There were doubts as to its necessity, but results talk. In one day 150 inspectors reported as follows on 4,255 children: "Three cases of measles, 14 of diphtheria, 1 of scarlet fever, 3 of mumps, 35 of contagious eye diseases, 55 of parasitic diseases of the head, 12 of parasitic diseases of the body, 8 of the chicken pox and 8 of skin diseases." Verily, we have not yet seen daybreak in administering the vital question of public sanitation.

William T. Adams, who was known to hundreds of thousands of boy readers as far back as 30 years ago, has passed away. "Oliver Optic" he called himself, and that name was a power in circulating libraries. His books, filled with deeds of heroism, adventure and daring, served a purpose and served it very well. They took the place of something not so good and they essayed to teach courtesy, honesty and manliness, with what success cannot be told. Many a boy fortunate enough to own some of these books has treasured them long enough to have a son who read them.—Atlantic.

INSURGENTS

Anticipate an Attack Upon Fort Kissamo, Crete—Christians Repulsed With Heavy Loss in a Fight Outside of Candia.

CANEA, Crete, April 8.—The insurgents of the vicinity of Kissamo, at the western end of the island, have written to the foreign admirals giving notice that they are projecting an attack upon the fort at Kissamo. The Turkish garrison there has asked for assistance.

Two thousand insurgents have crowded around Sitia, at the western end of the island, and a French warship has landed five guns in anticipation of an attack upon that place.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 8.—The several embassies here Wednesday made concerted representations to the porte concerning the dangerous attitude of the Mohammedan population of several of the Asiatic provinces and warning the government to guard against the outbreak of disorders. They also demanded that the porte remove several provincial officials whose conduct they deemed inimical to the preservation of peace.

CANEA, April 8.—With the exception of a fight outside of Candia, in which the Christians were repulsed with a heavier loss than they inflicted on the Moslems, there has been little or no prospect of the impasse being overcome by the powers and even the Turks are becoming disgusted with the situation.

Reports from the interior show that the scarcity of provisions is becoming greater daily and that there is much suffering among the Christians, who are now practically the only residents outside of the coast towns.

The blockade is maintained with severity, but despite this fact Greek sailors manage occasionally to run in a cargo of ammunition, food and supplies. Of course no sufficient supply from this source can be received, and unless the powers speedily come to some arrangement and the blockade be raised the suffering will become acute.

Fighting of a somewhat serious nature occurred Wednesday between Christians and Turks near Candia. The insurgents, who were numerically stronger than the Turks, attacked the outposts of the latter from four points. The Turks made a strong fight and succeeded in holding their positions. Their loss were only two killed, while the loss of the insurgents were 11 killed. The insurgents at Kissamo have sent a letter to the foreign admirals, warning them of their intention to attack the fort at that place. The Turkish garrison displays no inclination to have any further fighting with the Christians and has asked to be relieved. It is likely that in view of the circumstances a strong force will be placed in the forts, and it is not beyond probability that international troops will be dispatched to garrison the place.

LONDON, April 8.—A dispatch to the Times from Constantinople says it is understood that the porte has notified the powers of its willingness to withdraw the Turkish garrison from Crete immediately if the Greeks will previously withdraw and the powers guarantee to pacify the island.

AN AGED COUPLE

Take Laudanum and Die Together at Chicago—Found Dead in Bed.

CHICAGO, April 8.—The dead bodies of Wm. H. Gage and his wife, Maria, each 70 years old, were found lying on a bed in their home at 253 Southwestern avenue Wednesday. The death of the aged couple was brought about by their own hands. An empty two-ounce bottle labeled laudanum was found lying on the floor near the bed, and two letters, one addressed to H. G. Jeamerati, the employer of Gage, and the other to the coroner, showed conclusively that the husband and wife committed suicide.

George Frunce, of 120 west Seventy-second street, was found dead in bed this morning. Heart disease is supposed to have caused his death. He was 70 years old.

An Ohio Girl Missing.

MARIETTA, Pa., April 8.—Considerable apprehension is felt over the whereabouts of Miss Helen Delmar, of Akron, O., who has been visiting relatives here. She was last seen Tuesday when walking along the bank of the Susquehanna Wednesday on the river bank were found her hat and gloves, and pinned to them a note which simply said "Good by." It is feared she may have committed suicide. She came here about two weeks ago and seemed somewhat morose, but later became a little more cheerful.

LONDON, April 8.—Mrs. Ormiston Chant, the social reformer, and six nurses started for the island of Crete Thursday. Lady Henry Somerset and B. F. Keith, of Boston, are financing the mission.

Iron Manufacturer Assigns.

CINCINNATI, April 8.—Chas. P. Stiles, manufacturer of iron measures, packages for paint, etc., at 3832 Eastern avenue, assigned Wednesday morning to F. S. Hastings. The assets are given as $60,000, and the liabilities at $45,000. The cause is given as suits begun and threatened, and inability to realize on real estate.

Suicided by Hanging.

BROCKPORT, N. Y., April 8.—C. A. Buskirk, for many years a prominent commission merchant of this place, committed suicide Wednesday by hanging.

THE CRETANS

Are Making Active Preparations to Attack Fort Kissamo.

The Musselmans of Sitia Are Suffering From Want of Water—Barracks Occupied by Italian Marines Burned—Admirals Will Not Parley.

LONDON, April 9.—The Times Friday prints the following dispatch from its Canea correspondent:

"The Cretans are now massing around Kissamo. They have mounted four guns and intend to attack the fort, which is held by 150 Turks. Wednesday they wrote to the captain of the Austrian warship anchored in the bay, declaring that, as the action of the international fleet had hitherto been hostile to them, they would repel forcibly any attempt of the warships to interfere with their designs at Kissamo. It is expected, therefore, that the Cretans will direct their guns upon the warships if the latter open fire.

The Austrian Admiral will proceed to Kissamo Friday. It has been decided to remove the few Mohammedan families still there and to blow up the two block houses in the vicinity of the fort in order to prevent the Cretans from occupying them.

The correspondent of the Times at Eiassona Friday says:

"Accompanied by a staff officer I have visited the frontier posts at Maluna Pass, which commands a splendid view of the two plains of Eiassona and Larissa. It is near the top of the mountain. The Turkish and Greek blockhouses are about 30 yards apart. We were received by the officers of the Greek post. They were agreeable and friendly, but they did not seem especially anxious for war. At Euzonoi they were singing and dancing around the blockhouse. The soldiers made a fairly serviceable appearance, but do not give the impression of absolute ignorance of fear and obstinate courage characteristic of the Turkish soldier."

ELASSONA, April 9.—The troops are very much disappointed at the fact that the Greeks have not attacked them and the conversation of the soldiers and subaltern officers shows their temper to be such that in the event of an outbreak of hostilities and the repulse of the Greeks, no Turkish general dare act otherwise than invade Greece.

CANEA, April 9.—The admirals of the foreign fleets and the consuls held a meeting Thursday at Suda. The question discussed was whether the consuls should renew parleying with the insurgent leaders. It was decided not to do so.

The consuls pointed out that further parley with the insurgents was useless, because they were unable to give them definite information relative to the withdrawal of Turkish troops or furnish the insurgent leaders with details regarding the antonomous form of government which the powers proposed to confer on Crete.

The Mussulmans of Sitia are suffering from want of water, the wells of the town not sufficing to supply their needs, and the insurgents driving them back whenever they attempt to obtain water outside of the town, in spite of the protection afforded by the foreign warships in Sitia bay.

The barracks occupied by the Italian marines doing duty on shore at Candia have been burned to the ground. The cause of the fire is not known.

HON. W. J. BRYAN

Injured by the Caving In of a Piazza From Which He Was Speaking.

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla., April 9.—Hon. W. J. Bryan was injured here Thursday afternoon by the caving in of the piazza from which he was speaking. Nearly 400 men and women were precipitated about twenty feet to the ground and many of them injured, but none fatally. Mr. Bryan was picked up unconscious and removed to a physician's office where an examination revealed that he had received no injuries of a serious character. It was deemed best, however, to abandon the reception which was to have been given him Thursday evening. Mr. Bryan arrived here at 4:30 p. m. and was greeted at the station by several hundred people. At 8:30 he addressed fully 3,000 persons from the piazza of the San Marco hotel. At the close of his speech hundreds of people flocked about him and so great was the strain that one section of the piazza 40 feet square fell through.

Compulsory Educational Bill.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., April 9.—The compulsory educational bill has passed the senate, and as it is understood that it is acceptable to all classes and sects, including Lutherans and Catholics, it will undoubtedly become a law in its present form. It compels every person having control of a child between seven any 14 years of age to cause such child to attend some school sixteen weeks annually.

Damage by Wind, Rain and Hail.

DUMAS, Ark., April 9.—A terrific storm passed over this village at one o'clock Thursday and was followed by a deluge of rain and hail. Much damage was done, huge trees being lifted bodily by the roots. A store belonging to Gus Waterman was leveled to the ground; residence of E. R. Willeford destroyed and other damage done. Damage to farm property was very heavy.

Clerks and Contractors Indicted.

BOSTON, April 9.—The grand jury Thursday found seven indictments against clerks and contractors for robbing the city of $50,000. The contractors put in bills for teams they didn't use, the clerk passed them and the profits were divided. Some of the most prominent politicians in the city are involved.

Wants to Locate.

BELLEFONTAINE, O., April 9.—Mr. J. W. Young, representing Young & Anderson, shoe manufacturers, of Columbus, O., was in the city Thursday with a view of locating their factory here.

THE DEATH CHAIR.

The Electricians Are at Gun Over the Apparatus—Candidi and Green Disagreed as to How to Repeat the Defect.

COLUMBUS, O., April 10.—Electrician R. P. Green, of the state prison, and H. L. Canfield, who placed the electrocution apparatus in the annex, have had a falling out, and totally disagree as to how to repair the defect in the armature. Canfield said Friday morning that if Green proceeded in the course now determined by him he would make a terrible mistake. He says that when one coil burned out, the one next to it must have been badly injured and weakened. It will be sure to give way under high pressure.

In the preliminary tests it will work satisfactorily, but when high power is thrown on to kill the boy, the coil will give way and there will be a failure to kill.

"They will burn the boy to death," said Canfield.

Green is certain that Canfild knows nothing about electricity, and Canfield returns the compliment.

The accident to the dynamo of death has caused all kinds of misgivings as to the success of the first electrocution to take place in this state.

There is a decided feeling against the law, and were the legislature in session there is no doubt that a bill for a repeal of the law would have been introduced Friday.

There is a feeling of insecurity among the officials, who say that they do not want the boy butchered.

That feeling pervades all the prison officials, and it is believed that the next legislature will repeal the law. The old scaffold, through which 28 persons have dropped to death, is still in place and can be got ready for use at any time.

TORPEDO BOATS.

Proposals Wanted for the Construction of Three New Ones.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Proposals were invited Friday by the secretary of the navy for the construction of three 30-knot torpedo boats. Bids will be opened Monday, June 14. The boats must be completed within 18 months from the date of contract. The successful bidders must show themselves in possession of the necessary plant within three months after signing the contract. The boats will be known as numbers 19, 20 and 21. Two of them must have a trial displacement of not less than 330 tons and one of 260 tons. The bidders are left ample scope for original ideas as the department prescribes in its circular only the barest outlines of the craft for the construction of which congress has appropriated $800,000.

The Postal Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The post office department has leased the old Corcoran art gallery building at the corner of Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue for the use of international postal congress, which will assemble here on May 5. It is expected that the congress will be in session six or eight weeks. The entire building will be fitted and furnished expressly for the congress.

Condition of the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Friday's statement of the condition of the treasury shows an available cash balance of $295,530,001, gold reserve, $152,935,038.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—Secretary of Agriculture Wilson has initiated a new system of distribution in his department. His aim is to diversify so far as possible the farm products of the country and to this end he is making a specialty of selecting new and valuable seeds from all parts of the world, and putting them in the hands of farmers likely to use them to advantage. He has begun the work with sugar beets and leguminous plants of all sorts. While sugar beets are now widely cultivated in the west, the best seed at present comes from abroad. A large supply of these high grade seeds has been ordered and will be judiciously distributed.

A Floater Identified.

ST. LOUIS, April 10.—The body found in the Mississippi Thursday has been identified as that of Pauline Bauer, a telegraph operator, who disappeared last November. Just before her disappearance she complained of continued annoyance from an unknown man. When five months ago her hat and jacket were found upon the river bank, the murder theory was suggested and worked upon, but no clews were found. The body is too much decomposed to permit the establishment of ante-mortem injuries.

Heavy Rains at Headwaters.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 10.—The heavy rain on Thursday night was general up the Allegheny and Monongahela valleys, and a stage of 15 feet of water will be reached here some time Saturday. The precipitation averaged about an inch, while at many points it amounted to more than that. Considerable coal is loaded and it is calculated that at least 5,000,000 bushels will go out on this rise.

Ten Lives Lost by an Explosion.

BUENOS AYRES, April 10.—An immense amount of damage has been caused by the explosion of a cart loaded with fireworks. The accident occurred near a block of buildings adjacent to the Bourse and the buildings almost immediately caught fire. A whole block was destroyed before the flames were under control. Ten persons lost their lives in the explosion or during the conflagration.

Mule Spinner's Stand.

BOSTON, April 10.—The Mule Spinners' association will accept no reduction in the present scale of wages. This position was taken by vote of the association at Friday forenoon's session of the convention which is being held here.

Dime Savings Bank at Hamilton.

COLUMBUS, O., April 10.—The Hamilton Dime Savings Bank Co., of Hamilton, was incorporated Friday by Geo. P. Sohngen, A. J. Wellinon, A. Rothwell, Harry Glass Conrad M. Spencer, Philip W. Morgenthaler and A. H. Black. Capital, $50,000.

IT IS WAR.

Cretan Insurgents Invade the Territory of the Turks.

Greek Warships About to Attack the Town of Valona—The Cretan Refugees Appeal to Christian Europe for Annexation to Greece.

LONDON, April 12.—The Times' correspondent at Athens said Monday:

"The news of the incursion into Turkish territory has been received here with great jubilation. The general belief is that nothing can now restrain the army, which is bound to follow across the frontier in a few days.

"The Athens newspapers reflect the popular enthusiasm and maintain highly optimistic forecasts as to Macedonia, where the Christians are expected to rise as if by magic. The former exploits of the famous insurgent leaders accompanying the expedition afford, it is believed, a guarantee of splendid success in the future.

"One newspaper says that the die is now cast, that a successful beginning has been made; that it is all over with diplomacy, negotiations and identical notes or blockades, and that the eloquent voice of the rifle has spoken at last. A telegram at Arta Sunday night says that Greek bands are crossing the frontier at various points, and that warlikeness inevitable."

ATHENS, April 12.—The latest advices here report that a portion of the invading force continues to besiege the barracks at Baltino. The remainder has continued the advance to a destination as yet unknown to Athens. It is reported that communications between Metzovo and Grevena are cut off. The Cretan refugees here have addressed a petition to the embassies in which, after reciting the whole history of the Cretan question, they declare that the only possible solution of it is annexation, adding:

"We hope that Christian Europe will be moved by our sufferings, martyrdom and struggles for centuries to support our claims for union with Greece."

The petition is signed by several thousand.

The president of the boule has convened a special session to pass imperative measures. It is understood that an international loan of 20,000,000 drachmas be under consideration and that the government is now negotiating with the banks for that amount.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 12.—In a communication to the ambassadors, dated April 10, the porte speaks of the Greek invaders of the previous day as "Regular" troops and the incursion is regarded here as the commencement of war. A panic occurred at Valona Saturday on a rumor that the Greek warships were about to attack the town.

Two thousand Bashi Bazouks assembled in an adjoining valley and placed themselves in readiness to advance in case of an attack by marines on land.

LONDON, April 12.—The Times prints Monday the following dispatch from its correspondent at Larissa:

"Ossaio, the accredited representative of the Ethnike Hetairia, tells me that he looked for important news Sunday. He has been in conference with Greek deputies and with leading supporters of the patriotic movement who have recently arrived here, and there seems to have been a deliberate plan to leave in the hands of the Ethnike Hetairia the initative."

"The Greek outposts are being strengthened, and small detachments are proceeding to their positions under cover of the darkness.

"The latest information received here on the subject of the raid shows that the invading insurgents first advanced toward Chassanga. It is reported that the Turks opposed the attack with artillery. The Greek losses were 23 killed and 27 wounded. The Turkish losses are said to have been much greater. It is rumored that yet another attack was made on the Turks at the rear of Mount Olympus, where the Greeks succeeded in planting a flag.

"Stringent orders have been issued against irregular fighting, and the penalty of death will be imposed for any infraction. The general impression here is that war will be proclaimed Monday or Tuesday. The position of affairs is critical. Although the Turkish army has not assumed the offensive, orders to that effect from the sultan are expected at any moment. All classes of the troops are full of war enthusiasm."

THE STEAMER OGEMAW,

A Government Vessel Carrying a Relief Expedition, Sinks Near Grand Forks.

GRAND FORKS, N. D., April 12.—The government steamer Ogemaw, which started down the river Saturday night on a relief expedition, lies right side up, sunk in about 12 feet of water, about 17 miles below here. The Grand Forks members of the party returned late Sunday with the story of the disaster. The boat Saturday night was unable to get more than eight miles down the river when her side was ripped open by the rapid moving ice. She was run into shallow water where she quickly grounded. The crew with Col. Jones remained to look after the craft. The Grand Forks people, by rowing some miles in an open boat, wading several others and using a hand car for the rest of the distance, finally arrived in Grand Forks.

Indiana Boys in Central America.

RICHMOND, Ind., April 12.—Harry Leonard and Charles Harn, two young men of this city, are now dwelling in a cabin in the mountains of Central America, 125 miles from a railroad and 60 miles by trail from any settlement. Their only neighbors are Indians, and about their door monkeys, wildcats and deer can be seen. Leonard and Harn went to South America to look after coffee plantations in which Richmond capital is invested. It took a letter from February 21 to April 2 to reach Richmond from them.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

The Perplexities Are Many and the Temptations Numerous.

Give Thanks and Supplicate for Men and Kings—They All Need the Prayers of the Righteous—Pray for People in Public Places.

Dr. Talmage's text Sunday was, I Timothy, ii: "I exhort, therefore, that, first of all, supplication, prayers, intercessions and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority."

That which London is to England, Paris to France, Berlin to Germany, Vienna to Austria, St. Petersburg to Russia, Washington is to the United States republic. The people who live here see more of the chief men of the nation than any who live any where else between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. If a senator or member of the house of representatives, or supreme court justice, or secretary of the cabinet, or representative of foreign nation enters a public assembly in any other city, his coming and going are remarked upon and unusual deference is paid to him. In this capital there are so many political chieftains in our churches, our streets, our halls, that their coming and going make no excitement. The Swiss seldom look up to the Matterborn or Jungfrau, or Mt. Blanc, because those people are used to the Alps. So we at this capital are so accustomed to walk among mountains of official and political eminence that they are not to us a great novelty. Morning, noon and night we meet the giants. But there is no place on earth where the importance of the Pauline injunction to prayer for those in eminent place ought to be better appreciated. At this time, when our public men have before them the rescue of our national treasury from appalling deficits, and the Cuban question, and the arbitration question, and in many departments men are taking important positions which are to them new and untried, I would like to quote my text with a whole tonnage of emphasis—words written by the scarred missionary to the young theologian Timothy: "I exhort, therefore, that first of all, supplications, prayers, intercessions, and giving of thanks, be made for all men; for kings, and for all that are in authority."

If I have the time and do not forget some of them, before I get through I will give you four or five reasons why the people of the United States ought to make earnest and continuous prayer for those in eminent place.

First, because that will put us in proper attitude toward the successful men of the nation. After you have prayed for a man you will do him justice. There is a bad streak in human nature that demands us to assail those that are more successful than ourselves. It shows itself in boyhood, when the lads, all running to get their ride on the back of a carriage, and one gets on, those failing to get on shout to the driver, "Get behind!" Unsuccessful men seldom like those who in any department are successful. The cry is, "he is a political accident," or "he bought his way up," or "it just happened so," and there is an impatient waiting for him to come down more rapidly than he went up. The best cure for such cynicism is prayer. After we have risen from our knees we will be wishing the official good instead of evil. We will be hoping for him benediction rather than malediction. If he makes a mistake we will call it a mistake, instead of malfeasance in office. And oh! how much happier we will be; for wishing one evil is diabolic, but wishing one good is saintly, is angelic, is God-like. When the Lord drops a man into depths beyond which there is no lower depth, He allowed him to be put on an investigating committee with the one hope of finding something wrong. In general assemblies of the Presbyterian church, in conference of the Methodist church, in conventions of the Episcopal church, in house of representatives and in senate of the United States, there are men always glad to be appointed on the committee of Malodors, while there are those who are glad to be put on the committee of Eulogiums. After you have prayed, in the words of my text, for all that are in authority, you will say: "Brethren, gentlemen, Mr. Chairman, excuse me from serving on the committee of malodors, for last night, just before I prayed for those in eminent position, I read that chapter in Corinthians about charity which 'hopeth all things' and 'thinketh no evil.' The committee on malodors is an important committee, but I here now declare that those are incompetent for its work who have, not in spirit of conventionality, but in spirit of earnest importunity, prayed for those in high position, I can not help it, but I do like a St. Bernard better than a bloodhound, and I would rather be a humming-bird among honeysuckles than a crow swooping upon field carcasses."

Another reason why we should pray for those in eminent place is because they have such multiplied perplexities. This city at this time holds hundreds of men who are expectant of preferment, and United States mail bags as never before, are full of applications. Let me say I have no sympathy with either the utterer or printed sneer at what are called "office seekers." If I had not already received appointment as minister plenipotentiary from the High Court of Heaven—as every minister of the Gospel has—and I had at my back a family for whom I wished to achieve a livelihood, there is no employer whose service I would sooner seek than city, state or United States government. Those governments are the promptest in their payments, paying just as well in hard times as in good times, and during summer vacation as during winter work. Besides that, many of us have been paying taxes to city, and state, and nation for years, and while we are indebted for the protection of government, the government is indebted to us for the honest support we have rendered it. So I wish success to all earnest and competent men who appeal to city, or state, or nation for a place to work. But how many men in high place in city, and state, and nation are at their wits' end to know what to do, when for some places there are ten applicants and for others a hundred! Perplexities arise from the fact that citizens sign petitions without reference to the qualifications of the applicant for the places applied for. You sign the application because the applicant is your friend. People sometimes want that for which they have no qualifications, as we hear people sing "I want to be an angel," when they offer the poorest material possible for angelhood. Boors waiting to be sent to foreign places as ambassadors, and men without any business qualification wanting to be consuls to foreign ports, and litterateurs, capable in one letter of writing all the laws of orthography and syntax, desiring to be put in positions where most of the work is done by correspondence. If divine help is needed in any place in the world it is in those places where patronage is distributed. In years gone by awful mistakes have been made. Only God, who made the world out of chaos, could, out of the crowded pigeon-holes of public men, develop symmetrical results. For this reason pray Almighty God for all those in authority.

Then there are the vaster perplexities of our relations with foreign government. For direction in such affairs the God of nation should be implored. The demand of the people is sometimes so heated, so unwise, that it must not be heeded. Hark to the boom of that gun which sends from the American steamer San Jacinto, a shot across the bow of the British merchant steamer Trent, November 8, 1861. Two distinguished southerns with their secretaries, and families are on the way to England and France to officially enlist them for the southern confederacy. After much protest the commissioners, who had embarked for England and France, surrendered and were taken to Ft. Warren, near Boston. The capture was a plain invasion of the laws of nations, and antagonistic to a principle for the establishment of which the United States government had fought in other days. However, so great was the excitement that the secretary of the United States navy wrote an appreciatory letter to Capt. Wilkes, commander of the San Jacinto, for his "prompt and decisive action," and the house of representatives passed a resolution of thanks for "brave, adroit and patriotic conduct," and the millions of the north went wild with enthusiasm, and all the newspapers and churches joined in the huzza. England and France protested, the former demanding that unless the distinguished prisoners should be surrendered and apology made for insult to the British flag within ten days, Lord Lyons must return to London, taking all the archives of the British legation. War with England and France seemed inevitable, and war with England and France at that time would have made a restored American nation impossible for a long while, if not forever. Then God came to the rescue and helped the president and his secretary of state. Against the almost unanimous sentiment of the people of the north the distinguished confederates were surrendered, the law of nations was kept inviolate, the lion's paw was not lifted to strike the eagle's beak, and perhaps the worst disaster of centuries was avoided.

There came another crisis within the last two years, when millions of people demanded that American war vessels sail into Turkish waters and stop the atrocities against the Armenians. The people at large have no idea of the pressure brought upon our government to do this rash thing. Missionaries and other prominent Americans in and around Constantinople assembled at the office of the American legation and demanded that our minister plenipotentiary cable to Washington for United States ships of war, and they suggested the words of the telegram. Had our ships gone into those waters the guns of foreign nations, everlastingly jealous of us, would have been turned against our shipping, and our navy, within a few years, become respectable in power, would have crawled backward in disgrace. The proposition to do what could not be done was mercifully withdrawn.

There will be a year between now and the next 20 years when those who are in authority will not need the guidance of the God of Nations. God alone can tell the right time for nations to do the right thing. To do the right thing at the wrong time is as bad as to do the wrong thing at any time. Cuba will one day be free, but it will be after she has shown herself capable of free government. To acknowledge Cuban independance now would be to acknowledge what does not exist. The time may come when the Hawaiian islands may be a part of our government, but it will be only when they have decidedly expressed the desire for annexation. In all national affairs there is a clock. The hands of that clock are not always seen by human eyes. But God sees them, not only the hour hand, but the minute hand, and when the hands announce that the right hour has come the clock will strike, and we ought to be listening attitude. "The Lord reigneth: Let the earth rejoice, let the multitudes of the isles be glad thereof."

You see there are always in places of authority unbalanced men who want war, because they do not realize what war is, or they are designing men, who want war for the same reason that wreckers like hurricanes and foundering ships, because of what may float ashore from the ruins. You see that men who start wars never themselves get hurt. They make the speeches and others make the self-sacrifices. Notice that all those who instigated our civil war never as a consequence got so much as a splinter under the thumb nail, and they all died peacefully in their beds. I had two friends—as thorough friends as old men can be to a young man—Wendell Phillips and Robert Toombs. They were not among those who expected anything advantageous from the strife, but took their positions conscientiously. They both had as much to do with the starting of the war between the north and the south as any other two men. A million brave northern and southern dead were put in the grave trenches, but the two illustrious and honest men I have mentioned were in good health long after the ending of things at Appomattox, and if those who advocated measures recently that would have brought on war between our country and Spain or England or Turkey had been successful in bringing on the wholesale murder, they themselves would now have been above ground, as I hope they will be to celebrate the birth of the twentieth century. If God had not interfered we would have had three wars in the last two years, war with England, war with Spain and war with Turkey, this last joined with other nations transatlantic. To preserve the peaceful equipoise which such men are disturbing, we need a divine balancing, for which all good men on both sides of the sea ought to be every day praying.

Again, prayer to God for those in authority is our only way of being of any practical service to them. Our personal advice would be to them, for the most part, an impertinence. They have all the facts as we can not have them, and they see the subject in all its bearings, and we can be of no help to them except through the supplication that our text advises. In that way we may be infinite re-enforcement. The mightiest thing you can do for a man is to pray to him, if the old Bible be true, and if it is not true it has been the only imposition that ever blessed the world, turning barbarism into civilization and tyrannies into republics.

I say if the old Bible be true, God answers prayer. You may get a letter, and through forgetfulness or lack of time not answer it, but God never gets a genuine letter that He does not make out. Every genuine prayer is a child's letter to his Heavenly Father, and He will answer it; and though you may get many letters from your child before you respond, some day you say: "There! I have received ten letters from my daughters, and I will answer them all now and at once, and though not in just the way that she hopes for I will do it in the best way, and though she asked me for a sheet of music I will not give it to her, for I do not like the music spoken of; but I will send her a deed to a house and lot, to be hers forever." So God does not in all cases answer in the way those who sent the prayer hoped for, but He in all cases gives what is asked for or something better. So prayers went up from the north and the south at the time of our civil war, and they were all answered at Gettysburg. You can not make me believe that God answered only the northern prayers, for there were just as devout prayers answered south of Mason and Dixon's line as north of it, and God gave what was asked for, or something as much more valuable as a house and lot are worth, more than a sheet of music. There is not a good and intelligent man between the Gulf of Mexico and the St. Lawrence river who does not believe that God did the best thing possible when He stood this nation down in 1865 a glorious unity, never to be rent until the waters of the Ohio and the Savannah, the Hudson and the Alabama, are licked up by the long, red tongues of a world of fire. Yes, God sometimes answers prayers on a large scale. In worse predicament nation never was than the Israelitish nation on the banks of the Red sea, the rattling shields and the clattering hoofs of an overwhelming host close after them. An army could just as easily wade through the Atlantic ocean, from New York to Liverpool, as the Israelites could have waded through the Red sea. You need to sail on its waters to realize how big it is. How was the crossing effected? By prayer. Exodus xiv., 15: "And the Lord said unto Moses, 'Wherefore criest thou unto me? Speak unto the children of Israel, that they go forward.'" That is, "Stop praying and take the answer. And then the water began to be agitated and swung this way and that way, and the ripple became a billow, and the billow climbed other billows, and now they rise into walls of sapphire, and invisible trowels mason them into walls of firmness, and the walls become like mountains, topped and turreted and domed with crags of crystal, and God throws an invisible chain around the feet of these mountains, so that they are obliged to stand still, and there, right before the Israelitish army, is a turnpike road, with all the emerald gates swung wide open. The passing host did not even get their feet wet. They passed dry-shod, the bottom of the sea as hard as the pavement of Pennsylvania avenue, or New York's Broadway, or London's Strand. Oh! What a God they had! or, I think I will change that and say, "What a God we have."

What power put its hands upon astronomy in Joshua's time and made the sun and moon stand still? Joshua x., 12: "Then spake Joshua unto the Lord:" Prayer: As a giant will take two or four great globes and in astounding way swing them this way or that, or hold two of them at arm's length, so the Omnipotent does as He will with the great orbs of worlds, with wheeling constellations and circling galaxies, swinging easily star around star, star tossed after star, or sun and moon held out at arm's length, and perfectly still, as in answer to Joshua's prayer. To God the largest world is a pebble.

WHOLESALE HOUSES

To the Number of Fourteen Destroyed by Fire at Knoxville.

The Whole City Is Plunged in Gloom Over the Terrible Catastrophe—Loss Will Aggregate About $1,000 000 —Several Lives Were Lost.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 9.—A special to the News from Knoxville, Tenn., says: The most disastrous fire ever experienced in Knoxville occurred Thursday morning between 4 and 5 o'clock. The entire block between Union and Reservoir streets on Gay street, with the exception of the McGhee building on one end, the longest and handsomest block in the city, is a mass of ruins, and the loss is estimated at nearly a million dollars. Several people were slightly injured, the most serious being Joe McMillin, who had a leg broken.

The fire was discovered about 4 o'clock in the wholesale grocery store of the McNulty Grocery Co. by a porter of Knox hotel, which adjoins the grocery. A general alarm was turned in and all the local fire companies were soon on the scene. Their efforts proved futile, however, and the flames spread rapidly.

It is now believed that the total loss will amount to about $1,200,000. The insurance will be about one-half. Among the heaviest individual losses are:

McNulty Grocery Co., $15,000, insurance not known; Hotel Knox, loss $25,000, insurance not known; Daniel Briscoe & Co., wholesale dry goods, building and stock, loss $175,000, insurance $250,000; E. P. King & Co., insurance agents, $5,000; S. B. Newman & Co., printers and engravers, loss $50,000 insurance $20,000; Cullen & Newman Co., wholesale queensware, loss $40,000, insurance $35,000; Hennegan Doyle & Arnold, wholesale boots and shoes, loss $100,000, insurance, $75,000; M. L. Ross & Co., wholesale grocers, $75,000, insurance $50,000; W. W. Woodruff & Co., wholesale hardware, $250,000, insurance $200,000; Murphy Robinson, wholesale hats, $50,000, insurance $25,000; A. P. Laher, retail dry goods, $100,000, insurance $100,000; Sterchi Bros., wholesale and retail furniture, $35,000, insurance, $20,000; Sanford, Chamberlain & Albers, $40,000; insurance not known: J. M. Cussick, livery stable, $2,000; John McMillin, residence, $7,000. The losses so far reported, which do not cover any small losers, amount to $969,000, with insurance of $475,000.

The fire stopped at Union street on one side and at Commerce street on the other side of Gay street.

The last man to leave the burning hotel says that he is positive that five or six persons were burned. He ran over three or four men in the hallways who were suffocated.

J. M. Dean, of Kansas City, who jumped from the burning building, tells a thrilling story of his escape. He started out with only nightshirt on and had that torn off before he reached the street. His roommate, Mr. A. Tabor, was more fortunate, having saved two shirts. The T. P. A. members of the local post took care of all the drummers, buying some suits out and out.

W. H. Mitchell, of Abingdon, Va., jumped from the burning building to the bank building.

H. I. Johnson, a railroad baggage master, came down from the fifth story, hand over hand, on the water pipes before the fire engines arrived. Only one of the guests saved any of his effects.

The list of dead and injured so far reported is as follows:

The dead: A. E. Weeks, Locke, N. Y.; R. W. Hopkins, St. Louis, Mo.; Robinson, Pulaski, Tenn.; S. E. Williams, Springfield, Mass.

The injured: J. C. M. Bogle, Tennessee, burned and will die; D. M. Dean, Indinanapolis, ankle sprained; T. S. Peck, Morristown, Tenn., ankle cut and sprained; Lieut. Hood, Knoxville police, face and head cut by glass from explosion; Claude Harris, Knoxville, cut in a dozen places; Policeman Asquith, burned and cut by flying glass; Policeman Duncan, badly burned and was carried home; Fire Chief McIntosh, bruised from fall; W. H. Keppart, Knoxville, internally hurt.

A cabinet-maker named D. C. Dyer fell dead on the street from fright.

A man named Robinson, from Pulaski, Tenn., is supposed to be another victim. He was registered in the hotel, and has not shown up. A large force of men were at work clearing away the debris Thursday night and searching for the bodies. The street-car lines are completely tied up and all the electric companies have suffered.

One Knoxville architect received orders Thursday for plans for 11 buildings to take the places of the ones burned.

All the buildings are to be replaced at once.

The Rhode Island Election.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 9.—Later returns received Thursday indicate that the republicans' candidate for governor, Gen. Elisha Dyer, was given a plurality of more than 10,000 votes in the state election Wednesday, while the plurality for Bennett, secretary of state, and Clark, general treasurer, are over 11,000. The republicans have a large majority in both houses of the general assembly, and a majority of 67 in grand committees.

The Flood at Nashville.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 9.—Thursday night the Cumberland river reached 41.15 feet on the government gauge and is rising slowly. A stand will be reached Friday morning, and it is not believed 42 feet will be passed. Forty feet is the danger line. It is raining, but not enough rain is expected to check the fall of the river expected Friday.

Home for Confederate Veterans.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., April 9.—The former home of Jeff Davis will be purchased and turned into a home for indigent confederates.

HIGH WATERS.

Situation in the Flood-Stricken Section Encouraging—It is Thought the Louisiana Levees Will Withstand the Strain.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., April 10.—Notwithstanding the high winds and heavy rain storms reported from the overflowed Mississippi delta Thursday night the situation in the flood-stricken section if not better, was certainly no worse Friday night. The water, which has been pouring through five large crevasses for more than a week, is rapidly flowing into the Mississippi again at a point 12 miles north of Vicksburg, and is sweeping southward with terrible force. The strain on the Louisiana levees will be something terrific for a week, and if they withstand the powerful pressure for that length of time all will be well.

The Sunflower river, which traverses the counties of Conahoma, Bolivar and Sunflower, in Mississippi, is on a rampage. Two-thirds of the water from the Flower lake crevasse is rushing pellmell into this stream and a large area will be inundated from the overflow. The Tallahatchie and Coldwater rivers are gradually falling.

At Salem the river is slowly falling, and the indications are that the big stream will continue to decline. The backwaters below the Arkansas Midland levee were on a stand Friday night. The number of refugees are increasing at Helena almost every hour. The steamer Maud arrived there late Friday afternoon with more than a hundred flood sufferers, swelling the list already there to 3 000 people.

At Rosedale nothing of special interest has occurred in the situation. After a stormy night, that caused buildings to rock and sway like boughs of trees, the sun came out bright and clear in that section Friday, but a cold north wind is blowing. In the Rogue Phalia country much suffering is reported. Members of the Rosedale relief committee will visit that section Saturday and distribute provisions to the needy.

At Greenville the situation has not changed. All the levees along the Mississippi front satisfactorily withstood the terrible wind of Thursday night.

At Memphis the river continues to fall, a decline of one-tenth of a foot being reported by the weather bureau Friday night. The railroads, with one exception, are again open for business and in good shape, and all trains are being run on schedule time. Many dispatches from Memphis have stated that the Iron Mountain was the only road entering the city from the west side. This is erroneous. The Cotton Belt has been open during the high water in Arkansas, dispatching its trains promptly and regularly. By raising the tracks in the vicinity of Birds' Point, opposite Cairo, the road has had an uninterrupted service to and from St. Louis.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 10.—Gov. Jones Friday received a letter from people at Island 76, White river, in which it is said that the people there are in imminent danger of perishing. The inhabitants are on house tops, on rafts and all manner of floats, and are entirely without food. There are said to be 35 families around the island, and unless they receive immediate succor, they will certainly perish. One family near the island has just lost six children in the flood. Another letter from C. B. Blackburn, inspector of Laconia levee district, gives a graphic description of the sufferings of the victims of the flood in that district and urges the governor to help render them assistance.

HUNTER TRAPPED.

He Is to be Charged With Bribery by Capt. Noel Gaines.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 10.—It is stated upon good authority that indictments will be returned Saturday against Dr. Hunter and ex-Congressman J. H. Willson, charging them with attempted bribery. The principal witness against the two gentlemen is Capt. Noel Gaines, of the McCreary guards, who testified before the house investigating committee last month. Capt. Gaines was before the grand jury Friday, and is summoned to appear again Saturday, with several other witnesses, who are aware of matters pertaining to the same transaction.

It is charged that Dr. Hunter offered $5,000 each for three votes.

The sensational developments before the grand jury simply show it is alleged, that Dr. Hunter and his friends have fallen into a trap prepared for them by the Bradley people. Capt. Gaines is one of the governor's warmest supporters, his first lieutenant in the McCreary guards, F. Gordon, is also a witness, and appeared before the grand jury Friday with three or four other persons, who are all Bradley partisans. It is said that several affidavits from those persons will be read in the joint assembly Saturday. A prominent official states that he has seen indictments already written for Dr. Hunter and ex-Congressman Willson.

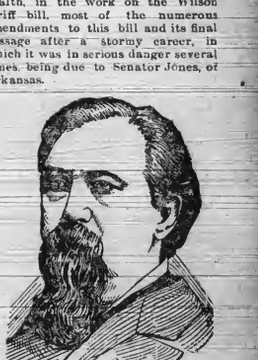
The Tariff Bill in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 10.—The republican senators who are acting as a subcommittee of the senate committee on finance in the preparation of the tariff bill are inclined in their estimates now to postpone the date of its presentation to the senate a little beyond the limit originally fixed by them. They express the opinion that it may be two weeks from the present time before it will be in shape to be reported.

Largest Policy Ever Issued.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 10.—Mrs. Leland Stanford Friday signed the contract by which her life is insured for $1,000,000. The policy, which is said to be the largest ever issued, was written by a New York company. By the terms of the contract Mrs. Stanford is to pay an anual premium of $170,000 and upon her death $1,000,000 will be paid by the company to the Leland Stanford Jr. University. Should she live ten years and continue her annual payment of premiums the university will receive at her death $2,000,000 instead of $1,000,000.

DANIEL W. VOORHEES.



The Venerable Ex-Senator Dies at His Home in Washington.

Death Was Caused by an Attack of Angina Pectoris—The Remains Will Be Taken to His Old Home in Terre Haute, Ind., for Interment.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Daniel Wolsey Voorhees, ex-United States senator from the state of Indiana, died at 5 o'clock Saturday morning at his home in this city, No. 1005 Maryland avenue, Northeast.

The senator had been in poor health for several years and for at least two years past had taken little part in the proceedings in the senate. He had been a constant sufferer from rheumatism of the heart and his friends therefore had come to expect that they might hear of his death suddenly. The last reports of him, however, were that he was showing some signs of improvement and his death, therefore, while not entirely unexpected, came with the suddenness of a shock.

At the time of his retirement from the senate the tall sycamore of the Wabash, as he was affectionately called by his devoted followers in the Hoosier state, was the ranking democrat on the finance committee, and by virtue of this position the nominal leader, at least, of his party on the floor of the senate on tariff and financial questions. He was not very active, however, owing to his ill health, in the work on the Wilson tariff bill, most of the numerous amendments to this bill and its final passage after a stormy career, in which it was in serious danger several times being due to Senator Jones, of Arkansas.

EX-SENATOR D. W. VOORHEES.

In the repeal of the Sherman law, the Hoosier senator, however, took a very prominent part. It was his last important work in the senate, and the accomplishment of the repeal was due largely to the effective support he rendered to the Cleveland administration, which had made the repeal one of its chief purposes. The finance committee at this time was almost evenly divided on the financial question, and the balance of power in the committee lay practically with Mr. Voorhees.

Mr. Voorhees' death was caused by an attack of angina pectoris. The senator's health was so poor during the recent political campaign that he could not participate in it, but after his return to Washington in November, he seemed to improve in health. Two weeks ago the old rheumatic troubles returned and three days ago they became even more alarming.

Mr. Voorhees was 76 years of age last September, and prior to his retirement from public life on March 4 last had been for many years one of the most picturesque figures in the senate. He was born in Liberty township, Butler county, O., and in his early infancy was carried by his parents to their pioneer home in the Wabash valley, Indiana. In 1849 he graduated from the Indiana Asbury (now Depauw) university, and, studying law, began its practice in 1851. His first public office was entered upon in 1858, since which time he had been almost continuously in office.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The remains of ex-Senator Voorhees will be escorted from this city to his native state of Indiana Monday. Before being taken to the Terre Haute home the body will lie in state in the capitol building at Indianapolis, at the suggestion of Gov. Mount. Funeral services will be held here at noon Monday in St. John's Episcopal church, after which the remains will be removed to the Pennsylvania railroad station, and accompanied by the family and Senator Wilson, will leave on the Chesapeake & Ohio express at 2:30. The honorary pallbearers selected are: Senators Morrill, Turpie, J. K. Jones, Wilson, Cullom, ex-Senator Butler, Judge Lawrence Weldon and Hon. Richard J. Bright.

The original intention was to take the body direct to Terre Haute and have funeral services there Wednesday or Thursday, contingent on the arrival of the ex-senator's eldest son from Spokane, Wash., but these plans were changed Sunday night by the following telegram from Gov. Mount's private secretary:

"Gov. Mount tenders his sincere sympathy in the affliction you are called upon to endure in consequence of the death of your distinguished father, and begs to be informed if it will be agreeable to the family to have the remains lie in state at the Indiana capitol en route to Terre Haute."

War Talk in the Transvaal.

ATHENS, April 12.—From 6,000 to 8,000 volunteers are preparing to start for the frontier immediately after war is declared. Commander Soutzo, the best cavalry officer in the Greek army, has started for Arta.

The race was kept up for about two miles, in the course of which were thorn bushes, briars aud barbed wire fences. Crigler's wind failed at the end of two miles, and he abandoned pursuit, but the other fellow was panic stricken and continued his wild flight until the Ohio river was reached, and across which he was taken by a friend, after providing him with a change of clothing, those he was wearing having been reduced to strings by the briars and wire fences encountered in his flight. Crigler has heretofore considered himself an excellent sprinter, but he has concluded that he is no longer two, after in a race with that particular neighbor.

AFTER NEARLY NINETY YEARS,

Mr. Samuel Cowen Called to the Great Beyond—Had Been in Feeble Health for Several Years.

A GOOD OLD CITIZEN GONE.

Death has again invaded our town and claimed as its victim the oldest citizen, Mr. Samuel Cowen, who has been in feeble health for several years. The deceased was a native of Ireland, being born in the northern part of that country on the 17th day of September, 1807. He was nine years of age when his father and mother came to this country, bringing with them two other children, a son and daughter. The elder Cowen and family located near Haverdegras, Maryland. Samuel grew to manhood, and at the age of thirty years, in 1837, he was united in marriage to Miss Maria Mackey, of Chillicothe, Ohio. To this union seven children were born, four of whom are now living, viz: Esq. James A. Cowen, of Gallatin county; R. S. Cowen, of Burlington; Dr. L. C. Cowen, of Rabbit Hash, and Miss Anna Cowen. His first wife died in 1852, and four years thereafter, in 1856, he married Mrs. Elizabeth Harper (nee Rouse). To them were born three children, Mrs. Laura Martin, Thomas Cowen, who is now engaged in life insurance in Frankfort, and Miss Pinkie.

Mr. Cowen located in Burlington at some date previous to 1840, at which time the town was enjoying the most prosperous period of its existence. His trade was that of shoemaker, and some times he employed several journeymeu, and turned oft a great deal of work, his patronage coming from all parts of the county, so great was his reputatiou for turuing out none but the very best of work.

Mr. Cowen was a Mason, having become a member of that order August 14th, 1841, and there are few, if any, older Masous in the State, his initiation datiug back over 55 years. He was a faithful member and eujoyed attending his lodge meetings.

He was elected to the office of Jailer six times, serving the county in that capacity for the long period of 24 years, makiug a faithful and efficient officer.

Mr. Cowen was a man of strong mind, did his own thinking and formed his own conclusions after a due consideration of all the facts relative to the subject, therefore he was very decided in opinions, and could be influenced to change them only by a presentation of such facts and reasons as would convince his judgment that he had been in error. He was not demonstrative in his feelings toward others, being naturally of a quiet and retiring disposition, yet no kinder hearted man could be named. He was always ready and amongst the first to contribute to the assistance of the needy, as far as he was able. He loathed deception and hypocrisy and did not wish to have business relations with those whose honor and sincerity experience had taught him to doubt. His uprightness was undoubted, and through his long and useful life as a citizeu and public officer his integrity and honor was never questioned.

The funeral, conducted by the masons, assisted by Rev. T. L. Utz, occured Tuesday at 2 p m., the remains being placed in the vault to await final interment.

A CARD.

To the voters of the Second Magisterial District: Fellow citizens—I once more offer myself as a candidate for the office of Justice of the Peace in this district, and finding that there are many voters that I will not be able to see in person before the election, I take this method of asking your endorsement for the second time since the enlargement of the district. It is true that I held the office for many years previous to the enlargement, but during all of that long time of about forty years there was barely euough in the office to pay for ink and stationery. Still, I tried to fill the office as faithfully as I could have done if there had been a salary attached; and, even now, since the enlargment of the district, the most important attachmeut made to the office is that the Justices of the couuty are members of your Fiscal Court, and that is a court in which every man who pays taxes for county purposes has an interest. I ask no man to take my word as to my standing as a member of that court. I refer the people to the entire court and to the County Attoruey or to any attorney that has ever had business before the court. This has been the short term under my commission, and should I receive your endorsement for the coming term, I can not promise auy thing more in the future than what I have always tried to adhere to in the past, and that is a faithful and honest discharge of the duties incumbent upon the office, fearless of consequences. Kindly thanking the people for all former favors, I remain very respectfully yours,

M. B. GREEN,
April 12, '97. Grant, Ky.

Right Your Are John.

(Cincinnati Enquirer, April 9th.)

Colonel John S. Gaunt, the able attorney and silver champion, of Carrollton, Ky., who took an active part for Bryan was at the Palace yesterday.

"The glorious victories in Cincinnati and Chicago are very cheering to us in Kentucky," said he, "and will encourage us to redeem our state at the election this year. Kentucky will surely swing back into the Democratic column next fall by a decisive majority. I was at Louisville a few days since, and a prominent Republican said to me: 'This Legislature at Frankfort is the most vicious that ever sat at the state capital, and Hunter has it by the nose by reason of the funds he dispensed for it.' While in Louisville Colonel Thos. W. Bullitt, who was a Buckner and Palmer Elector, said to me that he wanted to see Democracy reunited. I told him that was my desire, and the only way I saw for that to be brought about is to let the majority control. I am quite sure that the Gold Democrats have been sufficiently amused with Republican rule in our state, which coupled with the contemplated high tariff, should be a plenty to return them to the fold of the faithful."

EASTER DAWN

NOW, as once, by bedding leaf
And flower unfolding bright and brief,
We mark our Easter day's return,
While white the silvery tapers burn.
And chanting choirs in full accord
Salute the reigning, risen Lord!

For going on, our life grows gray
In shadow of the passed away;
The things we had, and have not, seem
The fading vision of a dream.
Dear voices hushed, dear hands ungrasped,
Dear household broken, links unclasped
That late were binding kith and kin;
Such winds of sorrow have swept in
That wide, waste spaces every where
Leave empty silence, bleak and bare.
Not now with starry lilies dight
We greet the Easter's morning light.

Our lilies bloom beyond the tide,
Sweet fields are on that other side,
Here meet we pain and fret and loss,
And heavy weight of rough-hewn cross.
When Easter breaks, 'tis God, we say,
For strength still equal to our day,
For hopes that span the road before
And love that climbs to Heaven's door.
'Tis much, if but, serene and still,
We can accept the Father's will,
And comforted, uplift our psalm,
And feel, through tears, the Easter-balm.

And now, by every lowly grave,
One tender thought our fond hearts crave,
That He whose outward grave-clothes lay
Folded and fair on Easter day
May come so much our own to be
That aye He blessed company
May light like sunshine all our gloom,
And make our Easter lilies bloom
In hearts that join with full accord
The anthems to the risen Lord.

WON BY HER VOICE

An Easter Day Story.

VICTOR BRADNOR, capitalist, traveler, critic, man of the world and cynic, heard the ringing of the bell of the quaint colonial church, and it recalled tender memories of the days of his youth.

Following its sound he reached the edifice, which stood in the midst of a neglected graveyard full of gravestones, many of which were fallen or broken in pieces. Tangles of bush and brier were on every hand.

Entering the house of worship, which he found to be already filled, he modestly took a seat near the door and under the gallery of the choir.

The day was Easter, and the plain oaken altar bore large vases of sweet flowers, whose fragrance had stolen all over the audience room and made the air of the April morning grateful with its presence.

Soon the little organ sent forth a peal announcing a prelude, and the young man looked bored. But in a moment he assumed an attentive, rapt attitude, and ripples of glad sunshine played over his features.

A voice of marvelous sweetness rang out within the narrow walls of the sanctuary. It was full, rich, clear, divine almost, in its expression.

Bradnor thought of the angel song on the plain of Bethlehem, and closed his eyes, as though to shut out all sight lest the glorious harmonics be lost to him.

He did not think of the singer, whether old or young, nor of the triumphant words of the hymn she sang. It was her voice, so intense in its earnestness, so flutelike in its softness, yet so human, withal, that had entered his soul.

Thenceforth he had no heart for the prayers, nor the words that were read, nor the sermon that was spoken. He sat as one in a deep sleep, from which he only roused when the ineffable voice rang out in its rich cadences. Others mingled with it, but these he did not hear.

When the services were ended he slowly made his way to the village inn, where he had been stopping during the past week. There he inquired of the landlord concerning the owner of the voice.

Boniface was a fat, wheezy fellow, whose thoughts came slow and whose speech was slower. Bradnor found it necessary to repeat the question.

"She's Mrs. Kitty Travis," slowly came the reply. "wife of Tim Travis, who—"

"O, the deuce!" ejaculated the young man, as he turned disappointedly away.

The landlord stared at him with his great goggle eyes in astonishment and attempted a movement to call him back, but Bradnor had disappeared from the room. Several times during the afternoon and evening the host essayed speech with his guest, but was so halting in purpose that he never succeeded.

Bradnor took an early morning train for his home in Baltimore, and when the sun rose the hills around the little Virginia village were far behind him. But he took with him a memory of that place, fresher and sweeter and purer than the white lilies that grew in luxuriance upon either side of the roadway. It was the voice of a woman in the ivy-mantled village church.

"Confound it," he muttered, "and the owner of it is married. Yes, and doubtless gray and old and wrinkled. What have you to do with the voice of a married woman, or anything else that belongs to her, Victor Bradnor?"

Still, though he sneered and reproved himself, the voice quickened and sent ont repeated melodies in the great chamber of his thoughts.

White Sulphur Springs was filled with people from all over the country and among the throngs was Victor Bradnor, who had gone thither not so much for his health as to get away from the heat of the city and the ennui that at times oppressed him.

The evening was a delightful one in August, and Bradnor was seated upon the veranda of his hotel, holding high converse with an old acquaintance he had first met at Florence, and, later, at London.

This friend was languidly telling of a misadventure he had on a gondola at Venice, in which a fair Venetian maid figured, punctuated by an involuntary bath in the blue waters, when, suddenly, Bradnor leaned his head to one side, like a dog when attentively regarding his master.

He no longer heard his friend. The firing of a cannon would not have diverted him from the object of his interest.

Again the tender chords of memory were touched and his big chest heaved like a huge bellows pumped by a smith.

The voice of the village church poured out its richness in a stream of glory, overwhelming yet inspiring him with its refreshing. The woman was singing the "Last Rose of Summer." A touch of sadness pervaded her voice, which now and then nearly quivered with emotion as she declared the solitariness of the flower and the death of its fellows. She was singing in the great hall and the liquid tones poured through the open windows.

When she had done he sighed heavily, arose and strode abruptly, away from his friend, who, with mild surprise upon his countenance, likewise stood upon his feet and slowly followed after Bradnor.

The latter proceeded on his way until he reached the end of the long piazza, when he faced about and paused, upon the very brink of the broad flight of steps.

His friend drew near and was about to address him, when a party of indies approached from within and both gentlemen moved as if to permit them to have greater freedom in passing. Bradnor, in his abstraction, stepped backward instead of forward, with the result that he lost his footing, slipped and fell heavily, rolling over until he reached the ground.

Instantly everything was in confusion. The friend, whose name was Jerlyn, ran rapidly down the steps and hastily leaned over the prostrate man, while the ladies looked anxiously on from the piazza. Other guests were quickly attracted to the spot.

THREW HIM TO THE GROUND.

"My God!" cried Jerlyn, looking upward towards the ladies, after he had touched the forehead and the wrist of Bradnor, "I am afraid the dear old fellow is dreadfully hurt."

A physician was hastily summoned, but meantime the injured man had been tenderly borne by strong arms to his bed chamber. He recovered consciousness after some moments and when a careful examination had been made the medical man declared that no bones were broken, but that a badly-sprained ankle would confine Bradnor to his bed for many days.

The young, stalwart fellow, with his six feet of height and broad shoulders, chafed under the latter sentence. He did not feel ill, although the pain was intense in his ankle. But the doctor was obdurate, declaring that most serious results would be likely to follow any attempt upon his part to arise from his bed for a week, at least.

With a groan the man turned his face away and presently fell asleep, from the effects of an opiate that had been administered in his arm.

The following morning he dozed fitfully, the effects of the drug not having worn away, but with the afternoon his intelligence returned to him. His eyes ranging over the room he saw upon his dressing case a great cluster of red roses, and for a moment he wondered who had given them to him; but the thought was an evanescent one. Perhaps he thought it was an act of Jerlyn's, who had spent the greater part of the day in his room.

Day after day, however, he observed that fresh ones were supplied to replace the others. When a week had passed, he turned suddenly upon Jerlyn and thanked him for his care and the gift of the flowers.

"Flowers, what flowers?" demanded Jerlyn, nervously. He was a little, nervous man, who spoke rapidly. "Didn't know you cared for 'em, don't. Cabbages are much more to my taste, especially when boiled with bacon or beef."

Bradnor did not pursue the subject, but he brooded over it all the more. He had no acquaintance or friend at the Springs save Jerlyn, and he was sure the landlord had not provided them.

He was now able to sit in an easy chair and the doctor had promised that within a day or two he might, with the aid of crutches, leave his room and mingle with the guests of the hotel.

The following morning he was awake when Bridget, the chambermaid, entered his room and was surprised to see her bearing a cluster of fresh roses in her hands.

"Bridget," he said, with firmness, "come here."

The girl, somewhat trepidant, approached his bedside, still holding the flowers.

"So it is you who have been filling that vase every morning, is it?"

"Shure, sor, an' so it wor," she replied, with a courtesy.

"Yes, Bridget, now hand me that pocketbook on the table there. That is well. Now I want you to tell me who gave you the roses to bring in to me."

"Howly mither, sor, an' that I will niver be after doin'. Mrs. Travis, the leddy, sor, thrittened me I don' know what av I sid a wurred about her, sor—"

"That will do, my girl," he said, gently, as he placed a bill in her hands. "Leave the roses here by my side and go out of the room for a little while."

"Tin dollars," cried Bridget, after reaching the hall, "an' all because I wor afther refusin' the tillin' av him who sint them! Shure the kind gintleman's gone clane deft."

Bradnor seized the cluster eagerly and let his nostrils drink in their grateful odor. While he did so the memory of the heavenly voice freshened, and he seemed to hear it sing over and over again the hymns of the Easter day service. Then he listened for the dear words of the flower song: "'Tis the Last Rose of Summer." In a deep revery he closed his eyes for several moments, after which he opened them again, laid the roses down with a profound sigh and then said, aloud:

"Victor Bradnor, you wretch, you are deeply, desperately and foolishly in love with a human voice, and that voice is the property of a married woman. Shame upon you!"

When he was permitted to go downstairs he inquired for Mrs. Travis. It would be but an act of propriety and courtesy to thank her in person for her kindness to a sick man.

She had gone away the evening before with her mother.

"The deuce take it," he said, regretfully, "am I never to see her face?"

* * * * * * *

When next Easter day came Victor Bradnor was in Rome and with thousands of others attended the magnificent services at St. Peter's, where all the pomp and circumstances of stately robes, grand processions and artistic music combined to give emphasis to this day of days in the calender. Bradnor listened pensively to the glory-strains of organ and the rich-toned voices of the men and boys of the choir. His thoughts were far out and away in the ivy-covered Virginia church, and he felt that the music of her voice was sweeter than that of all the harmonies which echoed in St. Peter's. While the organ pealed and voices blended with it in happy acclaim of Resurrection day, he thought he could hear her divine vocalization above them all, soft and gentle withal as the zephyr at eventide.

He was glad when the services were ended, because their suggestions brought too freshly before him the recollections of the Easter day of the previous year. He felt he must go through life haunted by a voice, the owner of which he durst not look upon even should he chance to meet her, because she was the wife of another.

Passing into the outer air, he walked along aimlessly pursued by the object of his love, the voice that continued to haunt him. He was aroused out of his abstraction by a sudden scream and then another.

Just ahead of him a great burly fellow, a thievish beggar, it would seem, had seized a woman, an elegantly dressed lady, by the arm, while her companion, a young and exquisitely beautiful female, regarded the man with looks of horror upon her refined face.

Striding rapidly forward, Bradnor reached out and grasped the knave, who had not observed his approach, by the throat and threw him heavily to the ground. The rascal lay stunned for a moment, and, then reviving, gathered himself quickly together, and hurried away, muttering imprecations as he staggered along.

"We had given him money, sir," said the older of the ladies, "but he demanded more, all we had, in fact, and—" she was greatly excited and was so overcome that she broke fairly down.

"Many of the Roman beggars are very bold," he said, reassuringly, "but you will hear no more from him. But—here is my card," he said, drawing out his case and handing one to each. "You are Americans and I am an American also. Permit me to see you to your carriage."

"Mamma, that is Mrs. Trenton, wished us to take one, but the distance is so short and the day so lovely, headstrong, I decided we had better walk. I am Mrs. Travis, both of Ingleside, Virginia."

The owner of the divine voice! The charm of it was as sweet in conversation as in song. Bradnor, as they proceeded on their way, regarded her furtively from time to time.

Mrs. Trenton knew of the Bradnors, of Baltimore, and invited Victor to call upon them. This he readily agreed to do.

One day he thanked Mrs. Travis for the roses she had sent him. Then she blushed crimson.

"Why, Mr. Bradnor, what must you have thought of my boldness? I did not know your name and really thought you were the old gentleman—your friend so spoke of you when you lay upon the ground."

Bradnor laughed heartily. He and the owner of the voice had become much better acquainted by this time.

Sooner than this, he had learned from her mother that she was a bride of an hour only, her husband having been killed in a railroad accident within less than the time named, after the marriage ceremony had been performed. The girl-wife escaped uninjured and returned with his dead body from what had been intended to be a happy and extended tour. This was four years ago, and Kitty was now 22.

"The deuce take it!" murmured Bradnor, when the mother told him, "that was what that confounded landlord was trying to tell me."

They remained at Rome two months, and Bradnor was almost continually with them. He met them at Paris, and at London. The grace and charm of the young woman were equal to the melody of her voice, and—well, when the next Easter rolled around Kitty Bradnor sat by the side of her husband in the little ivy-covered church, where, as he afterward declared, she sang more divinely than ever.

WILLIAM ROSSER COBBE.

EASTER TRIUMPH.

A Fresh Impetus Given to the Upward Aspirations of Mankind.

The passing of the severe season is the signal for undisguised triumph in external nature. Sky and sun, and mead and crag, are lighted up with a new fire. It is the feast of the sun, the yearly awakening of the myriad sleeping beauties—the running of the sap, the coloring of the leaf and the flower, the return of life and strength and myriad activities.

Man's Easter is at one with that of nature and with the Divine who is risen. The ancient church ranks the resurrection as the first and primal basis of her claim. For if He is not risen there is no shadow of right in Christianity as a Divine institution. But, on the other hand, all men are risen with Him. The world rose very great and strong on that Easter morning when Love came back from the tomb with a message of hope and a proof and assurance of the faith of the chosen few.

Ever since Easter triumphs have multiplied, rising is the new order. Excelsior is the schoolboy's motto. Full-grown ambition sees nothing in the way of his attaining the greatest honor or the highest station—except lack of opportunity and unfavorable circumstances. The primeval downward in man comes back now only as an atavism that is out of place and out of date. In the aspiring of an ill-judged pursuit of greatness or success, the bad trait of some long dead ancestor comes back to pull down, instead of building up. The general tendency, however, is upward. We believe a fresh impetus was given to it on the first Easter when the women waited for Him to come back—the Light of Hope from the sightless eyes of death. There is no more darkness or death, but light and life.—Collier's Weekly.

Easter.

Across the winter's gloom
There falls a golden ray,
And from each wildflower's tomb
The stone is rolled away.

Once more to life and love
The buds and leaves of spring
Come forth and hear above
The birds like angels sing.

In every wood and field
Behold the symbol shown.
The mystery revealed,
The majesty made known!

Christ, who was crucified,
Is risen! Lo, the sign!
The earth at Easter-tide
Touched by His hand divine!

His Easter Offering.

I dare not offer her a hat,
On things mundane I may not feast her
And so I have decided that
I'll offer her myself at Easter.

NEEDED RELIEF

For the Flood Sufferers of the West and Southwest—President McKinley's Message to Congress on the Subject.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The president sent this message to congress Wednesday:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: Information has recently come to me from the governors of Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana, and from prominent citizens of these states and Tennessee, containing the conclusion that widespread distress, involving the destruction of a large amount of property and loss of human life has resulted from the floods which have submerged this section of the country. These are stated on reliable authority, to be the most destructive floods that have ever devastated the Mississippi valley, the water being much higher than the highest stage it has reached before. From Marion, Ark., North of Memphis, to Greenville, Miss., a distance of more than 200 miles by river, it is reported there are now at least fifty towns and villages under water, and a territory extending from 100 miles north of Memphis to 200 miles south and from 50 miles wide, is submerged. Hundreds of thousands of acres of cultivated soil with growing crops are included in the submerged territory. In this section alone there are from 50,000 to 60,000 people whose property has been destroyed and whose business has been suspended. Growing crops have been ruined, thousands of cattle have been drowned and the inhabitants of certain areas threatened with starvation. As a great majority of the sufferers are small farmers and laborers, they are entirely destitute and will be unprepared for work even after the floods have subsided.

The entire Mississippi valley in Arkansas is flooded and communication with many points cut off. In Mississippi alike condition exists. The levees in Louisiana, with a single exception, have held; but the water is rising and the situation there is reported as being extremely critical. Under such circumstances the citizens of these states look for the cooperation and support of the national government in relieving the pressing cases of destitution for food, clothing and shelter which are beyond the reach of local efforts. The authorities who have been associated with the executive recognize that their first and most energetic duty is to provide as far as possible the means of caring for their own citizens; but nearly all of them in the opinion that, after their resources have been exhausted, a sum aggregating at least $150 000 and possibly $.0,0,0 will be required for immediate use.

Precedents are not wanting that in such emergencies as this congress has taken prompt, generous and intelligent action involving the expenditure of considerable sums of money with satisfactory results. In 1874 $500,000 was appropriated and in 1882 $350,000 was also appropriated for relief in the same direction, beside large sums in other years.

The distress and relief committee of Memphis, which has taken prompt action, has already cared for from 6 000 to 7,000 refugees from the flooded districts and they are still arriving in that city in large numbers daily. Supplies and provisions have been sent to the various points in Arkansas and Mississippi by this committee, but the utmost that can be done by these efforts is to partly relieve the most acute cases of suffering. No action has yet been taken for the great majority of the inhabitants living in the interior whose condition has already been described.

Under these conditions and having exerted themselves to the fullest extent, the local authorities have reluctantly confessed their inability to further cope with this distressing situation unaided by relief from the government.

It has therefore seemed to me that the representatives of the people should be promptly informed of the nature and extent of the suffering and needs of these stricken people, and I have communicated these facts in the hope and belief that the legislative branch of the government will promptly reinforce the work of the local authorities in the states named.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY.

Executive Mansion.

The reading of the message in the senate was followed by a resolution offered by Mr. Jones (dem., Ark.) appropriating $150,000 for the relief of the sufferers and authorizing the use of the government boats. It was unanimously passed.

In the house Mr. Catching (dem., Miss.) offered and obtained consent for the immediate consideration of a resolution appropriating $200,000 for their relief. It was also unanimously passed.

The senate then accepted the house provision for $50.000 extra.

President McKinley immediately signed the resolution.

A Pointer for Tomato Canners.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—U. S. Consul Taney, at Belfast, reports to the state department that the Italian canned tomatoes are supplanting the American tomatoes, largely used there, owing, as the dealers say, to the fact that the American vegetable is overcooked or overripe, and consequently is not as firm when opened as the Italian tomatoes. By using a deceptive form of tin, too, the Italian cans appear to be larger than American.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The president Wednesday sent to the senate the following nominations:

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—SENATE—The senate Monday adopted a resolution offered some time ago instructing the committee on civil service and retrenchment to investigate the case of the discharged employes of the bureau of animal industry in South Omaha, Neb., for mere political reasons, and also one offered Monday for a like investigation of the dismissal of 65 colored persons from the bureau of engraving and printing in Washington for no other cause than that of color. A bill was introduced by Mr. Chandler (Rep.), N. H., abolishing competition in trade prodnotions and authorizing combinations to enable merchants, manufacturers and producers of commodities subject to interstate commerce to maintain prices and make profits notwithstanding business depressions. The routine morning business having been disposed of the resolution offered by Mr Allen last Thursday for a protest against the trial by drumhead court-martial, and the execution of Gen. Ruis Rivera, a leader of the Cuban army of independence, was taken up and led to a debate, in which some hard things were said against Spain by Senators Allen and Gallinger. The resolution was modified and adopted.

HOUSE—Not in session.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—SENATE—Two of the appropriation bills which failed last session—the sundry civil and the deficiency—were reported Tuesday and placed on the calendar soon to be acted on. Senator Morgan's resolution recognizing a state of war in Cuba and extending belligerent rights to both sides in the conflict was taken up, and discussed until 3 o'clock, when it was placed on the calendar, with a notification that Mr. Morgan would address the senate later Wednesday and that the vote on that motion would be regarded as a test vote. The remainder of the day's session was given to debate on the pacific railway bill. Mr. Stewart (pop., Nev.) occupied the floor for three hours and a half in opposition to the principle of involuntary bankruptcy, and drifted into the question of bimetallism on which he and Mr. Chandler (rep., N. H.) indulged in an entertaining dialogue.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—SENATE—The message from the president suggesting government aid for the sufferers by the Mississippi floods was read in the senate and was followed by the introduction and passage of a joint resolution appropriating $150,000 for the purpose. Before the action could be communicated to the house, a joint resolution was received from that body appropriating $50,000 for the same purpose, and including the Red River of the North in the territory to be aided. This house joint resolution was immediately passed by the senate, action on the other one, and on Mr. Hale's joint resolution Monday, before considered and annulled. Senator Morgan, (dem. Ala.,) continued his speech of Tuesday) in support of his joint resolution extending belligerent rights to both sides in the Cuban revolution. No action was taken on it.

HOUSE—The house was in session an hour Wednesday, to which time it had passed the resolution appropriating $500,000 for the relief of flood sufferers in the Mississippi valley. Mr. Simpson (pop., Kan.) furnished the sensation of the day by felling the examiner on Earle (S. C.) in the senate Tuesday and protesting against the failure to appoint committees to proceed to the consideration of legislative business in the regular and orderly way. He spoke of the power exercised by the speaker as autocratic and described present indictions as revolution and anarchy. Speaker Reed responded at some length, stating that it was not the first time this condition of affairs had existed. The house adjourned until Saturday.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—SENATE—The senate Thursday heard Mr. Morgan, of Alabama, for the third successive day on his resolution declaring that a state of war exists in Cuba. He was severely critical of Spain's methods against American prisoners and went over in detail the circumstances in the Competitor case. Mr. Morgan said he would close his speech at the next meeting of the senate, when he would present a letter from one of the Cubau officials of the eastern province of the island showing the complete civil system of government now sustained by the Cubans. Mr. Nelson, of Minnesota spoke for two hours on the bankruptcy bill opposing the pending Torrey bill as excessively harsh and designed as a collection agency for large creditors and urging his substitute as a measure drafted in the interest of thousands of poor debtors struggling to get on their feet.

HOUSE—Not in session.

THE SURVIVORS

Of the Wrecked American Barkentine Nellie Smith Taken to New York.

SAVANNAH, Ga., April 11.—The survivors of the American barkentine, Nellie Smith, which was sunk in a collision with the Plant line steamship La Grande Duchesse, off the Jersey coast Friday morning, will be taken to New York on the steamer which sails Tuesday. They are: Winfield S. Babbedge, steward; Frank Conway, helmsman; Lars Harvasan, seaman.

The five who went down with the wreck are: Capt. Dodge, of Peabody, Mass.; First Mate Asson, of Boston; Second Mate Nelson, of Brooklyn; Martin Simons, Hans ——, seaman.

One of the mates is supposed to have been crushed in his bunk by the bow of one of the steamers. Babbedge, Conway and Harvasan climbed into the rigging and were swept off when the vessel went down. A few minutes after they caught hold of the roof of the deck house, which had floated from the sinking vessel, and clung to it until they were rescued by a life boat from La Grande Duchesse. The barkentine was under full sail when the collision occurred. The first mate, Asson, was at the helm. Harvasan, who was on the look-out, in his statement to the master of the steamer, said that the collision would not have occurred had the mate stood by the wheel, but instead of doing so, he ran toward the captain and the crash came before he could change the vessel's course.

The Wonderful Kava-Kava Shrub.

A New Botanical Discovery.—Of Special Interest to Sufferers from Diseases of the Kidneys or Bladder, Rheumatism, etc.—A Blessing to Humanity.

A Free Gift of Great Value to You.

Our readers will be glad to know that the new botanical discovery, Alkavis, from the wonderful Kava-Kava shrub, has proved an assured cure for all diseases caused by Uric acid in the blood, or by disordered action of the Kidneys or urinary organs. The botanists call it. Piper Methysticum, grows on the banks of the Ganges river, East India, and probably was (Piper Methysticum.) used for centuries by the natives before its extraordinary properties became known to civilization through Christian missionaries. In this respect it resembles the discovery of quinine from the peruvian bark, made known by the Indians to the early Jesuit missionaries in South America, and by them brought to civilized man. It is a wonderful discovery, with a record of 1200 hospital cures in 30 days. It acts directly upon the blood and kidneys, and is a true specific, just as quinine is in malaria. We have the strongest testimony of many ministers of the gospel, well known doctors and business men cured by Alkavis, when all other remedies had failed.

THE KAVA-KAVA SHRUB

In the New York Weekly World of Sept. 10th, the testimony of Rev. W. B. Moore, D. D., of Washington, D. C. was given, describing his years of suffering from Kidney disease and Rheumatism, and his rapid cure by Alkavis. Rev. Thomas Smith, the Methodist minister at Cobden, Illinois, passed nearly one hundred gravel stones after two weeks use of Alkavis. Rev. John H. Watson, of Sunset, Texas, a minister of the gospel of thirty years' service, was struck down at his post of duty by Kidney disease. After hovering between life and death for two months, and all his doctors having failed, he took Alkavis, and was completely restored to health and strength, and is fulfilling his duties as minister of the gospel. Mr. R. C. Wood, a prominent attorney of Lowell, Indiana, was cured of Rheumatism, Kidney and Bladder disease of ten years standing, by Alkavis. Mr. Wood describes himself as being in constant misery, often compelled to rise ten times during the night on account of weakness of the bladder. He was treated by all his home physicians without the least benefit and finally completely cured in a few weeks by Alkavis. The testimony is undoubted and really wonderful. Mrs. James Young, of Kent, Ohio, writes that she had tried six doctors in vain, that she was about to give up in despair, when she found Alkavis and was promptly cured of Kidney disease and restored to health. Many other ladies also testify to the wonderful curative powers of Alkavis in the various disorders peculiar to womanhood. ●

So far the Church Kidney Cure Company, No. 412 Fourth Avenue, New York, are the only importers of this new remedy, and they are so anxious to prove the value that for the sake of introduction they will send a free treatment of Alkavis prepaid by mail to every reader of this paper who is a Sufferer from any form of Kidney or Bladder disorder, Bright's Disease, Rheumatism, Dropsy, Gravel, Pain in Back, Female Complaints, or other affection due to improper action of the Kidneys or Urinary Organs. We advise all Sufferers to send their names and address to the company, and receive the Alkavis free. ● It is sent to you entirely free, to prove its wonderful curative powers.

SHIPBUILDING ON THE CLYDE.

Immense Trade of the Scotch River Last Years Record Breaker.

People generally have a very faint idea of the extent of the shipbuilding industry on the river Clyde, Scotland, says the Fall River News. Some statistics have come to hand, however, which tell the story in a measure. In a recent issue of the North British Mail, of Glasgow, 70 firms are named who are constructing from one to ten large vessels from twin-screw steamers of 1,000 tons up to first-class cruisers and battle ships of 16,500-horse power. The year 1896 was a record-breaker on the Clyde, but the prospects for 1897 are equally satisfactory. The work on hand represents about 310,000 gross register tons. Compared with last year this shows an increase of 50,000 tons. The marine engineering trade is also well represented in 336,000-horse power, or 40,000 over that of the previous year. The government orders include one line of battle ship, two first-class cruisers and three second-class cruisers. The largest order given to the Clyde for a long time was that for the Nippon Yussen Kaisha, of Japan. This consisted of ten steamers of 5,824 tons register and 7,500 deadweight tons each. Four of these are already launched and six are being built—three in the yard of D. & W. Henderson and three in that of Napier, Shanks & Bell. The money value of the contract represents well on to $5,000,000.

WORSTED THE TROLLEY CAR.

It Ran Into a Load of Hay with Disastrous Results.

This is the time the trolley car got the worst of it. It was of the Plainfield (N. J.) line, and was running at full speed for Dunellen. It was very foggy. Suddenly there loomed up out of the mist a hay wagon drawn by a horse and a mule, says the New York World.

"Look out there!" yelled the motorman, but it was a wasted effort, for the words were not out of his mouth before the car struck the oncoming wagon. The pole tore away the dashboard and then struck the motorman in the stomach, knocking him into the middle of the car. The conductor was pitched against the rear door and had his nose banged up. The solitary passenger was sent against the roof and began to pray before he came down.

The pole had saved the animals pulling the hay wagon. The horse was thrown to one side, but the fender struck the mule and sent him head over heels up on the front platform of the car, where his heels played havoc with glass and framework. The driver of the wagon was thrown off, but uninjured.

"Well, I'll be hanged!" said the motorman, when they brought him to.

The mule neighed loud with glee and threw up his heels as if he had at last found a worthy foeman.

A REMARKABLE tree grows in Brazil. It is about six feet high and is so luminous that it can be seen on the darkest night for a distance of a mile or more.

AN INFAMOUS CLAUSE.

Protection Fanaticism in Tariff Legislation.

There is nothing in the records of American legislation which as a piece of stupid and ruthless tyranny equals the retroactive clause of the tariff bill just passed in the lower branch of congress. The face of legal opinion as well as of popular judgment has always been sternly set against ex post facto laws as opposed not only to public interest, but to the essential spirit of our institutions. Yet the tariff mongers have not forborne to include such a clause in the bill, in itself the most extreme in its high protection abuses ever proposed in congress, to make its burden still more onerous. Fanaticism could go no further in party madness.

Whether this retroactive feature of the tariff would, in case of its becoming a law, stand the ordeal of the courts is doubtful. No precisely similar case has ever been brought before the supreme bench, or, indeed any other of our law tribunals, so far as we can learn. That its spirit does not accord with that supposed to be dominant in our political system is clear at half a glance. This far more than any technical or superficial agreement with the established course of things, if such an apparent concord existed, as is not the case, would control the final decision. But in the meantime, during the pendency of the question, retroactive jurisdiction will do more to unsettle and agitate the business of the country than would even the final results of the tariff itself. Uncertainty is the prime factor of business convulsion, especially in those branches of business which deal with articles of a perishable nature, or such as are subject to rapid fluctuation of price. In these days, too, of immense production and of steamship and cable as commercial factors, prices fluctuate far more rapidly than in the more easy-going days of old.

An illustration of the working of the retroactive clause may be instanced in the case of the fruit commission merchants of New York city. Nearly all fruit arriving at this port is consigned, and the American merchant has to make large advances to make sure of his cargoes. Under the provision that only goods purchased and shipped prior to April 1 of this year will be free of the new excessive tariff, in case it becomes a law, foreign fruit when it begins to arrive will be met by exactions positively ruinous in its competition with the native fruit. The trade of hundreds of merchants will be destroyed. While the case of fruit importation, owing to perishable quality and liability to quick price fluctuations, perhaps is an extreme example, many other products will share in part a similar drawback. All consigned goods—and these constitute a very important portion of the volume of commercial business—will be specially liable. Importations purchased absolutely belong to the more stable priced articles as a rule, and the excessive hardship in any individual case would be less. But here also can be readily perceived the burden, which will tax business and cramp the operations of the merchant; for it is held that the difference between the new duties and those of the Wilson tariff would constitute a lien against all goods. The republican party came into power with clamorous braggadocio as "the advance agency of prosperity." A more monstrous travesty on its claim can scarcely be fancied than this tariff, which arouses detestation in the minds of the more intelligent members of its own political family, and further invokes an agency which would scarcely be tolerable even in a despotic government of the Europe of to-day. The victim is made subject to all the terrors of prompt execution even before his trial has been decided. Mr. McKinley, while in the house, in one of his speeches on tariff agitation, deplored the evil which any change in schedules infallibly brought about. He laid stress on the importance, where these changes were necessary, of fixing such a date for their effect as would allow gradual provision for the new condition created. The mad army which tramps in his footsteps have proceeded in this retroactive clause of their new bill to negate most contemptuously the old dictum of their standard-bearer.—N. Y. Journal.

A Duty Unperformed.

The laying of necessary taxes for the support of the government is a task specially confided by the constitution to the house of representatives. In the method adopted to procure the passage of the Dingley bill the republican majority has divested itself of its constitutional function. It has sent a bill to the senate without discussing it or perfecting it. The duty unperformed in the house will be devolved upon the senate; and while the Dingley bill will, no doubt, be a very different measure after the discussion and amendment which it is sure to receive, the senate is, unfortunately, so constituted as to its membership and as to its political preferences that there can be no certainty that the bill will be greatly improved. And after the senate shall have new shaped the schedules of the Dingley bill the final result of the bargaining between the conference committees of the two houses will keep the business interests of the country in a state of conjecture and apprehension till the very last moment of manipulation.—Philadelphia Record.

——The retroactive clause, in the Dingley tariff bill as passed by the house is simply another defiance of fate by extremists who are intoxicated with a wholly fortuitous grasp of power. If it were possible to believe that the senate would adopt this monstrous provision the effect upon trade and upon customs receipts would be simply paralyzing. The adoption of such an unheard-of provision simply betrays the eagerness of the tariff framers to give the trusts and monopolies an immediate control of our markets. They cannot wait even to pass the new schedules of extortion in the usual way.—N. Y. World.

CRACKING OF THE WHIP.

Republican Opposition to the Dingley Bill Curtailed.

It is likely that if the republicans in the house were really free men, there would have been many more protests against the Dingley bill from the majority side than were recorded. For it is to be observed that where the iron rule does not operate to check expression of opinion, republicans are freely condemning this latest manifestation of republican disregard for the wishes and the rights of the people. In fact, for the past four years leading republican papers all over the country have been at pains to deprecate any further attempt to force the republican party into commitment to a tariff policy that is not only antagonistic to the commercial and industrial interests of the country, but which was cordially disapproved by the people in two general elections. The evil of McKinleyism, which stirred up this republican opposition to proscriptive tariffs, was less of an evil than this proposed assault on the people, for the reason that it did not go so far as does Dingleyism in the direction of delivering the masses wholly over to the trusts and the capitalists.

That the republican opposition in the house to the Dingley bill is wholly disproportionate to the republican opposition throughout the country is due simply to the fact that only very few members of the majority have dared to say what they think about it or to vote as they think. They are protectionists, of course, for the most part, at least, but they doubtless understand that this bill proposes something worse than protectionism; that it goes far beyond the protective limit, even as it is established in republican policy. It passes, however, at the crack of the whip, under which the majority is cowed.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

REPUBLICANS REVOLTED.

Opposition to Dingleyism Even Among the Protectionists.

The criticism of the cotton and woolen schedule of the Dingley bill by republican Congressmen McCall and Lovering, of Massachusetts, is but a faint indication of the dissatisfaction with this extreme measure among moderate protectionists. Both these members pronounced the duties to be too high—more than the manufacturers needed or desired. "Massachusetts," said Mr. Lovering, "wants a tariff that will stand."

Certainly a worse-than-McKinley tariff, as it has been demonstrated that the Dingley bill would be, will not stand. The Dingleyites appear to have forgotten 1890 and 1892.

In replying to the criticisms of his own party colleagues Mr. Dingley repeated the old sophistry that "the protection afforded is only such as is necessary to equalize the labor conditions in the United States and those prevailing in other producing countries." Does Mr. Dingley pretend to say that there is a difference of 50 per cent. of the full value of the goods between the labor cost here and abroad? Has he forgotten that another Maine statesman—James G. Blaine—certified as secretary of state that the labor cost in American cottons was less than in goods made in England? Is the total labor cost in woolens anywhere equal to Mr. Dingley's duties? Can he mention the country and prove the fact?

When a tariff bill in two of its most important schedules is so extreme as to evoke dissent from Massachusetts protectionists, it is not hard to foretell what the people will think of it.—N. Y. World.

PRESS COMMENTS.

——Maj. McKinley's place in history as the author of the superlative iniquity in tariff legislation is slipping from his grasp. The house has voted him ont.—St. Louis Republic.

——Putting a duty on hides will not afford protection to those of the Dingley billers. Two years hence the people will rip them off and hang them on the fence for the flies to have fun with.—Kansas City Times.

——All the arguments in the world will not convince the man who finds the price of the necessities of life advanced as the result of the Dingley robber tariff bill that the foreigner pays the tax.—Illinois State Register.

——We suppose that when the tariff bill comes up in the senate Mark Hanna will get in some of his fine work. Up to date he appears to have occupied his time in chiefly looking out for the cars. —Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

——Mr. Dingley emphatically and indignantly denies that his bill is worse than the McKinley bill. Mr. Dingley can find at the other end of the avenue a gentleman who utterly fails to see why either emphasis or indignation is called for in the circumstances.—Baltimore News.

——There are people who fail to understand why Mr. Dingley should seek to provide for $100,000,000 of revenue when the deficit amounts to but $25,000,000. It is quite likely that Mr. Dingley is trying to make plain sailing for the pork-hunting congressmen.—N. Y. Journal.

——Smothering the people by protection will bring about free trade quicker than anything else. The people submitted to protection with fairly good grace until they got an overdose in 1890, and they turned toward tariff reform for relief. The relief from Dingleyism is likely to be free trade.—Utica Observer.

——Is it not curious that power should be given to the president to remit duties on goods from countries that sign reciprocity agreements, and that the same power to remit duties on articles controlled by trusts should be denied him? Perhaps an answer to the question may be found in the fact that the managers of the trusts, who have made large contributions to the republican campaign fund, are apprehensive that a republican servant of theirs would not always sit in the presidential chair.—Rochester (N. Y.) Herald.

Opium and Whisky Habits.

The letter quoted below, written March 23, 1896, by the editor and manager of the Sheffield, Ala., Standard, leaves no room to doubt that a successful treatment for the cure of the liquor habit exists:

"Dr. B. M. Woolley, Atlanta, Ga.: Your antidote for the liquor habit will do all you claim for it. After drinking whisky for more than twenty years I find myself entirely relieved of the accursed appetite through the use of three bottles of your medicine. It is impossible for the liquor habit, and leaves no bad effects.

"E. M. RAGLAND."

Shinnston, W. Va., Dr. B. M. Woolley, Atlanta, Ga.: I have been cured, or quit taking the antidote nineteen months, and never had any call for opium after taking the first dose of your Antidote. You wanted to know if you might use my letter. Yes, and my name, also. Any one may write to me if they wish to know of my cure or ask any questions as to the efficacy of the Antidote, and if they enclose stamp I will answer.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. A COSTLY MITER.

Newly Appointed Bishop to Wales Has an Extravagant Headpiece.

Bishop Francis Mostyn, who was last year appointed to the newly-created Roman Catholic bishopric of Wales, has recently become a fortunate possessor of a miter which is said to surpass in magnificence and in exquisite workmanship anything of the kind worn in Great Britain for many centures past, says the Westminster Gazette.

Of white embroidered silk, richly ornamented with gold, it is studded with 500 precious stones. The miter, which is Gothic in design, bears on its front a dove, symbolic of the Holy Spirit, in gold repoussé work, encircled by garnets and a heart formed of a single carbuncle of large size, with jeweled rays. The whole is surmounted by a cross composed of 33 gems. On the back are the figures of the Welsh patron saints, St. David and St. Winifred, beautifully wrought in the Welsh colors and surmounted by rubies, emeralds and pearls. At the apex appears the national emblem, the Welsh harp, encircled by topazes and aquamarines, which is an exact copy of the ancient "Arlandlws," which tradition declares to have remained in the possession of the Mostyn family from early centuries.

At Danbury, Iowa, corn is worth from four to eight cents per bushel.

Mr. J. J. Jones, of Morganfield, is striving to introduce sugar beet growing among the Union county farmers.

Farmers raise more corn and other "truck" and less tobacco. You'll fare just as well, live longer, happier and easier.—Ex.

The hog market in Clark county has been on the increase until now the prices equal and bid fair to exceed those of a year ago.

It takes 15,000,000 cows and 60,000,000 acres of land to keep up the milk trade of this country, to say nothing of the water used.

Geo. Hill, a prominent tobacco raiser of this place, informs the News that he has several beds of tobacco plants up and will be ready for the first season in May.

It is claimed that 75 per cent. of the cattle on the ranges of North Dakota perished in the storms of the past three months. One cattle man in Montana lost 250,000 cattle worth $1,000,000.

Every paper in the state should publish the fact that burnt corn is a sure cure for hog cholera. It was first discovered by burning a pile of corn belonging to a distillery. It was thrown to the hogs and eaten by them. Before that a number of them had been dying each day, but the disease immediately disappeared. It is so simple a remedy that it can be easily tried.—Milton News.

Mr. Freeland Drake has about 600 barrels of corn in pens, on his place near town, that he will feed, but should the price go to about $2 25 he might be persuaded to sell some of it. Mr. Drake says that there has been two heavy corn crops in succession and he hardly looks for a third heavy yield, in which case he believes corn will push to $2 50 or $2 75 a barrel before fall.—Harrodsburg Democrat.

The scare about glanders among horses in Bourbon county has turned out about as most people expected it would—not glanders, but an affection resembling distemper, and in some cases catarrh. One large fat horse killed on Isaac Keller's place was examined by veterinaries after they had killed him and from reports no symptons were found. Dr. F. P. Campbell has said from the start that the disease was not glanders, and so far his prediction has proven true.—Kentuckian.

Including feed, insurance and commission to the London seller, it costs about $2 per head to send beef cattle from Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois to London and sell them. In the English market they bring $11 per hundred net, which is equivalent to $6 50 gross. They cost $4 50 to $5 gross, so that the profit on each head of export cattle is not over $4 to $6 to the buyer and shipper. The beef, after it is butchered, sells in England for ten cents for the cheapest cuts to thirty cents per pound for the best.

There would be money in sheep raising if every farmer was as successful with his flocks as Mr. J. D. Doubman, who lives a mile north of town on the Yancey farm. Here is the kind of success that comes to the lot of Mr. Doubman: He had thirty-five ewes and they dropped fifty-six lambs, all of which are living; two of the ewes dropped six lambs, seventeen of the ewes dropped two lambs, and sixteen dropped one lamb each. There is big money in sheep raising at this rate.—Williamstown Courier.

The Winchester Democrat says: "Diphtheria is raging in Madison county, mumps and measles in Powell, turnpike mobs in Garrard and elsewhere, and the Legislature at Frankfort. Let us praise the Lord and take courage because none of these afflictions have come upon Clark county."

Sunday afternoon in the midst of a pouring rain and in the presence of a large crowd of white and colored people, sixty-nine colored people, converts of the big revival that has been in progress at the First Colored Baptist Church for several months, were baptized by the pastor, Rev. There is considerable thieving being done in the country precincts, says the Paris News. Thieves recently stole nine hogs from Mr. Joe Hall's farm, and a few nights later midnight visitors stole two saddles from Mr. Mathew Kenney's barn. One of the saddles belongs to Jas. Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who, desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

D. E. Castleman Chairman,
B. L. Rice, Secretary.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 21, 1897. NO. 26.

MR. BRYAN says there is no difference between a McKinley boom and a Cleveland panic.

THE ubiquity of the air ship that has been sailing around in the northwest is the most wonderful feature of the boat.

THE Republicans may call a caucus at any time now to nominate a candidate for Senator to take Dr. Hunter's place. If a caucus is called there will be numerous candidates before it.

THIS extra session of the legislature off of his hands, Gov. Bradley will never call another, no matter what Boss Hanna and President McKinley may demand of him in that regard. The Governor is as tired of the legislature as anybody.

THE Democrats have nothing of which to complain in the result of the slections held this spring. Their success is far beyond what they anticipated, and they feel very much encouraged, while the Republicans are ascribing all manner of excuses for their defeat.

The State Board of Equalization now in session at Frankfort, has summed up the assessments from all the counties and find that County Assessors have listed property at about 25 per cent. less than last year—a falling off of about $50,000,000 in the total valuation. The Board is now hearing delegations from the various counties, and it is probable that assessments in nearly all of the counties will be raised as high as they were last year.

THE Democratic State Executive Committee called a State convention to be held June 2 at Frankfort to nominate a candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals. County mass meetings to select delegates will be held May 29 at 2 p. m. The committee adopted a resolution admitting to participation in the convention all who will pledge themselves to support the nominee and declare adherence to the principles of the Chicago platform of 1896.

THE Franklin county grand jury has indicted Dr. Hunter, ex-Congressman Wilson, E. T. Frank, and Noel Gaines, for conspiracy to bribe. It is a very bad mixup for a candidate for United States Senator to be in, and many of the Doctor's friends claim the whole thing is black mail, and that he will be able to show that such is the case when the indictment comes to trial. Some of the Republicans in the State charge Gov. Bradley with being the instigator of the trouble, seeking thereby to untrack Dr, Hunter as a Senatorial candidate, he having failed in all his other schemes to accomplish that much desired result. It is strange that the man who, has done more than all others to bring the Republicans into power in Kentucky, should now be looked upon by members of his party as capable of engineering as great a conspiracy as that which they charge the Governor with, and which has startled the entire State. It is hard to believe that any man who the people of Kentucky would elevate to Gov. Bradley's position would become a party to any such contemptible work.

Nothing in the eloquent address made by Mr. Bryan at the Jefferson birthday banquet, a gathering of Democrats that will not soon be forgotton, was more important or significant than the following words: "The position taken by the Democratic party in 1896 will not be surrendered. If you doubt the permanency of the Chicago platform as a party creed, go among the rank and file of the party and measure the zeal and enthusiasm which that platform has aroused, and you will realize the impossibility of taking a backward step. True, the present administration is seeking to turn public attention to the tarift question, but if our reasoning is well-founded, an increase of taxes cannot restore prosperity to the producers of wealth. In fact, we contend that neither high taxation nor low taxation can bring prosperity to the people, so long as an appreciating dollar continues to give the money owner an advantage over the rest of the people. The money question must be the paramount issue of the next campaign, as it was of the last. If the Dingley bill brings genuine and permanent prosperity, the Democratic party will not be in a position to win a contest by opposing it. If, on the other hand, the Dingley bill proves a disappointment to those who advocate it, our position in 1896 will be strengthened, and public attention will be riveted upon the fact that the cause of financial depression is to be found in our monetary system."

Kentucky Crop Report.

For this month 153 correspondents, 109 counties, have reported, a gratifying increase in the number of counties heretofore reporting. The counties failing to report are Bell, Casey, Grayson, Jackson, Lee, Lyon Martin, Pulaski, Spencer and Wolfe.

WHEAT—The wheat crop shows material improvement during the month. The average condition on April 1st is 94, as against 88 on March 1st last and 69 on April 1st, 1896.

The growth has been very rapid during the month, and the plant is generally in a vigorous condition. There has been some drawbacks in the way of the fields becoming furrowed by the very heavy and continuous rainfall, and by overflow in the lowlands. There is some danger of the crop becoming so forward as to suffer serious injury in the case of a late freeze. Farmers are guarding against this to a great extent by grazing it off. It is gratifying that the expected injury to early wheat from Hessian fly, indicated in March report, has not materialized. In only two counties, Logan and Lincoln, is any mention made of damage from this insect. Late wheat, which looked to be a failure a month ago, has improved to such an extent that the loss of acreage by plowing up or planting to other crops averages but 3 per cent. for the State.

OATS—The oat crop, owing to the continued rains, will be at least three weeks later than an average year. The most favorable report does not indicate that more than 50 per cent. of the crop was in the ground on April 1st, and in some counties the sowing had barely begun on this date.

The average estimated acreage for 1897 is 80 per cent. of the acreage of 1896.

TOBACCO—The initial step towards a tobacco crop could not be more unfavorable. Few tobacco beds have been sown, and the season is so far advanced further sowing, in many instances, will be abandoned. There is certain to be a scarcity of plants, and it is equally certain that the plants will be late.

The condition of the plant beds sown for the State averages 69 per cent. of an average condition. The condition in the dark or stemming district is worse even than the average for the State. Taking 11 of the principal producing counties of this district, the condition is 58.

LIVE STOCK—The number of spring lambs, as compared with 1896, is 87 per cent. of the product of that year. They are generally reported in a thrifty condition.

Other Live Stock—There is no notable mention of disease among live stock, with the exception of glanders among horses in Harrison county. This disease is rumored to prevail in Bourbon county also, but correspondents from that county do not mention it in their report. Failure of correspondents to furnish detailed statement of ravages of the disease leaves the Bureau without accurate information on this point.

Legislation is now pending which if enacted, will quickly eradicate the disease, and prevent any considerable damage in the future.

FRUIT—The fruit prospects on April 1st are quite bright. Of the principal fruits grown in the State the condition, from best indications, are: For apples, 94; peaches, 79; pears 88; cherries, 90; grapes, 97; and strawberries, 94.

The averages are obtained from reports, many of which were made up before the damage from the freeze of about March 27th could be definitely ascertained, and are liable to correction in proportion as the actual damage from this freeze differs with the damage indicated.

Every section of the State reports farmers very far behind with spring work. It seems almost assured that the corn crop, as well as the oat crop, will be late, and a continuation of adverse conditions will soon make the situation serious.

LUCAS MOORE,
Commissioner of Agriculture.

A very sad and unusual accident occurred near Sulphur Well in Metcalfe county Wednesday, says the Glasgow Times: Mr. Albert Poor was plowing in the field of Mr. Alexander without suspecting the least danger, when as quick as thought and without a moment's warning the earth under him and his team sank to a depth of fifteen feet, literally engulfing both the man and the team. When found the horses were both dead and Mr. Poor was himself more dead than alive. When restored to consciousness Poor related the circumstances substantially as above. He will die.

But bad as the showing of the followers of Hunter led by Hunter may be, it remains for the official organ of the first Republican governor of Kentucky, edited by a member of his official family, to suggest repudiation as the coming issue in Kentucky politics; and the suggestion is made placidly and calmly, and without the least sign or shadow of condemnation.

"In a short time the cry will be raised that Kentucky shall repudiate her debts," says the Frankfort Capital, the organ of Governor Bradley, edited by Assistant Adjutant General Forrester.

"That has been done by othre States, and there are indications that very soon, perhaps in the next State election, this issue will be made," continues the Capital; not in terms advocating repudiation, of course; but not condemning it and treating it as the one way in which the Republican party can "lift Kentucky out of the rut," clear of her indebtedness," and "wipe from her fair fame the stain of an empty treasury and dishonored State warrants," to quote from the war cries the Salvation Army of Republicans in '95 lead by W. Godfrey Hunter, Republican nominee for Senator, for the use and benefit of William O'Connell Bradley, first Republican Governor of Kentucky.

So then, the Republican party proposes to go into the next campaign under the lead of Governor Bradley and flying the banner of Repudiation.

The Governor and his organ are entitled to credit for the frankness with which they admit the utter failure of the Republican party to administer the affairs of Kentucky; but not for the brazenness with which they announce their platform of dishonor in the campaign of November, '97.

Of Interest to Masons.

How very few Masons know the meaning of the twelfth chapter of Ecclesiastes, or are conscious of the beautiful poetry hidden in it. The words, so familiar to every Master Mason, contain a most symbolism and one eminently proper for the occasion. It is a lovely Oriental poem, which after admonishing us to remember our Creator in the days of our youth, when our service will be more acceptable, that is when we have strength to properly serve him, portrays in the language of the Orient the time when we shall not be able to do so by reason of age preceding the final dissolution.

"In the day when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and the strong men shall bow themselves. The arms, the keepers of the house; the strong men, the legs, bent and weakened with age.

"The grinders are the teeth. "Those that look out the windows are the eyes, which in the one grow few, and in the other dim from age.

"In old age the hair turns white —the blossom of almond tree is white.

"Or ever the silver cord be loosed or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, the wheel be broken at the cistern.

The silver cord is the spinal marrow, its loosening is the cessation of all nervous sensibility; the golden bowl is the brain, which is rendered unfit to perform its functions by the approach of death; the pitcher means the great vein which carries the blood to the right ventrical of the heart, here called the fountain: by the wheel is meant the great artery which receives the blood from the left ventricle of the heart, here designated as the cistern."—Kansas Freemason.

HAPPY AS THE DAY IS LONG.

Through the sunny bygone days of early life,
In a garden sweet and wild,
Knowing naught of sorrow — knowing naught of strife—
Played I as a little child;
Sporting with the sunbeams, romping with the breeze,
Dancing to the redbird's song,
Laughing at the blossoms falling from the trees—
Happy as the day was long!

This has been my motto, through the fleeting years:
"Never mind the shades of night,
They but show there's sunshine—Never mind the tears,
They are only dew-drops bright."
'Mid the blooming flowers of the summer day,
This is still my care-free song:
"Earth is but a garden, I'm a child at play—
Happy as the day is long!"

In the royal garden of the Prince of Light,
Flowers blossom through the years,
Yet each shifting shadow hints of earthly night—
Ev'ry dew-drop hints of tears.
There, throughout the endless, golden summer day,
This shall be my heartfelt song:
"Heaven's but a garden, I'm a child at play—
Happy as the day is long!"

—S. Q. Lapius, in Ohio Farmer.

BREAKING OF THE JAM.

[Copyright, 1897.]

"I ain't my own man. I know that," said Jerry. "I've heard the boys talkin' about it when they thought I was listenin' to the trees. Yes, I've heard 'em whisperin' that some day I'd do somethin' crazy with my gun. Well, mebbe I will—mebbe I will, if I hev' to live anywhere but here. But I couldn't noways hurt a little kid like you."—Jerry laid his huge hand gently on the head of the boy curled on the log cabin's hearth—"a pore little sick kid like you." He lifted his rifle and looked along the barrel toward the boy. His finger was on the trigger. The doctor opposite started to his feet with a word of alarm; then he sat down again. One glance at Jerry's face convinced him that, whatever Jerry's failings might be, shooting sick boys was not one of them.

"Of course you couldn't hurt him," said the physician. "In fact, I hope you'll help me take care of Jim this winter. We are here because the city is not the place for a boy who has had pneumonia. These old Adirondacks and the Oswegatchie river, and you for guide, Jerry, will make Jim as strong as a bear before spring, and—"

"Ever see a bear?" asked Jerry, laughing with pure delight. "Ever see a bear in the neatest trap in the woods? You let the kid come to-morry and I'll bet I'e'll show him one."

Jim sat up and shouted. Jerry's face was as simple and glowing as the boy's; then it clouded, and a vague sadness crept over the docile mouth and the somewhat vacant eyes.

"Don't you forgit I ain't right," he said, slowly and anxiously. "I'd forgit if the boys didn't let on. They laugh because I don't dast git away from these mountains. Ye know I stay here always, and I'm related some way to the big Windfall up yonder, an' to the river an' all. Once I went to town, and I got so lonesome an' cranky I wanted to knock ev'ry blamed fool I met. They got in my way, an' they talked too much. The trees here don't git in your way nor talk too much. In course, them popples along the Windfall gabble consid'ble, but they ain't exactly trees. They jist grew after that storm blew the real old fellers down. Think of that for wind! Oh, ef I'd only been here then!"

A light flashed into his eyes, and he jumped to his feet, walking restlessly to the door. His hound pressed after him and followed his handsome, muscular master out into the forest.

Ward, the owner of the log house where Dr. Mason and his charge had arrived that day, turned to his guest: "It's queer about that," he said. "Jerry in a high wind and Jerry in a calm are two different men. Ye wouldn't know him when it blows. He's smarter than lightnin' then; there ain't no cobwebs in his head at such times! But calm or storm, he's allays the strongest and best guide in the woods. He just can't get lost or tired, or mixed on the weather or the place to find game. Everybody likes Jerry, ef he ain't his own man, and ye can't put this boy in carefuller hands than Jerry Wade's."

Evidently Dr. Wade agreed, for, as the winter passed, Jim spent more and more hours with Jerry. In the lumber camps Jerry was the strongest, best natured worker among the men. During "slack" days the pair hunted, trapped and snowshoed together, and Jerry came to love the boy as he had never loved any other human being. Jim was as dear to him as the forest or the beautiful Oswegatchie.

The cold weather broke suddenly with warm rains. The river rose, carrying hundreds of logs down stream until they caught upon some rocks, forming a dangerous jam a quarter of a mile above the Windfall. Then the river froze again, and the men could walk on the ice almost to the foot of the tangle of logs.

But one morning a warm south wind rose, increasing to a violent windstorm as the day wore on. The softened ice began to pound against the jam from above, and the loggers stood idly about waiting for the break. On the Windfall the men could scarcely stand against the raging, shrieking wind. Late in the day Dr. Mason came, asking for Jim. Behind him, Pierre struggled, breathless and pale.

"Boy on river!" he cried. "Come! Hurry!"

Running to the bank, they saw Jim clinging to a rock far up the stream. Evidently he had wandered along the ice, ignorant of danger. They beckoned him wildly, but he was now panic-struck, and would not move. The shores opposite him were rocky and steep, and spiked with drift wood. The men stood at the only spot where he could reach land. But none offered to go to him in the face of almost certain death.

As they waited, there came a sudden pause, a moment when the wind rested, and the Oswegatchie boomed less threateningly against its barriers. It was the moment to rescue him, and the men faced each other. Then they shrank back with pale faces. Why throw away their lives?

A moment later the wind swept with a grim roar along the path which it had mowed through the forest 40 years before. The great Windfall was like a tunnel opening on the river, where already the log jam creaked and swayed. Jim might live to be swept into that whirlpool with its craunching timbers.' Sickened and trembling, they awaited the dreadful event; these men who braved dangers daily were cravens now. There was one—one only—one more a man in such a storm; but he was a mile away in the upper camp.

They thought of Jerry with a common impulse.

"He'll be wild. He'll say we was a lot of—"

"Go after Jerry."

The speakers paused, for along the footpath Jerry was coming rapidly toward them. The great muscles of his arms and chest knotted beneath his red shirt as he breasted the wind. His supple stride brought him quickly to the bank. There was a gleam in his wild eyes, and he laughed aloud in the pride of mastering the gale. The angry river was as dear as the currents of his own roused blood, and he longed to test the great strength of his splendid body or find a problem for his crowding thoughts. Life and spirit tingled within him.

Suddenly his glance fell upon the excited faces of the men; and then he saw little Jim. He stood among them, speaking quietly, but with stern contempt.

"ALL RIGHT, OLD MAN, DOC'LL CATCH YE."

"Waitin' for simple Jerry?" he said. "You was"—he hesitated and did not say "afeared." "You was commonsensed not to risk it. Give me your pole, Pierre." There seemed to be something in his shining face which separated him from them. George Hammond felt it, and began awkwardly: "It ain't in man's power to save the kid. Ye don't sense it, Jerry. We can't let ye go—tomorry ye'll see—" George retreated, Jerry confronting him, calm and white.

"I am my own man," he replied. "Give me the pole." With the steel-pointed driver in his hand he waited an instant, summoning all his powers of mind and body. He looked smilingly at his silenced companions, easily master of himself and them. Running lightly forward, he drove the pole into a fallen trunk and vaulted far out on the ice. The men on the bank watched breathlessly.

"He'll do it"—"Look at that!" "The wind"—"He can't move! He's hurt! He can't move!"

But he was not hurt. A new sound, a deep, ominous roar, had made him pause. He understood it well. The jam was breaking, and in a few hundred seconds the wreck would be upon him. He remembered how fearful the tumult was, and how Jake Leary had lost his footing the previous spring when the logs went out. When Jake's foot slipped he was a doomed man; there was yet time for Jerry to turn and run for life. But the wind swept down and buffeted him, and its rage entered his heart.

The huge mass of timber and ice quaked and groaned and the noise of the surging water was louder. Jerry glanced again at the pitiful figure on the rock, and sprang toward it, running as the watchers had never seen a man run before. He shouted to Jim to stand ready; and Jim, though he could not hear, understood. With his friend near he began to recover from his numbing terror. As the jam moved with its first long, grinding swell, Jerry reached him.

"Come on! That's the way. Here ye be, old fellow. Don't let go. Ef you do—ef you do—"

Now there was a sharp, splitting, tearing sound above the dull roar, which told Jerry that the jam was breaking from top to bottom. He leaped faster, his face fiercer and very white. Jim could feel the iron frame gather itself convulsively. Only a few hundred feet now, and they would be safe. Ah! That was nobly done. The men cheered wildly. Jerry ran like a deer before the dogs, but the water pursued even more swiftly. There was a fearful crash and a cry from Jim. He saw a black wall of water and jagged logs hidden in foam rolling down upon them. The ice beneath Jerry's feet split to right and left; it was moving, and he stumbled twice. But with three jumps he could reach the shore. One brave leap, another, and the ice cleared. Now a wide lane of water swirled between him and safety. George and the doctor were standing waist deep in the stream to help him, and he gathered his strength for that last leap. The gap widened and he saw it could not be done with Jim as a handicap. He must toss the boy over first. Jerry's foothold was now only a pitching block of ice, caught on a temporary obstruction. As they balanced, Jim clung to his friend's neck, and the big fellow smiled at him with his old, sweet kindliness, though to-day his eyes were brilliant and his face was strong.

"All right, old man," he said. "Let go and Doc'll catch ye. Don't be scart."

The wind, water and logs screamed and crashed all about them.

"Now!" cried Jerry, and threw Jim straight into Dr. Mason's arms. They saw him stagger in the attempt to recover his footing. Again and again he clinched his hands and crouched. But he could not jump. The ice, oscillating from his motion as he threw Jim, sagged and careened beneath him, until the steady feet failed and he fell face downward. The men groaned aloud; a few turned away, and others ran into the water to help him. He had been swept beyond human aid, however, and they could only watch him die.

They saw him whirled into the water, as the block of ice broke into a thousand fragments; once he faced them and waved his hand. In his face was the light they had seen as he strode along the path ten minutes earlier. His arm sank, and he was carried into a clear place. All about, ice and logs plunged and reared through the foam, but some whim of wind or current held them from the drowning man. The river he loved was kind. For an instant they saw his blond head above the water and his hair gently lifted by the stream. Then he sank quietly, and the logs hurled themselves over the spot where he had been.

When Dr. Mason tells this story he says that, as he views it, Jerry was his "own man" when he died.

CHARLOTTE KIMBALL.

IT AGREED WITH HIM.

A Parliamentary Candidate's Growth While Speaking.

Mr. C. W. Radcliffe Cooke, a member of the British parliament, tells of an experience that was more amusing in the telling than in the experiencing. He was to speak at an evening meeting in a country town, and was first to dine with two elderly ladies of the place. Not until he was dressed for dinner did he discover that his servant had neglected to pack his waistcoat.

There was no gentleman in the household of whom he could borrow, but the butler, a stout man, had a spare waistcoat, which, though not a match for the rest of the clothing, was near enough to pass muster. But alas! the waistcoat was a mile too big.

He found a sympathetic housemaid who took up a large pleat at the back of the waistcoat, and fastened it securely with pins. Dinner over, the party drove to the meeting, where the parliamentary candidate was to make the principal speech. The candidate had been speaking ten minutes, and had warmed to his work, when suddenly he felt a pin give way, and then another and another. Slowly the borrowed garment expanded, until its wearer appeared in all the capacious bulk of the true owner.

Luckily the main body of the audience did not perceive the change, but a distressing titter was heard among the ladies in front. The best comment came from a gentleman who greeted the speaker after the meeting.

"Public speaking evidently agrees with you, sir," he said, in a complimentary tone, "for when you sat down you were twice the man you were when you rose."—English Illustrated Magazine.

EASTER SERMON.

Dr. Talmage Draws a Lesson for People to Ponder Over.

Christ Mistaken for a Gardener—Mary Stood Beside the Sarcophagus and Wept—The Lord Appeared Not She Knew Him Not in His Lowly Garb.

The text of Dr. Talmage's Easter sermon was John xx., 15: "She supposed him to be a gardener."

Here are Mary Magdalen and Christ, just after his resurrection. For 4,000 years a grim and ghastly tyrant had been killing people and dragging them into his cold palace. He had a passion for human skulls. For 40 centuries he had been unhindered in his work. In that cold palace there were shelves of skulls, and pillars of skulls, and altars of skulls, and even the chalices at the table were made of bleached skulls. To the skeleton of Abel he added the skeleton of all the ages, and no one had disputed his right until one Good Friday, about 1 1897 years ago, as near as I can calculate it, a mighty stranger came to the door of that awful palace, rolled back the door, and went in, and seizing the tyrant threw him to the pavement and put upon the tyrant's neck the heel of triumph.

Then the mighty stranger, exploring all the ghastly furniture of the place, and walking through the labyrinths, and opening the dark cellars of mystery, and tarrying under a roof the ribs of which were made of human bones—tarrying for two nights and a day, the nights very dark and the day very dismal, he seized the two chief pillars of that awful palace and rocked them until it began to fall, and then laying hold of the ponderous front gate, hoisted it from its hinges, and marched forth crying, "I am the Resurrection!" That event we celebrate this Easter morn. Handelian and Beethovean miracles of sound added to this floral decoration which has set the place ablaze.

There are three or four things which the world and the church have not noticed in regard to the resurrection of Christ. First, our Lord in gardener's attire. Mary Magdalen, grief-struck, stands by the rifled sarcophagus of Christ, and turns around, hoping she can find the track of the sacrilegious resurrectionist who has despoiled the grave, and she finds some one in working apparel come forth as if to water the flowers, or uproot the weeds from the garden, or set to reclimbing the fallen vine—some one in working apparel, his garments perhaps having the sign of the dust and the dirt of the occupation.

Mary Magdalen, on her face the rain of a fresh shower of weeping, turns to this workman, and charges him with the desecration of the tomb, when lo! the stranger responds, flinging his whole soul into one word which trembles with all the sweetest rythm of earth and Heaven, saying, "Mary!" In that peculiarity of accentuation all the incognito fell off, and she found that instead of talking with an humble gardener of Asia Minor, she was talking with Him who owns all the hanging gardens of Heaven. Constellations the clusters forget-me-nots, the sunflower the chief of all, the morning sky and midnight aurora, flaring terraces of beauty, blazing like a summer wall with coronation roses and giants of battle. Blessed and glorious mistake of Mary Magdalen. "She supposing him to be the gardner." What does that mean? It means that we have an everyday Christ for everyday work and everyday apparel. Not on a Sabbath morning in our most seemly apparel are we more attractive to Christ than we are in our everyday work dress managing our merchandise, smiting our anvil, plowing our field, tending the flying shuttles, mending the garments for our household, providing food for our families, or toiling with weary pen, or weary pencil, or weary chisel. A working day Christ in working day apparel for us in our everyday toil. Put it into the highest strain of this Easter anthem. "Supposing him to be the gardener."

If Christ had appeared at daybreak with a crown upon his head, that would have seemed to suggest especial sympathy for monarchs; if Christ had appeared in robes of gold and with robe bediamonded, that would have seemed to be especial sympathy for the affluent; if Christ had appeared with soldier's sash and sword dangling at his side, that would have seemed to imply especial sympathy for warriors; but when I find Christ in gardener's habit, with perhaps the flakes of earth and of the upturned sod upon his garments, then I spell it out that he has hearty and pathetic understanding with everyday work, and everyday anxiety, and everyday fatigue.

Roll it down in the forts all through these aisles. A working-day Christ in working-day apparel. Tell it in the darkest corridor of the mountain to the poor miner. Tell it to the factory maid in most unventilated establishment at Lowell or Lancaster. Tell it to the clearer or roughest new ground in the western wilderness. Tell it to the sewing woman, a stitch in the side for every stitch in the garment, some of the cruel employers having no right to think that they will get through the door of Heaven any more than they could through the eye of a broken needle which had just dropped on the floor from the pricked fingers of the consumptive sewing girl. Away with your talk about hypnotic union, and soteriology of the Council of Trent, and the metaphysics of religion which would freeze practical Christianity out of the world; but pass along this gardener's coat to all nations that they may touch of the hem of it and feel the thrill of the Christly brotherhood. Not supposing the man to be Cesar, not supposing him to be socrates, but "supposing him to be the gardener."

Oh, that is what helped Joseph Wedgewood, toiling amid the heat and the dust of the potteries, until he could make for Queen Charlotte the first royal table service of English manufacture. That was what helped James Watt, scoffed at and caricatured, until he could put on wheels the thunderbolt of power which roars by day and by night in every furnace of the locomotive engines of America. That is what helped Hugh Millar, toiling amid the quarries of Cromarty, until every rock became to him a volume of the world's biography, and he found the footsteps of the Creator in the old red sandstone. Oh, the world wants a Christ for the office, a Christ for the kitchen, a Christ for the banking house, a Christ for the garden while spading and planting and irrigating the territory. Oh, of course we want to see Christ at last in royal robe and bediamonded, a celestial equestrian mounting the white horse, but from this Easter of 1897 to our last Easter on earth we most need to see Christ as Mary Magdalen saw him at the daybreak, "supposing Him to be gardener."

Another thing which the church and the world have not noticed in regard to the resurrection of Christ is that He made His first post-mortem appearance to one who had been the seven-deviled Mary Magdalen. One would have supposed He would have made His first posthumous appearance to a woman who had always been illustrious for goodness. There are saintly women who have always been saintly, saintly in girlhood, saintly in infancy, always saintly. In nearly all our families there have been saintly aunts. In my family circle it was saintly Aunt Phoebe; in yours saintly Aunt Martha or saintly Aunt Ruth. One always saintly. But not so was the one spoken of in the text.

While you are not to confound her with the repentant courtesan who had made her [illegible] work of a towel at Christ's foot-washing, you are not to forget that she was exorcised of seven devils. What a capital of demonology she must have been. What a chorus of all diabolism. Seven devils—two for the eyes, and two for the hands, and two for the feet, and one for the tongue. Seven devils. Yet all these are extirpated, and now she is as good as once she was bad, and Christ honors her with the first posthumous appearance. What does that mean?

Why, it means for worst sinner greater grace; it means those lowest down shall come, perhaps, highest up it means that the clock that strikes 12 at midnight may strike 12 at midnoon; it means that the grace of God is seven times stronger than sin. Mary Magdalen the seven deviled became Mary Magdalen the seven angeled. It means that when the lord meets us at last He will not thrown up to us what we have been. All He said to her was "Mary!" Many people having met her under such circumstances would have said, "Let me see, how many devils did you have? one, two, three, four, five, six, seven. What a terrible piece you were when I first met you." The most of the Christian women in our day would have nothing to do with Mary Magdalen even after her conversion lest somehow they be compromised. The only thing I have to say against women is that they have not enough mercy for Mary Magdalen. Christ put all pathos, and all reminiscence, and all anticipation, and all pardon, and all comfort, and all Heaven into one word of four letters, "Mary!" Mark you, Christ did not appear to some Bible Elizath, or Bible Hannah, or Bible Esther, or Bible Deborah, or Bible Vashti, but to Mary; not to a Mary against whom nothing was said, not to Mary the mother of Jesus, not to Mary the mother of James, not to Mary the mother of Lazarus, but to a seven deviled Mary.

There is a man seven-deviled—devil of avarice, devil of pride, devil of hate, devil of indolence, devil of falsehood, devil of strong drink, devil of impurity. God can take them all away, seven or seventy. I rode over the new cantilever bridge that spans Niagara—a bridge 900 feet long, 850 feet of chasm from bluff to bluff. I passed over it without any anxiety. Why? Because 32 locomotives and 22 cars laden with gravel had tested the bridge, thousands of people standing on the Canadian side, thousands standing on the American side to applaud the achievement. And however long the train of our immortal interests may be, we are to remember that God's bridge of mercy spanning the chasm of sin has been fully tested by the awful tonnage of all the pardoned sin of all the ages, church militant standing on one bank, church triumphant standing on the other bank. Oh, it was to the seven-deviled Mary that Christ made his first post-mortem appearance.

There is another thing that the world and the church have not observed in regard to this resurrection, and that is, it was the morning twilight.

If the chronometer had been invented and Mary had as good a watch as some of the Marys of our time have, she would have found it was about 5:30 a. m. Matthew says it was in the dawn; Mark says it was at the sunrising; Luke says it was very early in the morning; John says it was while it was yet dark. In other words, it was twilight. That was the o'clock at which Mary Magdalen mistook Christ for the gardener. What does that mean? It means that there are shadows over the grave unlifted, shadows of mystery that are hovering. Mary stooped down and tried to look to the other end of the crypt. She gave hysteric outcry. She could not see to the other end of the crypt. Neither can you see to the other end of the grave of your dead. Neither can we see to the other end of our own grave. Oh, if there were shadows over the family plot belonging to Joseph of Arimathea, is it strange that there should be some shadows over our family lot? Easter dawn, not Easter noon.

Shadow of unanswered question! Why were they taken away from us? Why were they ever given to us if they were to be taken so soon? Why were they taken so suddenly? Why could they not they have uttered some farewell words? Why? A short question, but a whole crucifixion of agony in it! Why? Shadow on the graves of good men and women who seemed to die before their work was done. Shadow on all the graves of children because we ask ourselves why so beautiful a craft launched at all if it was to be wrecked one mile outside of the harbor? But what did Mary Magdalen have to do in order to get more light on that grave? She had only to wait. After a while the Easter sun rolled up, and the whole place was flooded with light. What have you and I to do in order to get more light on our own graves and light upon the graves of our dear loved ones? Only to wait.

Charles V. of Spain, with his servants and torches, went down into the vault of the necropolis where his ancestors were buried, and went deeper, further on until he came to a cross around which were arranged the caskets of his ancestors. He also found a casket containing the body of one of his own family. He had that casket opened, and there by embalmer's art he found that the body was as perfect as 18 years before, when it was entombed. But under the exploration his body and mind perished. Oh, my friends, do not let us morbidly struggle with the shadows of the sepulcher. What are we to do? Wait. It is not the evening twilight that gets darker and darker, It is the morning twilight that gets brighter and brighter into the perfect day. I preach it to-day. Sunrise over Pere le Chaise, sunrise over Greyfriars churchyard, sunrise over Greenwood, over Woodlawn, over Laurel Hill, over Mt. Auburn, over Congressional burying ground, sunrise over every country graveyard, sunrise over the catacombs, sunrise over the sarcophagi where the ships lie buried. Half-past 5 o'clock among the tombs now, but soon to be the noonday of explanation and beatitude. It was in the morning twilight that Mary Magdalen mistook Christ for a gardener.

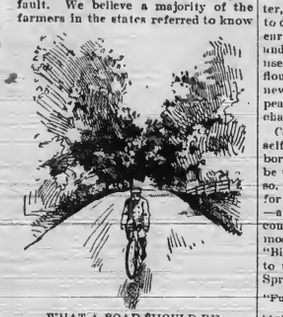
Another thing the world and the church have not observed: that is, Christ's pathetic credentials. How do you know it was not a gardener? His garments said he was a gardener? The flakes of the upturned earth scattered upon His garments said He was a gardener. How do you know He was not a gardener? Ah! Before Easter had gone by He gave to some of His disciples His three credentials. He showed them His hands and His side. Three paragraphs written in rigid or depressed letters. A scar in the right palm, a scar in the left palm, a scar amid the ribs—scars, scars. That is the way they knew Him. That is the way you and I will know Him.

Aye, am I saying this morning too much when I say that will be one of the ways in which you and I will know each other by the scars of earth, scars of accident, scars of sickness, scars of persecution, scars of hard work, scars of battle, scars of old age? When I see Christ's resurrected body having scars it makes me think that our remodeled and resurrected bodies will have scars. Why, before we get out of this world some of us will be covered with scars all over. Heaven will not be a bay into which float summer yachts after a pleasuring with gay bunting and with embroidered sails as fair as when they were first unfurled. Heaven will be more like a navy yard where men-of-war come in from Trafalgar and Lepanto, men-of-war with masts twisted by a cyclone, men-of-war struck on all sides by 74 pounders, men-of-war with decks scorched of the shell. Old Constitutions, old Constellations, floating in discharged from service to rest forever. In the resurrection Christ credentialed by scars. You and I will be credentialed and will recognize each other by scars. Do you think them now a badge of endurance? I tell you the glorious thought this morning, they are going to be the means of Heavenly recognition.

There is one more thing that the world and the church have not noticed in this resurrection of Christ, and that is that Christ from Friday to Sabbath was lifeless in a hot climate where sanitary prudence demanded that burial take place the same day as death, and when there was no ice to retard dissolution. Yet, after three days He comes up so healthful, so robust and so rubicond Mary Magdalen takes Him for a gardener. Not supposing Him to be an invalid from a hospital, not supposing Him to be a corpse from the tomb, but supposing Him to be the gardener. Healthful by the breath of the upturned sod, and by a perpetual life in the sunshine.

After Christ's interment every cellular tissue broke down, and nerve, and artery, and brain were a physiological wreck, and yet He comes up swarthy, ruddy and well. What do you say after such mortuary silence such radiant appearance, that settles it that whatever should become of the bodies of our Christian dead, they are going to come up, the nerves restrung, the optic nerve reillumined, the ear drum a-vibrate, the whole body lifted up, without its weaknesses and worldly uses for which there is no resurrection. Come, is it not almost time for us to go out to meet our reanimated dead? Can you not hear the lifting of the rusted latch?

Oh, the glorious thought, the glorious consolation of this subject when I find Christ coming up without any of the lacerations, for you must remember He was lacerated and wounded fearfully in the crucifixion—coming up without one. What does that make me think? That the grave will get nothing of us except our wounds and imperfections. Christ went into the grave exhausted and bloodless. All the currents of His life had poured out from His wounds. He had lived a life of trouble, sorrow and privation, and then He died a lingering death. His entire body hung on four spikes. No invalid of 20 years' standing ever went into the grave so white and ghastly and broken down as Christ, and yet here He comes up so rubicund and robust she supposed Him to be the gardener.



Boxing children's ears is said to be the cause of half the deafness at the present time.

AGRICULTURAL HINTS

THE ROAD QUESTION.

How Progressive Farmers Should View This Important Problem.

It is only during seasons of abnormal rainfall that the average farmer feels disposed to manifest a more than lukewarm interest in the subject of road improvement. In most sections the settling of the roads late in the spring settles, for the time being, the general agitation of this question. That it will bob up again with renewed emphasis is just as certain as that the roads will "break up" in the fall, for neglect of highways at any time only intensifies their bad conditions. Eternal vigilance and eternal agitation seems to be the price of good roads in this country. It would seem that the most conservative man would need only to open his eyes to the miserable condition of country roads in many of the states during a great part of the year, and consider carefully the annual cost of maintaining them in such condition, to realize that road-making methods, and the system under which they are applied, are seriously at fault. We believe a majority of the farmers in the states referred to know the present system to be wrong; otherwise they would show their faith by their works; they would no longer feel justified in performing $3 worth of labor on the farm one day, and $1.50 worth on the road the next.

We have long stood with those who think the road tax should be collected in money, and have paid cash for several years, but under the present system of road management it cannot always be applied to the best advantage.

In some sections even where great claims were made for the "naturally good" condition of the roads, the bountiful crops sometimes lie unmoved through a period of high prices, simply because the naturally bad condition of the roads at certain seasons of the year, forbids the hauling of loads. Farmers study and plan, and work, to increase production; they study the law of supply and demand; they watch the markets that they may be enabled to sell their produce when prices are best; in short, they, many of them, do their part as well, as far as their own private business is concerned. On the other hand, the railroads and elevators are ever ready to do their part, as far as their private business of handling the farmers' produce is concerned. Under these conditions what is to hinder the intelligent farmer from always pushing his produce into market at such time as his best judgment dictates? Simply the weakness of the connecting link—the highway—the one thing over which the people have full control. There are times when the farm is practically much farther from the nearest village than the village is from the great mart to which it is tributary, and until the weak link is made strong, farming will not be as generally profitable as it otherwise would be.—The Epitomist.

DAIRY SUGGESTIONS.

Milk of different temperatures should never be mixed.

With cows long in milk the butter will come slowly.

The only way to keep cows is to keep them perfectly clean.

The oleo law has been sustained in West Virginia by the supreme court of that state. The law requires that oleo be colored pink, and for a violation of it by selling it in the guise of butter a fine of $20 and costs was imposed. An appeal affirmed the decision.

At ten cents a bushel, potatoes do not pay the grower, but they will pay the dairyman who purchases them at that price to feed his milch cows. Farmers who are hauling potatoes out to the field to be used as fertilizers will find it will pay better to first put them through live stock.

Water cools the milk much more rapidly, says a writer, than air will do, and on this account the water setting must be used in the winter as well as the summer. It would be a simple matter to set the water to be used out of doors to get cold before putting it in the tank.

MUD IS EXPENSIVE.

It Entails an Annual Loss Estimated at $250,000,000.

It is an inside figure to put the amount this country annually contributes to the mud fiend at $250,000,000, of which amount Iowa pays at least $8,000,000. A total loss. Mud does not give back anything to anybody. There is nothing reciprocal about it. It is a loss complete, absolute and irrecoverable even in part. A man loses $1,000 by his house being destroyed by fire, but somebody is benefited by that loss. In rebuilding, the sawmill, the sash and door manufacturer, the carpenter, the painter and the plumber find a market for material and labor. If a bank discounts a note which proves worthless, the money, while a loss to the bank, goes about on its mission and is not a loss without somebody's gain. Mud knows neither friend nor foe. In the natural organization of matter mud may have a place, but that place is not in the road.—Judge Thayer, Clinton, Ia.

FARMERS AND BIRDS.

Why the Feathered Visitors Should Be Carefully Protected.

The farmer who pretends to "keep up with the times" provides himself with all the modern appliances which are adapted to his business.

If part of the land is marsh, he will underlay it with the most approved system of drainage. If it has not been properly cultivated, he buys the best subsoil plows in order that the riches which lie just below the surface may be brought to light. The fertilizers which he thinks best adapted to the crop which he wishes to cultivate are procured and applied with a lavish hand; knowing as he does that this expenditure will repay him, perhaps, a hundred fold. The enterprising farmer calls to his aid not only all the improved tools and improvements for cultivation, irrigation and protection, but invokes also all the forces of nature, which can in any way assist him. He lifts the subsoil and invites the air to help him pulverize it; he erects a windmill and asks the wind to aid in raising the water with which to irrigate; he digs ditches, and calls upon the water, which the wind power has lifted, to do its part in nourishing the parched earth. Thus his vegetables, his grain and his grasses, through an intelligent use of nature's forces, spring up and flourish for a time, only to meet new dangers. Now the insects appear upon the scene and the aspect changes.

Can it be that the farmer has put himself to all this great expenditure of labor, tools, material, and time, only to be thwarted at last? It certainly looks so. But nature, which was responsible for the danger, now provides the remedy—and that remedy is the birds, which come in regular order each spring, almost as regular as the seasons. In the "Bigelow Papers" this reference is made to the blackbirds in "A New England Spring:"

"Fust come the blackbirds clatterin' in tall trees,
An' settlin' things in windy congresses—
Queer politicians, though, for I'll be skinned,
Ef all on 'em don't head against the wind."

Then the blackbirds are soon followed by others, and when the proper time comes each family does its full duty, and the insects are obliged to succumb. It is stated by competent authority that the red-winged blackbirds destroyed in a single locality more than 16,000,000,000 insects during one season. The blackbird does not rival Patti as a singer, but it does attend strictly to business; and its business (like that of an entomologist) is bugs. But long before this, other birds have been working for the farmer, searching all the hidden places, under the bark of trees, about old stumps, amidst the moss and dead leaves, and in other places which the farmer never dreams of, for the concealed "larvae" where the embryo insects are thus destroyed by the million. One of the most industrious of these early workers is the "Brown Creeper," which searches every tree, as if it had a special contract to secure a certain number of specimens of "larvae" every week. Thus does this bird (like may others) "take time by the forelock" and destroy millions of insects before they have a chance to emerge from this first stage of their existence.

But we must not forget our old friend the robin, of which it is said:

"By some name or other,
All men who know him, call him brother."

The robin is more than a brother to the farmer, for, by his activity in devouring insects, he sometimes benefits the farmer more than could a real brother.

Have the farmers any adequate idea of the value of the services rendered them by the birds? The best authority states that the birds effect saving to the country each year of not less than $100,000,000. The farmer should be the bird's best friend and stanch defender, for it is the birds alone which stand between the farmer and the loss of his crops. "But," argues some picayune tiller of the soil, "the birds eat my cherries, and the crows pull up my corn, and I'm bound to kill 'em."

The Smithsonian Institution long ago sent out a warning to the farmers of the country regarding the impending extinction of the birds, and the direful results which are sure to follow. When the last bird yields its life to the pot hunter, or is offered up to satisfy the demands of that tyrant, Dame Fashion, then, and only then, will some farmers see where they have erred—but it will be too late. The ruin will have been wrought, the damage done.

The farmer should see to it that the boys and girls of his neighborhood are taught that the killing of birds, or robbery of their nests, is a crime; not only an injury to their neighbors, but an actual harm to themselves—for beyond all question the destruction of the birds will cause the boys and girls of the present day to weep bitter tears of repentance later in life, when they realize the harm which has been done, and they will reap the penalty. Under the old English law (and ours as well) "a man's house is his castle," and the man has a right to defend his home—even to the extent of killing the man who tries to enter without permission. Will anyone attempt to say that a bird who builds a nest, in which it lays its eggs and rears its young, has no right to protection? It has the right of ownership, given by a power higher than the authority which granted the titles to the land on which we live; a title from its Creator, and yours.

"Why should I deprive my neighbor
Of his goods against his will?
Hands were made for honest labor,
Not to plunder nor to steal."

He who robs a bird's nest not only wrongs the bird, but he deprives his neighbor of the protection which nature has provided. He who does something, be it ever so little, to protect the birds, does something not only for himself and for his neighbor, but for posterity as well.

H. H. WATERS.

THE GLORY OF GREECE.

Soul Stirring Memories of the Former Conquests.

With what burning words did Byron at the beginning of this century call upon Greece to cast off the shackles with which the Turk had bound her and resume once more her rightful place among the nations of the earth. They were heeded. With the soul-stirring memories of Marathon and Thermopylae, of Salamis, Platea and Arbela in mind, the Greeks commanded by Marco Bozzaris and Lord Byron himself, succeeded in overwhelming the Turks and achieving a hard-earned independence.

It is a well-defined axiom that in war the morale engendered by the justness of the principle contended for frequently nullifies the preponderating forces of an adversary. Nowhere is this more evident than in the history of the Greeks themselves. When in the fifth century, B. C., the hordes of Darius and Xerxes successively burst upon southeastern Europe it was not alone the existence of Greece that was threatened, but the whole progress of human civilization as well. This truth is pertinently expressed by Sir Edward Creasy, who says that had the battle of Marathon resulted differently the Persian would be the prevailing language of England to-day. Of course, the Greeks could not foresee the vast consequences which at that time depended upon their heroism, but they knew that they were fighting for their liberties, and that was enough. At Marathon over 100,000 Persians were put to flight by 11,000 men. At the naval battle of Salamis the Greek fleet, although outnumbered seven to one, achieved an overwhelming victory, and at Thermopylae 300 Spartans and 700 Thespians, under Leonidas, held the pass for three days against the assaults of 200,000 Persians.

Napoleon, "the coarse-minded sabreur," as the perfidious Talleyrand termed him, once remarked that God was always on the side of the strongest artillery, but he lived to realize his mistake. Had any such doctrine as that been universally believed the roundheads of Cromwell, the minute men of Lexington and Concord, and the patriots of Maceo and Gomez would never have been heard of, and this it is that, with her glorious past in mind, encourages Greece to hope for victory in her struggle with Turkey.—Syracuse Standard.

THE TOWNS OF CRETE.

Now Notable on Account of War Alone.

A writer in the St. Petersburg Viedomosti gives the following account of the towns of Crete: "Candia, Retimo, Canea, are of the 'Crete of the hundred towns' the only three cities existing, and in using the word city every attenuation must be understood. Candia, situated at the mouth of a little river, the Geofice, was built in the ninth century by the Saracens on the site of Heraklion, one of the ports of Crossus. The distance between Crossus and Candia is under an hour's walking, and in antiquity the two places were connected by walls, which recalled those between Piraeus and Athens. In the time of Venetian sovereignty Candia enjoyed great prosperity. To-day its aspect is essentially Turkish on account of its houses, its mosques, its minarets and its bazars, in which are exposed all the products of the east. It is surrounded by a bastioned wall, almost triangular in shape. Within there is another wall separating the old town from the new, the latter being nearer the river. The fortifications date from the Venetians, but war and earthquakes have left little or nothing of the city's ancient splendor. Tournefort has called it only the carcass of a city. Its chief monuments are the remains of the church of St. Francis and the old Latin cathedral to St. Titus. Its population is between 13,000 and 14,000, mostly Mussulmans. The port is protected by two moles, but the sand has been allowed to silt up so much that only very small vessels can enter. Its chief trade is with Trieste, which takes from it raisins and oil in return for soap. Canea comes next to Candia, with a population of 11,000, equally divided between Christians and Mohammedans. Canea is the ancient Cydonia. The modern town dates from 1252, and is the principal port of the island, the commercial capital, and the residence of the foreign consuls. Not far from Canea is the admirable anchorage of Suda bay. Retimo, the third town, is 35 miles southwest of Candia. Its population is not far above 3,000."—N. Y. Post.

Fresh and Salt Water.

A striking illustration of the different effect of fresh and salt water on the hulls of ships was recently afforded by the steamers which ply on Loch Lomond when undergoing their annual overhaul. The woodwork of the vessels, as usual, showed signs of active deterioration, but so well does the fresh water of the loch preserve both iron hulls and boilers from corrosion and pitting that the maker's name upon the material of one of the vessels built 30 years ago was found intact and perfectly clean and sharp. The inside of the boilers was also found extremely free from the deleterious coating of any kind. The effect of the sea water upon iron and steel is exactly the reverse of this, but the saline properties of the ocean tend to improve woodwork.—Chicago Tribune.

A Historic Forest.

When the duke of Monmouth was executed, in the reign of James II., for treason, the duchess ordered every oak in the park to be cut on the fateful morning. The new growth, belonging to Lord Ebury, is one of the finest forests in Britain.—San Francisco Chronicle.

A DRESSMAKER'S TROUBLES.

Eyes Strained, Nervous System Shattered and Brain Affected, the Patient Then Becomes a Wreck.

From the Leader, Cleveland, Ohio.

"A dressmaker, you know, is by the very nature of her work compelled to overtax herself in many ways. This is especially true of the eyes and nerves, and therefore the brain and almost every other organ of the body. Very often a dressmaker must work by lamp or gaslight, and thus an undue strain is imposed on her optic nerves. The result of this over-tension with me was a constant and severe headache, lassitude, loss of appetite, and loss of sleep. Being in that condition, my work was naturally performed in a perfunctory manner, and for awhile I was compelled to rest entirely. While bending over my machine or putting the finishing touches to a new garment, my head would ache so violently that I could scarcely see. Often I went home and to bed supperless, because I had no appetite for food. And even then I was unable to sleep, and tossed about in mental and physical misery and distress." So spoke Miss Margaret Cain, of No. 110 Bazetta St., Cleveland, Ohio.

"Did I try any remedy? I tried fifty of them and they proved worthless. Then, on the recommendation of a friend who said she used them in her family and would use nothing else, I bought a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People at Jno. Asplins' drug store on Prospect Street, corner of Erie. At the time I purchased the pills I was suffering keenly from headache and a general worn out feeling. But I quickly began to recover my former spirits and vigor. The pills worked like a charm, and not only drove away the pain in my head and eyes, and that tired feeling—so well-known that it needs no description—but, restored my appetite. The medicine did even more than that. It made me strong and I began to increase in weight after buying the second box. My appetite was more vigorous than it ever was before in my life, and I was stronger and fleshier. Before the second box of pills was exhausted I had to stop taking them because I was increasing so rapidly in size and weight.

"It is scarcely necessary for me to say that the pills cured me of my headache and all the accompanying ailments. They did that and built up my system wonderfully. I now keep a box of the pills in my house all the time, and whenever I am troubled with a headache or am feeling indisposed in any other way, I simply take a pill and drive the ache, pain or weariness away. I have recommended the pills to others who follow the same occupation that I do, and they have profited by the suggestion, and are as sincere in their praise of the medicine as I am."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females, such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

DEMAND FOR FLINTLOCKS.

They Are Made to Delight African and Other Savages.

Strange as it may appear, flintlock muskets are not merely a record of bygone ages, says the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. In 1895 no fewer than 1,820,000 gunflints were produced at the Lingheath mines, Brandon, Suffolk, England. These flints are chiefly to delight African and other savages, who, having been so long used to flintlocks, are reluctant to give them up.

The method of manufacturing these gun flints is very interesting. In the operation of "flanking" the worker will take a "quarter" in his left hand and placing it on his knee, around which a protecting band of leather has been strapped, gently tap the flint with a hammer, giving it each time a well-directed blow. At every tap a flake six inches long and one inch wide falls into his hand and, if a good one, is deposited in a pail by his side, all bad ones being discarded. The knappers work these flints with hammers with long, thin heads, often made of old files, transversely striking the strip of flint on an iron fixed in their benches.

Prizes Sold at Auction.

The literature of auctioneering is full of cleverness and verbal oddities, but Carlow, England, turns up with a line of humor which is all the more effective because it is so unconscious. An advertisement recently printed there stated that "the old gaol" would be offered in one lot. It goes on to particularize with enthusiasm and dilate with zeal concerning a "female prison of 80 cells," "debtors' prison," "convict prison, containing 34 cells," "house of correction," "treadmill" and "three-throw pump." There is also "a very fine cut granite gate entrance," and "all cells are fitted with double wrought-iron doors, bolts and locks, and floored with granite or flags." In fact, "all modern improvements" would seem to be the only additional necessity in the way of enticing description.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

The The The Best. Rest. Test.

There are two kinds of sarsaparilla: The best—and the rest. The trouble is they look alike. And when the rest dress like the best who's to tell them apart? Well, "the tree is known by its fruit." That's an old test and a safe one. And the taller the tree the deeper the root. That's another test. What's the root,—the record of these sarsaparillas? The one with the deepest root is Ayer's. The one with the richest fruit; that, too, is Ayer's. Ayer's Sarsaparilla has a record of half a century of cures; a record of many medals and awards—culminating in the medal of the Chicago World's Fair, which, admitting Ayer's Sarsaparilla as the best—shut its doors against the rest. That was greater honor than the medal, to be the only Sarsaparilla admitted as an exhibit at the World's Fair. If you want to get the best sarsaparilla of your druggist, here's an infallible rule: Ask for the best and you'll get Ayer's. Ask for Ayer's and you'll get the best.

The entertainment at this place given by the "Ladies' Aid," of Bullittsburg, was a grand success. The society appointed Miss Zayda Gaines (a fine pianist and vocalist), Mrs. Viola Grant, Mr. and Mrs. Elbert Riley, a committee to arrauge a programme for the eveuiug. They displayed good judgment in their selections of music and plays. The audience showed its appreciation by loud applause. There were several choruses in which the participants were Messrs E. Riley, Courtney and Hubert Walton, Mrs. Viola Grant, Mrs. Riley Misses May Cropper, Grace Grant, Beulah Gaines, Annabel Riley, Zayda Gaines and Bernice Duncan.

A solo, "The Broken Pitcher," was sung by Miss Beulah Gaines in her usually wiusome manner.

A quartette, "Charming Fellow," an odd little piece, was sung by Misses Beulah Gaines, Lacy Kirtley, Grace Grant and Bessie Cropper. They were all dressed prettily and looked very saucy while disputing as to who should catch the tailor's dummy. They were encored.

Miss Zayda Gaines sang a solo, "He is a Prince." She has a very sweet contralto voice, and did extremely well on this occasion. She, also, was encored.

One of the sweetest and most impressive things of the evening was a duet, "Music," sung by Mrs. E. Riley and Miss Annabel Riley. Each of the ladies has a clear, sweet voice, and they sang sweetly and expressively.

Miss Grace Grant sang a solo. Nature has endowed her with a clear, silvery soprano voice that is always pleasing to the ear.

A comedietta, "The Mouse Trap," played by Miss Bernice Duncan and Mr. Elbert Riley, was very amusing. Miss Duncan, in her Empress robe of purple silk, trimmed in lace, looked very much like a bewitching young widow. Mr. Riley, handsomely attired looked every inch the suitor. Both played extremely well, and afforded the audience much amusement in their efforts to escape being torn to pieces by a mouse.

A drama, "The Dutchman's Ghost," was played by Messrs. E. Riley, Lyman Gaines, Walter Riley, Courtney Walton, Omer Henry, Misses Lacy Kirtley and Bernice Duncan. Mr. Riley, as Dutchman, provoked uproarious laughter in his efforts to secure a beautiful "frau." Miss Lacy Kirtley, as a scheming mother, trying to marry her daughter to the Dutchman, because he had money, was very ludicrous. Miss Duncan, as the daughter, in her efforts to escape the Dutchman, with his proposition of marriage, was excellent. Walter Riley, as fool for his wife, and Lyman Gaines, as rescuer of the young lady, Omer Henry as friend in need, were very excellent and funny. Mr. Courtney Walton looked very like a learned divine, while waiting to perform the marriage ceremony.

What it Will Do.

FALMOUTH, KY. July 7, 1896.
Dr. J. T. Boulton, Cincinnati, O.
Dear Sir—I was taken with a severe cough the first of May; for two weeks I could not lie on my left side nor breathe through my left lung. I also had hemorrhage and my friends said I had consumption. I began taking Boulton's Cough Remedy and began to improve with the first dose, and within three weeks was entirely well. I can not say enough in favor of Boulton's Cough Remedy. Respectfully,
Mrs. R. J. MARSHALL.

We received a change of quotations of prices for the advertisement of Mr. Ira Aylor, the Erlanger grocer, but owing to the late arrival at this office, and the illness of our "ad man," the change could not be made this week. Here are some of the prices he is now quoting: H. and E. Boston, Standard fine granulated sugar, 5 cents a pound; coffee, 12½ to 30 cents a pound; White Satin flour, $5 15 per barrel; fine evaporated peaches, 7½ cents a pound. And everything else in his immense, well assorted stock of groceries, is being sold at correspondingly low prices.

When Ed Hawes went home from up in town, last Friday evening about 8 o'clock, his attention was attracted by a brilliant light in the sky to the northwest. He describes it as having the appearance of a very bright star, and says he could see plainly that the object was moving. He could discover no outlines of an air ship, but is confident that the light he saw was being carried through space by artificial means. The same evening Joseph Kyle, an old citizen of Florence, says he got a good view of an air ship as it passed over that town. The old man's statement is ridiculed by many, but he is positive that he saw the strauge aerial boat.

The defeudaut had made numerous payments on the notes he executed for the stock of goods, and was sued for a balance of $400 with interest. In 1892 Curley discovered an error against him of $296, and later on he discovered, also, that he had not been credited by $100, which he had paid in checks. These errors were set up in Curley's answer, and the jury allowed him $196 of the $296 error and the credit of $100 claimed which with their interest brought Ebersole out in debt to Curley in the sum of $39 96

France has decided to build 45 new warships and 175 new torpedo boats. And so the peace of Europe goes marching on.

It is early in the season, but it has already been discovered that the '96 tack punctures the '97 bicycle tire with accuracy and dispatch.

Fifty-six Kansas counties bear the names of soldiers of the late war. Only two of them, however, bear the names of privates, Osborne and Rooks.

Twenty-four o'clock is midnight according to the new arrangement adopted in Belgium, except on the railroads, which will put the system in use in a short time.

Under an act passed by the last congress a person defacing a gold or silver coin of the United States is liable to a fine of $2,000 and five years in prison. This stops the bangle fad along with other forms of coin defacement.

A Chicago woman who claims that her husband has married nine other women without securing a divorce announces that she "intends to see that he gets justice." Perhaps she holds that his punishment already has been excessive.

An Amherst professor has been collecting data about Longfellow's place in popular estimation in Europe, and comes to the conclusion that the author of "Evangeline" is the universal poet, better known among foreigners than anyone except their own poets.

Scientists are endeavoring to prove that our atmosphere, by mingling with the water and rocks, is continually diminishing, and that the terrestrial globe will some day be as badly off as the moon. People who are constantly using so much atmosphere in unnecessary talking should take notice.

Things are older in Japan. There they have just celebrated the accession of Jimmu, the first emperor, who began to rule 23 years before Christ was born. The present emperor is deeply interested in the advancement of women and their work, and so he caused the celebration to assume the name and character of "The Feast of Women." Women are making themselves heard the world around.

Attorney-General Barber, of South Carolina, says that since the dispensary law went into effect there has been a decrease of at least 50 per cent. in the number of arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, as shown by the official reports. The dispensary, by abolishing the saloon, has entirely eliminated the social features of drinking. Half the men who drink do not desire the liquor, but do it as a matter of form.

Felix S. Rively, an electrical and mechanical engineer of Pittsburgh, has made public an invention which promises to revolutionize the methods now in use for street car and motocycle locomotion. Mr. Riveley's invention is an electric storage battery which will far surpass anything which is now in use. A severe test was made in Philadelphia which was perfectly satisfactory in every respect and demonstrated the advantages of the invention.

The much-worn joke about "newspaper English" does occasionally find justification, as in an item recently noticed in a Maine paper, which gravely announced that "David McPheters recently hauled a log with a 900-horse 25 feet long and 22 inches through at the top end," and proudly inquires: "Can any of the lumbermen beat this?" To which another exchange responds: "We should say not, nor do we believe many of the breeding establishments of this state have that sort of an animal."

Zachariah F. Lewis, of Ohio, evidently believes that anything worth doing at all is worth doing well. He carried that idea into certain forgery transactions with such effect that no less than 157 indictments have been found against him. Were he to be tried, convicted and sentenced on each one of these charges he would require the years of a Methusaleh to serve out his term. Zachariah's record is already sufficiently long, and it is just as well that he will be given no opportunity to add to it.

Lieut. Peary is now waiting for some person or persons to give him $150,000, when he will start out on another trip to the frozen north. Most of the money, Peary explains, will be needed to maintain a colony of Eskimos at a point farther north than any previous colony has ever located. As much as the world might enjoy seeing a colony of Eskimos live in this high latitude, would it not be better to devote the $150,000 to enabling some of our white people to live in some more equable climate? Nansen has settled all the essential facts about the north pole.

NO FUNDS

Available for the Payment of U. S. District Attorneys—Reinstatement of Persons in the Civil Service Separated Without Cause.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Attorney General McKenna sent a letter to the house Wednesday calling attention to the fact that there is now no fund available for the payment of salaries of United States district attorneys. He recommends that $75,000 be immediately appropriated for salaries and expenses of district attorneys, and $55,000 for the pay of regular assistant attorneys.

Representative Brownlow, of Tennessee, introduced a joint resolution Wednesday for the reinstatement in the civil service of persons separated therefrom without cause. It provides that upon requisition of a head of a department the civil service commission shall certify for reinstatement in a grade requiring no higher examination than the one in which he or she was formerly employed, any person who has, through no delinquency or misconduct, been separated from the classified service of the department.

The senate in executive session Wednesday confirmed Warren S. Reese, jr., of Alabama, to be United States attorney for the middle district of Alabama; Thos. B. Barnes, of Arkansas, to be United states attorney for the western district of Arkansas; Pliny L. Soper, of Indian territory, to be United States attorney for the northern district of Indian territory; L. O. C. Dana to be postmaster at Colorado Springs, Col.

Congressman Shattuc, of Ohio, Tuesday nominated D. J. Bundy, a colored lad of Cincinnati to a cadetship at Annapolis. He has been urged to withdraw the name but says he will stand by the appointment. There have been some murmurs of disapproval from the naval academy and threats of the students to resign. "The boy earned the appointment fairly," said Gen. Shattuc Wednesday. "There was a competitive examination and two colored lads, one of them Bundy, outstripped their caucasian competitors. One of them, however, proved to be over 20, and was, therefore, disbarred. I had told them the competition was open to every eligible boy in my district. Bundy, who won, is one of the handsomest boys I ever saw. Tuesday I sent his name to the secretary of the navy, and he will be appointed. I have received no communications from the students at Annapolis on the subject, but several congressmen have told me that it was an unwritten law not to allow a colored boy at Annapolis. They told me if I persisted it would break up the school, that other students would resign.

"Let them resign and be damned," I replied. "That boy earned his appointment fairly and I'm going to see that he goes to Annapolis and receive fair treatment if it is in my power to do so."

Gen. Shattuc says if the lad is willing to subject himself to the humiliation he will naturally encounter at Annapolis owing to his color, he (Shattuc) will see him through. Gen. Shattuc says he has been informed that no colored boy ever took a degree at the naval academy. Gen. Shattuc says he has 75,000 Negroes in his district.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Another of the agents of the late E. S. Dean brokerage concern, M. E. Massey, of Indianapolis, Ind., was barred from the mails by a fraud order Wednesday. Postmaster General Gary has issued lottery orders against the Inland Investment and Loan Co. of Chicago, and the One Hundred Dollar Investment Co. of Bradford, Pa.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—An unexpected tariff vote was precipitated in the senate Wednesday by Senator Morrill's motion to refer to the finance committee the Vest resolution, declaring the order of Secretary Gage as to the retroactive clause of the tariff illegal. A yea and nay vote was taken and Mr. Morrill's motion to refer prevailed—yeas, 24; nays, 23.

Another Message.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The president Wednesday sent a message to congress urging it to make suitable provision for adequate representation of the United States at the Paris exposition.

CHIEF ARTHUR

Thinks the Injunction Granted in the Consolidated Steel and Wire Strike Will Not Stand.

CLEVELAND, O., April 15.—Chief P. M. Arthur, of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, gave his opinion Wednesday on the injunction granted by the federal court in the Consolidated steel and wire strike. He said:

"It is necessary for the men to obey the court's injunction. The Brotherhood of Engineers has been all through the injunction mill and has a case now pending in the United States supreme court, which will determine the validity of that style of government. In my opinion the injunction has gone to lengths which are not permissible in a court of equity. No tribunal can stop men from holding conversation with another provided no intimidation is used. Every court, since this was a government, has recognized the right of any citizen to use the power of moral suasion. I am of the opinion that the injunction will not stand."

Riddled With Bullets.

EDWARDS, Miss., April 15.—Jesse Evans, a Negro, charged with accosting two little white girls, was riddled with bullets Wednesday night by a posse. The dead body now lies in the public street. The evidence against the Negro was conclusive.

The Execution of Mrs. Nobles.

ATLANTA, Ga., April 15.—A motion to set aside the judgment which fixes April 25 as the date for the execution of Mrs. Elizabeth Nobles for the murder of her husband, was made before Judge Smith, at Jeffersonville, Wednesday, and promptly overruled. Thursday the attorneys for Mrs. Nobles will tender a bill of exceptions to Judge Smith's decision, which will probably be refused. They will then file a petition to the state supreme court for a mandamus to direct Judge Smith to sign the bill of exceptions and to force him to produce the records of the case.

LIEUT. PERRY

Ordered From New York Navy Yard to Mare Island.

Representative Holman, of Indiana, Reported Better — Postmaster General Gary Corrects an Erroneous Impression—Other News of Interest.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—The navy department is in a ferment over an order to Lieut. Peary, the Arctic explorer, to leave the New York navy yard and take up his station at Mare Island, Cal. Just at this moment the officer's friends and persons taking an active interest in polar expeditions are engaged in raising a fund in New York to defray the expenses of another expedition to be conducted by Lieut. Peary into the far north.

It is asserted that the detachment of the officer from New York now will involve the enterprise in failure. The chief of the bureau of yards and docks is said to hold that the New York navy yard, which now employs four civil engineers, can get along with three, wherefore it is proposed to send Lieut. Peary to Mare Island. On the other side are the scientists urging Secretary Long to allow the officer to remain in New York for a time and then go on leave of absence while conducting the polar expedition.

Representative Holman, of Indiana, who has been ill with an attack of stomach trouble for the past ten days, was reported better Thursday night. He is still quite weak but is able to again take solid food. There is nothing alarming in his condition, though it will be some days before he can resume his duties at the capitol.

Much misunderstanding has risen over reports that have been quite generally circulated that the patronage privileges of senators have been extended and that their endorsement will be required on all post office applications. This is erroneous and Postmaster General Gary has had frequent occasion recently to correct this impression. The policy that has been practiced heretofore in the distribution of offices will be followed by this administration and the prerogatives enjoyed by representatives in the past will be continued. Congressmen will have the naming of post offices in their districts as a general rule, while senators can name their home offices and some large cities, on an amicable understanding between the senator and representative.

Judge James J. Storrow, a lawyer of Boston, dropped dead while at the Congressional library Thursday.

Judge Storrow took an important part in the proceedings incident to the arbitration treaty between the governments of Great Britain and Venezula for the settlement of the boundary line dispute. He was appointed special counsel by the Venezuelan government to represent it.

Revolution in Honduras.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—U. S. Consul Little telegraphs from Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras, that a revolution has broken out, and that the republic is now under martial law.

Storer Will Be Made Secretary.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—A prominent republican, who had a conversation Thursday with the president, says the latter told him he would in a few days send in the nomination of ex-Congressman Bellamy Storer, of Ohio, to be assistant secretary of state.

Found Dead in a Chapel.

BRUNSWICK, Ga., April 16.—The dead body of Charles Hoffmann, well known and respected citizen, was Thursday found in a chapel about four miles from this city. He had evidently gone into the building for the purpose of committing suicide, and before taking his life had knelt in prayer. When found he was in a kneeling position with his head resting on the bench. He had shot himself through the head. Reverses in business and inability to get work caused the act.

The Murderer of the Reynolds Family.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., April 16.—Martin Mowry was taken from Harrisville Thursday morning and lodged in the Cranston prison, where he will be held pending his trial next Wednesday on a charge of murder of the Reynolds family. All efforts to remove the bullet from Mowry's head have been unsuccessful. Upon his arrival at the prison an examination of the wound was made and another operation will be performed at the earliest possible moment.

The Strength Record Broken.

NEW HAVEN, Ct., April 16.—Clarence Sidney Verrill, son of Prof. Verrill, of Yale, has broken the strength record made by Charles Chadwick of Yale recently. Chadwick broke the total strength record of Lovering; the Harvard champion of 1623 kilos. Chadwick's total was 1638. Verrill's total is 1676. The strength tests were supervised by Dr. Jay W. Seaver, physical director of the Yale gymnasium. Verrill is a scientific school freshman, and weighs only 145 pounds.

A Priest Suffocated by Gas.

READING, Pa., April 16.—Father Philip Beresford, rector of St. Joseph's Catholic church, was found dead in bed in the parsonage adjoining the edifice Thursday morning. Death was due to suffocation from illuminating gas. His age was about 50 years. The gas was discovered pouring from a jet, partly turned on. The supposition is that death was the result of an accident.

Charged With Conspiracy.

EL PASO, Tex., April 16.—Magdalena Calderon, a war veteran and member of the Grand Army of the Republic, was arrested in Juarez, Mex., Thursday night, charged with being a conspirator against the Mexican government. Col. Buford has wired the state department at Washington, filing complaint and asking for demand for release.

Re-Nominated for Congress.

KEOKUK, Ia., April 16.—Maj. C. N. Clark, was re-nominated for congress by the First Missouri district republican convention at Memphis, Thursday.

AN AGREEMENT

Over the Wool Schedule Reached by the Western Senators—Several Important Amendments Will Be Insisted Upon.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Western senators after several conferences have reached an agreement to stand together for important changes in the wool schedule of the Dingley bill. The senators most prominently identified with the movement are Messrs Mantle, Carter, Shoup, Warren and Burrows. They have not only agreed upon a line of amendments, but have decided to insist on their inclusion in the bill. The meetings held have also been attended by many prominent wool growers.

The proposed amendments are directed mainly to closing the many loopholes for evasion and fraud which wool men allege abound in the Dingley bill, and were also found in the McKinley law. An amendment was agreed upon providing that an additional duty of 4 cents per pound shall be levied upon skirted wools as imported in 1890, and prior to that time. The principal change, however, to be proposed is upon wool and camel's hair of the third class. The Dingley bill proposes an ad valorum duty of 33 and 50 per cent. respectively upon wools of this class valued under and over 13 cents per pound. It is proposed to strike out of the Dingley bill the clauses relating to third-class wools and to insert instead the following: On wools of the third class and camels hair of the third class, the value whereof shall be 8 cents or less per pound in the general markets of the United States the duty shall be 5 cents per pound, and on all wools and hair of this class the value thereof shall exceed 8 cents per pound in the general markets of the United States there shall be an additional duty of ½ of 1 cent per pound for each increase of 1 cent per pound in the value thereof.

It is claimed for this latter amendment, which is the most important of all the amendments proposed, that it will largely prevent the frauds which it is alleged were perpetrated under the ad valorum duties of the McKinley law, by reason of which, it is asserted, hundreds of millions of pounds of wool used in the manufacture of clothing, which properly belonged in the first class, were imported at third class rates on the representation that they were to be used in the manufacture of carpets. The clause in the proposed amendment relating to third-class wools designating the general markets of the United States as fixing the value of imported wools is regarded as very important, and if this amendment is admitted it will practically destroy the opportunity for undervaluations which now exist through the practice of fixing the prices of these imported wools in foreign countries.

Other precautions will also be urged to this end, such as defining the meaning of classifications so as to prevent restrictions such as have theretofore been used. For instance the words Angoria, Adrianople, Bagdad, etc., will be defined as indicating a class of wool regardless of the special district in which grown.

Senator Mantle, who introduced the memorial of the National Wool Growers' association in the senate, says that the amendments do not cover the demands made by the association, but in his opinion will be a vast improvement upon the bill as it passed the house of representatives. It will remain with the western senators, he says, to say whether or not the proposed amendments shall become a part of the new tariff law, or whether the demands of the wool manufacturers, as applied to wool, shall outweigh those of the wool growers themselves.

WASHINGTON, April 17.—The exhaustion of the funds appropriated for the general land office is largely crippling the work in the field and further retrenchment on the salary rolls was made Friday. The 14 examiners of the office who have been investigating on the Chippewa Indian lands, at $6 a day each, and 12 mineral land commissioners in Idaho and Montana, drawing $3,500 per annum a year each, were ordered dropped from the rolls. The action takes effect on the 20th inst. This reduction of force follows the dismissals of over a score of special agents made last week, also due to scarcity of funds.

BANK ROBBERY.

The Cashier Drained and His Throat Cut —A Suspect Under Arrest.

SOMERSWORTH, N. H., April 17.—The Great Falls national bank, at this city, was entered by burglars between 12:30 and 2 o'clock Friday afternoon and Joseph Stickney, the cashier, after having been brained with a slungshot, had his throat cut.

A special to the Union at 2 o'clock Saturday morning from Somersworth says that a well known young man of that city is suspected of the Stickney murder. The man has been absent from the city since the commission of the crime, but a suspect answering his description was arrested in Milton, some dozen miles distant. Friday evening, and will be taken to Somersworth Saturday morning.

Ohio Militia in the Grant Parade.

CLEVELAND, O., April 17.—The entire national guard of Ohio will attend the Grant memorial ceremonies in New York. It is held that as Ohio is Grant's birthplace this state should be represented at its full equipment of 6,500 men. The troops will go in heavy marching order.

Locomotive Explodes—Two Fatally Hurt.

OSBORN, O., April 17.—Engine of north-bound freight No. 56, on the Big Four, exploded here Friday evening. Engineer John Hutchins, of Ivorydale, was badly burned on the leg. Fireman Fagin, of Columbus, was scalded from head to foot and will die. Brakeman Daille, of Middletown, was blown 50 feet against a stump and his leg fractured. His injuries are fatal. The explosion was caused by seams of the firebox giving way. The engine at the time of the explosion was standing on the side track. The injured men were placed in a hospital at Dayton.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—SENATE—The senate met at noon Monday for the first time since the death of ex-Senator Voorhees, who, until a recent day, was a conspicuous member of the body. The opening prayer of Rev. Dr. Milburn, the blind chaplain, made an eloquent reference to Mr. Voorhees' brilliant talents, impassioned ardor, kindling eloquence, genuine patriotism and the unselfish dedication of his great powers to every cause, human and divine, which enlisted his career. Divine consolation was invoked for the family of the man who had inscribed his name on the tablets which perpetuate the great orators and statesman of his generation immediately following the prayer Mr. Gorman (Md.) moved as a mark of respect as their late associate that the senate adjourn, adding that many senators desired to attend the funeral. The motion prevailed, and at 12:05 p. m. the senate adjourned.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—SENATE—Senator Morgan, of Alabama, Tuesday, concluded his long speech on the resolution declaring that a state of war exists in Cuba. He did not ask for a vote on the resolution but announced that he hoped to secure a final vote at an early day. The bankruptcy bill was taken up at 3 o'clock. Mr. Lindsay, of Kentucky, defending the measure against criticisms made against it in the course of the presentation of memorials, Mr. Cockrell of Missouri, announced that he held in his hand copies of the stereotyped printed petitions from that distinguished Indianapolis conference, in which they desire congress to surrender to them the right of legislation." He stated that he referred to the finance committee with the understanding that he did not indorse it.

HOUSE—Not in session.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—SENATE—The first skirmish on the tariff question occurred Wednesday. It was followed by a running break served as a test of strength of the various elements of the senate. The vote occurred on a motion by Mr Morrill (rep., Vt.) chairman of the committee on finance to refer a resolution by Mr. West, one of the democratic members of the committee. This made the issue between representatives of the two leading elements in the senate. Aside from this, the resolution was in the nature of a criticism of Secretary Gage, and declared illegal his recent order relative to goods imported after April 1, which according to the retroactive clause of the pending Dingley bill, the new tariff rates are to apply.

HOUSE—Representative Ridgely (pop. Kas.) introduced in the house Wednesday a bill "To enable the unemployed to earn a living, to utilize industry and produce general prosperity." His plan is much like the one advocated by "Gen" Coxey, of Ohio. It authorizes each state, territory, county, city, town, township or school district to borrow money for giving employment on public works by issuing non-interest bearing bonds of 25 years, payable only to the United States, not to exceed half the assessed value of the property of the state or municipality. In return for the bonds the United States treasury is to issue treasury notes. Adjourned until Saturday.

WASHINGTON, April 16.—SENATE—The senate spent Thursday considering the Indian appropriation bill, but did not complete it. Early in the session the proceedings were made executive, and when the doors were again opened to the public the Indian bill came up. The pending question was on the committee amendment opening the Uncompahgre Indian reservation in Utah to public entry. On motion of Mr. Gallinger, the provision as to children of a white father and Indian mother was modified so as to give these children equal rights on the consent or a majority of the tribe, and the consent of the secretary of the interior. Mr. Vest, of Missouri, spoke in criticism of the provision for the gradually abolishing sectarian Indian schools. He knew, he said, that what he said would subject him to bitter criticism. He was brought up a Protestant and had no connection with the Roman Catholic church. But he had no sympathy with that cowardly and ignorant sentiment that any religious denomination could menace our liberties. He had been reared to believe the Jesuits were opposed to republican institutions. But he had traveled through the Indian country, visiting the schools and had found them a travesty on education. He was not prepared to quote Jesuits. Broken down preachers and defunct politicians were sent out to the western country to teach the Indian children. He had found, he said, that the only Indian schools accomplishing any good were those conducted by the Jesuits. The ceremonial of the Catholic church seemed to appeal to the Indians. I do not belong to that sect who would rather see an Indian damned than see him in the Catholic church. Mr. Vest said he would make no efforts to oppose the provision in the bill, but would record himself with this protest. The Indian bill was not completed when, at 5 o'clock, the senate adjourned to Monday.

JEFFERSON'S BIRTHDAY.

The Event Celebrated in Washington—Wm. J. Bryan the Guest of Honor.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—The 154th anniversary of Jefferson's birthday was celebrated Tuesday night at the Metropolitan hotel by a subscription dinner given under the auspices of the National Association of Democratic Clubs. The first celebration of the anniversary of Jefferson's birth occurred at the same hostelry, then known as the Indian Queen. Jackson was the guest of honor, and the occasion was made memorable by the presence of Vice President John C. Calhoun and other democratic leaders of that day. Tuesday night William J. Bryan, of Nebraska, the late democratic candidate for president, was the guest of honor. Senators, representatives and others conspicuous in the counsels of the democratic party were present, many of them were from a distance. Covers were laid for two hundred and many were denied seats for want of space at the tables. The decorations of the room were simple. The columns were covered with southern smilax and a full length portrait of Jefferson, draped with American flags, was hung behind the seat of Gov. Chauncey F. Black, of Pennsylvania, the president of the association. On his right were Bryan, Representative McMillan, who acted as toastmaster, and on the left Senator Jones, of Arkansas, Representative Bland, of Missouri; Lentz, of Ohio, and ex-representative Sibley, of Pennsylvania, and Adrew Lipscomb, of Virginia.

Mr. Bryan was greeted with a lusty cheer as he entered the hall. The menu was carefully prepared, and was similar to such a dinner as might have been served during Jefferson's days.

Dr. Wagner Set Free.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 16.—Dr. Geo. B. Wagner, the Bellevue physician who was accused by Jackson and Walling three days before they were executed with being a party to the murder of Pearl Bryan, was released from the eastern Kentucky lunatic asylum Thursday and sent to his home, near Nicholasville. He has been considered of sound mind for nearly two months, but Dr. Stout delayed discharging him from the institution until his family should remove from Bellevue, as he was afraid the doctor's malady would return should he go back to his old home.

Used by the Champions.

The popularity of the Winchester repeating shot gun is deserved, for although it costs very little, it has repeatedly won shot the highest priced handmade guns. Thousands of shooters who used double-barreled shot guns now use the Winchester repeater because they found that they could bag more game and make better scores at the trap with a Winchester. What stronger recommendation could any shot gun possibly have than to be used by J. A. R. Elliott, champion live bird shot of America; Rolla O. Heikes, champion of the world at flying target; Ferd Van Dyke, Capt. H. A. Bartlett and many other of the best shots in the country. A WAR

Between Turkey and Greece That Promises to Be Fierce.

Desperate Battle for the Possession of Valuable Strategic Points.

The Greeks Said to Have Had the Best of the Fighting—Macedonia is Wild With Excitement—The Cry is "Everywhere "To the Front."

NEW YORK, April 19.—The Journal, in an extra edition Sunday evening, publishes the following foreign war news:

ATHENS, April 19.—Greece accepts the issue. She has recalled her minister from Constantinople. The government is confident in the righteousness of the cause of Greece. An appeal will probably be issued within a few hours to all liberty-loving nations of the world. Hostilities have already begun. All along the entire Thessalian frontier the opposing forces are cannonading each other. On the sea, too, operations have been initiated, and a few hours' time will bring news of important engagements. The Turkish batteries at Preveza opened fire on a Greek vessel in the Gulf of Arta. The Grecian vessel sank. The loss of life on board is at present unknown.

As a result of this the Greek flotilla in the gulf moved closer to Preveza and began bombarding the town. The fire was kept up fast and furious. Great damage was done, and the loss of life must be large. The Greek land battery at Kefale Panaghia also began to bombard Preveza as soon as the flotilla opened fire. Shot and shell have been pounding into the town all morning.

Assin Pasha left Sunday night. Everything points to the war being conducted with extreme bitterness on both sides.

The official dispatches announce that all the Turkish stations from Nezero Koutra are occupied by Greek soldiers. Attack after attack has been made by Turkish regiments and batteries on Analipsis. Each attack was repulsed. The losses on the Turkish side were heavy.

Edhem Pasha has crossed the frontier. He has 10,000 well equipped men with him, all veterans. They are marching on Larissa by way of Revenl.

A desperate battle may be expected at Larissa.

Word has just been received here that M. Mavrocordato, the Greek minister to Turkey, has already quitted Constantinople. All reports agree that the fighting so far has been of the fiercest description. The Turks especially seem to fight with even more than the fierceness which characterized them in the last wer with Russia.

At Menexe 200 Turkish soldiers were killed.

The foreign legion in Athens has been ordered to be ready for the front at a moment's notice. The notice is almost unnecessary, as the legion has been expecting the order for days.

The greatest excitement prevails at Macedonia. All Greece is ablaze over the latest reports from the seat of war.

The loss of a Greek ship has stirred up Athens. Everywhere the cry is raised "To the front." It is going to be the cross against the crescent in a war that for fierceness will be unparalleled.

BRUSSELS, April 19.—The Independence Belge Sunday announces that Turkey has officially declared war against Greece, and that a notification to this effect was sent to the powers Sunday morning.

LONDON, April 19.—The Times Correspondent at Elassona will say Monday:

"I visited the hospital to-day (Sunday) and found all admirably conducted. But the scene was most distressing, the wounded screaming in their agony and feverishly tearing the bedding in their delirium.

"In Saturday's hill fighting the Turks had the advantage. They were judiciously ambushed behind the rocks and from their sheltered positions maintained an incessant fire.

"Sunday's fighting at Molouna's Pass took place around three outlying blockhouses, which were captured, then retaken, captured again and again retaken. The Greek positions suffered severely from the splendid shrapnel practice of the Turkish batteries at a range of 3,800 meters. Columns of smoke could be seen rising in every direction from the Greek positions, caused by the Turkish shell fire. The Greeks defended with the greatest courage, but were not able to stand against the slow but steady advance of the Turks.

"As evening came on three of the Greek outworks surrendered and asked the Turks to cease the shell fire. The latter now hold the advanced line except at one spot.

"The principal fighting done by the Turkish infantry was at Skumba and Dumenie, to the right of the pass."

PARIS, April 19.—The Temps calls upon the powers to intervene by force of arms to stop Turkey and Greece from further fighting.

ATHENS, April 19.—All the forts except one, which is the strongest, have been destroyed at Preveza by the bombardment of the Greek fleet.

American Minister May Protect Greeks.

CONSTANTINOPLE, April 19.—All the Greeks in Constantinople and near-by towns have just realized that they must look for protection to some country, now that war has actually begun. It is probable that they will appeal to the American minister for protection. Already the minister has been asked to look out for all Grecian subjects in Turkey.

Two Greeks Killed.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., April 19.—George Lazarat, a Greek restaurateur, at Pratt City, a suburb, was struck on the head by an unknown robber Sunday morning. Lazarat will die. The robber escaped. This makes two Greek restaurateurs fatally assaulted within a week.

GREEK FLEET

Completely Destroys the Turkish Battery at Preveza.

ATHENS, April 19.—The Greek commander at Actium, opposite Preveza, telegraphs that the Greek steamer Macedonia, which was fired upon Sunday morning by the Turkish batteries while leaving the Gulf of Ambracia, did not sink in deep water, but was able to run ashore near the entrance of the gulf.

It appears that the bombardment of Preveza began at 11:30 a. m., whereas the Turkish forts there opened a hot fire upon Actium at 5:30 a. m. Actium was formerly a telegraph station, but the building was converted into a fort, and was garrisoned by 500 men. The Turkish fire completely destroyed it, several of the garrison being killed and wounded, although the Turkish aim was often wide.

The Greek commander requested instructions by telegraph, and the minister of war ordered him to bombard Preveza immediately.

At 10 o'clock in the morning the Skafidiki fort fired a few shots on a Greek gunboat, which replied, effectually silencing the Turkish battery.

At 11 o'clock the Greeks began to attack the Turkish forts outside the entrance of the gulf, partly to divert the enemy's attention and partly in order to prevent the massacre of the Greeks at Preveza.

The Greek ironclad Spetzai has arrived to assist in bombarding Preveza, and the gunboats continue to bombard from inside the gulf.

According to the latest telegrams from Actium, 2,000 Greeks have crossed the Gulf of Arta from Vonitza to Salagora, and are now marching on Preveza.

A BLOCKHOUSE

Captured by the Turkish Troops, With Heavy Loss—Twenty Thousand Men in the Battle.

FOOT OF MILOUNA PASS, April 19.—A fierce battle raged in the pass all night long. The Greeks who entered and descended toward the valley encountered four battalions of Turks, who drove them back, and at the point of the bayonet rescued the force garrisoning the Turkish blockhouse, which the Greeks had encircled before entering the pass.

Neshad Pasha, commanding the fifth division, occupied Mt. Parna with a great force, while Hairi Pasha, commanding the sixth division, prepared to enter the Tiechaishan Pass, and Haldar Pasha, with the fourth division, occupied the Milouna Pass.

Before dawn Edhem Pasha rode out to direct the dispositions of these divisions.

A general engagement ensued. The battle still continues along the entire pass, over 20,000 men being engaged. The combat turns on the possession of the Greek blockhouse, which was most obstinately defended. Several vigorous attacks were made by the Turks without success, but finally, about 9 o'clock, by a magnificent dash, they took the blockhouse at the point of the bayonet.

The Greeks are still defending their positions on the summit of the hill. At the present moment four battalions of Menduhh Pasha's division are advancing to the frontier positions already taken. The Turks are fighting like lions, the Turkish artillery doing splendid execution under the command of Riza Pasha.

TURKISH TROOPS

Attacked by a Band of Greeks at Karye—The Fight Continues.

(Copyright, 1897, by the Associated Press).

HEADQUARTERS OF THE TURKISH ARMY IN MACEDONIA, ELASSONA, April 19.—News has reached here that the Greek band has attacked the Turkish troops at Karye, northwest of Nezeros. A Turkish officer and two men were wounded.

As this message is forwarded the fighting continues and a council of war is sitting here, under the presidency of Edhem Pasha, the Turkish commander-in-chief.

SALONICA, April 19.—A battalion of Albanians, stationed at Uskub, in readiness to start for the Greek frontier, has been sent in haste to Veranaw, on the Montenegrin frontier, and another battalion, now in course of formation, will follow as soon as possible. This unexpected movement of Turkish troops toward the Montenegrin frontier has given rise to the report that serious danger is apprehended in that direction.

POWER HOUSE BURNED.

Several St. Louis Street Car Lines Tied Up in Consequence.

ST. LOUIS, April 19.—The Hamilton Syndicate power house, which furnished motor power to the Citizen's, the Northern Central, Cass Avenue, Union, Baden, St. Louis and Southwestern and Marcus Avenue car lines, covering the western and northwestern sections of the city, was partially destroyed by fire Friday night. While the loss to machinery and building will not be more than $10,000. The roads depending upon it were unable to get any power and are consequently tied up. For this reason many thousands of people were compelled to walk to work Saturday. It will be some time before the roads will get to running regularly again.

Big Pump for Mexico.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., April 19.—Senor Victor M. Brascini, a prominent Mexican, is in town and has closed a contract with the Holly Manufacturing Co. for a nineteen million gallon pumping engine for the City of Mexico. This engine will be used in pumping the sewage of the city and will be the system based on the plan in use in Berlin, Germany.

A BREACH

Reported Between H. L. Martin and Joe C. S. Blackburn.

The State Senator is Bitterly Denounced for His Alleged Treachery—Judge Cantrill Instructs the Grand Jury in the Dr. Hunter Bribery Case.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., April 16.—A special to the Evening Post from Frankfort, says:

It is reported, on what is believed to be excellent authority, that there is a serious breach between State Senator Henry L. Martin and ex-United States Senator J. C. S. Blackburn, of the silver democrats. Martin, who has worked like Trojan for Blackburn during the past two years, feels that he now has a chance to win the prize himself, it having been conclusively demonstrated that Blackburn can not be elected, as Blackburn and his lieutenants have so far declined to countenance the movement and have even gone so far as to bitterly denounce Martin for his allege i treachery. But this was done in private, while in open the Blackburn men were solicitious as to Martin.

At 9:30 Thursday morning Judge Cantrill of the Franklin circuit court, ordered the grand jury to report at once on the bribery charges which it has been investigating.

Later Judge Cantrill called the grand jurors into open court and instructed them as to their duty in the case before them. He said he regretted that the matter came up before the adjournment of the legislature, and felt that it was the duty of the legislature to wash its own dirty linen, but having attempted investigation, it was their duty to probe it to the bottom, "and in so doing, I command you to not show any favoritism." This unusual step on the part of a circuit judge was received with surprise by both republicans and democrats alike.

The first ballot in the joint session of the legislature Thursday resulted as follows: Hunter 58, Blackburn 43, Martin 10, Boyle 6, Stone 1, leaving Hunter two votes short of an election. No motion to adjourn was made and the second ballot was ordered.

The second and third ballots resulted as follows: Hunter 57, Blackburn 42, Martin 10, Boyle 6, Stone 1. A motion was then made that the general assembly adjourn, which prevailed.

AT REST.

The Remains of Ex-Senator Daniel W. Voorhees Buried in Highland Lawn Cemetery, Terre Haute, Ind.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., April 16.—The funeral of ex-Senator D. W. Voorhees took place Thursday afternoon from St. Stephen's Episcopal church, Rev. John E. Sulger, the rector, officiating. This is the church in which he was confirmed a number of years ago and which he has attended when here. During the two days the remains have been here, the funeral having been delayed awaiting the arrival of his eldest son, Charles S. Voorhees, of Spokane, Wash., they have lain in state in the parlors of the Terre Haute house, which he has made his home since he broke up housekeeping a number of years ago. A steady stream of people has passed through the flower-embordered room and looked upon the face of their dead friend.

All classes and conditions of people have been represented and their tearful eyes have told the story of the universal sorrow.

During the afternoon all places of business in the central part of the city were closed. The public and private schools were dismissed, and the whole town united in doing honor to its distinguished son.

Senator Voorhees was a mason and the various masonic lodges participated in the funeral exercises, while the city council and many civic and military organizations followed his remains to the grave in Highland lawn cemetery, where he was laid beside his wife, who died several years ago.

Gov. Mount, ex-Gov. Matthews and many distinguished men from all over Indiana were present, while from the towns near by delegations came by the hundreds, for in all these towns he was almost as well known as here at home. The funeral was the most impressive that ever took place in the history of this city. Among the honorary pallbearers were Col. R. W. Thompson and Hon. W. R. McKeen.

MINISTER SKOUZES

Predicts War Between Turkey and Greece Immediately.

NEW YORK, April 16.—A cable from Athens to the Journal gives a lengthy interview with Mr. Skouzes, the Greek minister of war, in which that gentlemen predicts war with Turkey. He states that the powers are solely responsible for the present state of affairs, and adds that great armies can not face each other much longer without fighting. He says Greece yielded in the Cretan matter, and yet the allies have entirely failed to satisfy any one.

The Flood at St. Joseph.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., April 16.—The Missouri river at this point is higher than any previous time since 1881 and is still rising slowly. The Rock Island tracks, opposite Leavenworth, are under water, and trains of that road and the Chicago Great Western are sent over the Burlington's tracks. All other railroad lines are still safe.

Change Their Base.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 16.—Dr. Joaquin Castillo, the Cuban leader, has gone north. It is stated that no more expeditions will be sent from Florida at present on account of the strict watch kept by the government officials. The base of operations will be changed to New York.

The Plague at Bombay Decreasing.

BOMBAY, April 16.—There has been a great decrease in the virulence of the plague. Only 390 cases and 194 deaths from the disease occurred last week in this city, compared with 350 cases and 213 deaths during the preceding week.

LEVEE BREAKS.

A Big Crevasse About Five Miles South of Delta—Its Protected Plantations, and Much Land Will Be Flooded.

VICKSBURG, Miss., April 17.—At midnight a dispatch was received from the Vicksburg, Shreveport and Pacific railway office at Delta, reporting a big crevasse about five miles south of Delta in the Bigga levee, which occurred at 11 o'clock. This is the levee on which Bolivar Thompson has been working for several days with a force of five hundred men, free laborers and convicts. It is a high levee, said to be fully 18 feet high, but is built largely of sand and has a thin cross section with insufficient slope. It protected a fine plantation country, and its back water will flood much plantation land. A desperate effort has been made to hold the levee, but there is no chance of closing the crevasse, or preventing its development of a disastrous break. There is a strip of swamp about two miles wide immediately behind the Bigg's levee, but beyond that the backwater will run over cotton lands, and Secretary Lane, of the Fifth district levee board, is of the opinion the backwater will flood Tensas and Concordia parishes. It is thought the flood will back up on the Vicksburg, Shreveport & Pacific road as far as Tallulah or farther. The officials of that road are hurrying warnings to all stations along its line.

It appears impossible to find any one here at this hour who knows anything of the topography of the country which may be overflowed by this crevasse, but the general impression is that its effects will be extremely disastrous.

SECRETARY SHERMAN

Declares That Spain Must Keep Her Hands Off American Citizens—Opposed to Annexation.

NEW YORK, April 17.—Alfred Henry Lewis, in a Washington dispatch to the Journal, writes:

"Spain must keep her hands off American citizens," said Secretary Sherman. "I would employ every gun, man, ship and dollar in the reach of this government in defense of the meanest of our citizens. That is my Cuban policy and that is all of it. I do not believe in interfering between Spain and Cuba; they must settle their own affairs, solve their own differences. I do not believe in becoming Cuba's protector. Should she become free by her own efforts, I should not favor annexation. We don't want her. We have undeveloped country of our own, enough for centuries. To go in for any policy of annexation that would annex Cuba or even arrange a protectorate in the nature of a guardianship, should she hereafter become free, would mean vast expense and a great tax to us. We would have to keep up four times the navy and army we do now."

MR. GLADSTONE

Writes a Letter on England's Attitude on the Cretan Troubles.

LONDON, April 17.—Mr. Gladstone has written a letter to the Macedonian leader, Capt. Dampzes, in which he says:

"Under the present deplorable scheme all the British government has a right to do, seemingly, is to plead its opinions before a tribunal of two youthful despots, the emperors' of Germany and Russia, and to abide by their help to execute their final determination.

"Our disgraceful office seems to be to place ships, guns, soldiers and sailors at their disposal for the purpose of keeping down the movement for the liberty of Crete and of securing to these young despots, who have in no wise earned the confidence of Europe, the power of deciding questions which rightfully belong to the Cretans."

BATTLESHIP INDIANA

NEW YORK, April 17.—The battleship Indiana, which lies anchored off Tompkinsville, lost one of her torpedo shells on the morning of the 14th, while at target practice.

The torpedo shell was a blank one 18 feet long, and was fired at an imaginary target, 500 yards distant from the battleship. When fired on Wednesday morning the mechanism of the shell got out of order and the practice crew were unable to find it. It is supposed that the air chambers got out of order. The torpedo shell cost $2,500, and several boats' crews from the Indiana have searched the waters of the upper and lower bay endeavoring to locate it, but so far without success.

Death of Senator Hence's Mother.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., April 17.—Mrs. S. H. Hanna, mother of United States Senator Mark Hanna, of Ohio, died at the Kenilworth Inn, Biltmore, at 4 o'clock Friday morning, of pneumonia. She had been in Asheville only a few days visiting the kindergarten, in which she was much interested, and her death was totally unexpected here. Mrs. Hanna came to Kenilworth Inn several weeks ago, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Hanna. Senator Hanna has been summoned from Washington and is expected to reach here Friday afternoon. The body of Mrs. Hanna will be taken to Cleveland, O., Saturday afternoon.

Attorney Cassidy Drops Dead.

MT. STERLING, Ky., April 17.—James P. Cassidy dropped dead at his home Friday evening. He recently made a race for commonwealth attorney and was defeated by a small majority.

Turks Cross the Greek Frontier.

LONDON, April 17.—The Daily Chronicle's war correspondent at Kalamaqua says it is rumored there that a number of Turkish irregulars have crossed the Greek frontier and occupied the deserted village of Mandrachotza, north of the Pindus mountains. Greek regulars were sent to that point from Kalamaqua.

The "Lone Fisherman" Dead.

BALTIMORE, Md., April 17.—James S. Moffit, the original "Lone Fisherman" in Evangeline, died here Friday at the Johns Hopkins hospital after an illness of four weeks.

HANNA'S OUTLOOK GLOOMY.

Democrats May Control the Next Ohio Legislature.

The recent municipal elections in Ohio, resulting in democratic victories everywhere, have rendered quite uncertain the complexion of the legislature to be chosen in that state in November. Politicians of both parties naturally are discussing the situation with deep interest, for it is to be remembered that the new legislature will elect a successor to Senator Hanna. It is asserted by democrats and not denied by republicans that the democratic prospect of carrying the legislature and electing a senator have been considerably brightened by the test of strength shown in the Ohio city elections.

Two democrats have their eye on the senatorship. Both of them are rich, ambitious and great hustlers, and neither will stop to count the cost with such a prize in view. These are ex-Senator Brice and John R. McLean, of the Cincinnati Enquirer. Both will pitch in from this time on. In fact, both did pitch in weeks ago. They and all their friends are much encouraged by the present situation.

Mark Hanna is desperately in earnest in the endeavor to succeed himself, and as his barrel is a good-sized one, it will be on tap from now right along. Hanna is almost always in a talkative mood. Just now he appears to have relapsed into a thoughtful strain and evinces no eagerness to discuss the lesson of the spring elections in Ohio. It is understood that the republican mayor of Cleveland, just reelected, is a bitter personal enemy of Hanna and carries his animosity so far as to prefer a democrat in the United States senate to the friend of McKinley. This gentleman is said to control the organization of the dense republican constituency of which the city of Cleveland is the center. This means a fight against Hanna in his own immediate household and predicts the success of the democratic legislative ticket in that political division. The republican boss of Cincinnati was washed out of sight in that city, and it is scarcely anticipated that he will emerge from the debris in condition to put up any kind of a fight in November. The republican factional dissensions, together with the general party discontent so plainly visible, produce a situation of corresponding elation and depression in the democratic and republican ranks. It will make the coming state campaign one of the most lively interest, not only locally, but nationally. The republican chances for picking up a senator in another state, which might be named, are fully offset by the imminent prospect of dropping one in Ohio.—St. Louis Republic.

THE SPRING ELECTIONS.

A Signal Protest Against the McKinley Administration.

Local elections in off years are not always indicative of popular opinion on broader questions of public policy, but when they show a marked revulsion against the party victorious at the last preceding general election, we agree with the St. Louis Post-Dispatch that it is difficult to overestimate their significance and importance.

And seldom has such a revulsion been more marked than this year. It began in the Connecticut town elections, was emphasized in those of New York and New Jersey, found an echo in Iowa and on Monday and Tuesday of this week had its most significant expression in Ohio and Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois. The great republican cities of Cincinnati and Detroit and Chicago and Milwaukee have reversed, with tremendous democratic majorities, their verdict of last year. Elsewhere in these states the reaction is equally marked and equally significant.

And there is nothing of sectional politics in this revolt against the party in power. As all sections have suffered alike from the continued business depression and the delayed prosperity wave, so all sections voice the protest against these conditions. And if republican fatuity persists, as it is now persisting, in forcing upon the country a new bill of abominations for the protection of trusts and the oppression of the people, and if the democrats make no mistakes and sacrifice nothing of conviction to supposed expediency, Mr. McKinley will find, in the last two years of his term, a congress with 100 democratic majority on his hands.—Illinois State Register.

The Duties on Wool.

One of the chief objections to the Dingley bill—that is, one of the chief objections by the gougees as distinguished from the gougees—is on account of its high duties on wool. And yet these duties are not high enough to satisfy the wool growers. Their man Lawrence has called a meeting of the Wool Growers' association in Washington to lay down the law to the senate with regard to the duties on wool. The Wool Growers' association has been holding meetings in Washington ever since congress assembled last December. It made known to the ways and means committee what was expected and demanded, and it was thought, until this call for another meeting, that it had got everything it wanted. The president made a mistake, in the first place, in convening congress to pass a tariff law. He should have convened the Wool Growers' association. That would have saved time, for no tariff law has passed a republican congress since the existence of the Wool Growers' association that was not dictated by that organization of fleecers.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——The Dingley tariff bill is McKinleyism to a superlative degree. The wage earners are finding out, and the fact that Dingleyism will only permit one dress where the Wilson bill furnishes more and only one suit of clothes where the Wilson bill furnishes more, while wages do not increase in proportion to cost of living, is coming home to voters and their families.—Nashville American.

OHIO AND THE DINGLEY BILL.

Protection Not Favored in McKinley's Own State.

There is some apprehension manifested in the near west as to the possible effect of the Dingley folly on the political fortunes of Senator Marcus A. Hanna, that distinguished gentleman who rejoiced not long ago in the flattering assurance that he was the whole thing, but who, for some reason or other and for some time past, has been hiding his brilliant light under something. It would be a great misfortune, of course, if Mr. Hanna should come to grief politically, and when his warm friends contemplate the didoes that Ohio cut up last week they are fain to be greatly worried on his account. The Chicago Tribune, a very stanch republican paper, feels moved to say:

"Senator Hanna's term expires in March, 1899. It would be a misfortune if the next legislature elected in Ohio should be controlled by the democrats, and leave Senator Hanna out in the cold. But there is no telling what Ohio will do if a tariff bill is enacted whose duties weigh more heavily on consumers than those of the law of 1890."

In spite of its strong and unswerving republicanism the Tribune, which, by the way, is a very able paper, is cordially opposed to the Dingley folly. It notes that in certain sections, where the tariff issue was forced, McKinley majorities were proportionally smaller than in other sections, and it remarks that "the tariff was not a winning card last fall" and "it does not seem to have been on this spring." It points to the way Ohio voted as a point at the go a-gainst and lashed it, in spite of the Dingleyites' generosity to Ohio, they claiming that the Buckeye state had received especial consideration at their hands.

And so it goes. The Dingley folly is challenging considerably more and more severe condemnation than the McKinley folly challenged a few years ago, with this difference, that republican denunciation of the latter was as nothing to that which now scorches the Dingley policy. The moral of all of which is that republican protection is a good thing to put republicanism on the shelf. Nothing is wholly bad.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

THE TARIFF AND TRUSTS.

Protected Interests Are Allowed to Write the Schedules.

It is becoming known that the agent of each protected interest wrote the schedule in the Dingley tariff bill. The sugar schedule as it now stands was largely written by Solon Humphreys, Pierre Smith, John Farr, William H. Lefferts, Charles P. Armstrong and John E. Searles, treasurer of the American Sugar Refining company.

Thomas Harrison, for the Manufacturing Chemists' association, wrote in substance the chemical schedule.

H. B. Newton, president of the National Association of the Brick Manufacturers, prepared section 83 of the bill.

Green glass manufacturers wrote section 94, imposing a duty upon green and colored bottles, and their demand was literally complied with.

Simon Burns wrote section 99, and his language was followed word for word.

Manufacturers of spectacles, eyeglasses, lenses, opera glasses, etc., had their schedule as prepared by themselves adopted without the change of a single word.

Cotton spinners and cotton manufacturers demanded certain rates in writing, and their demands were honored.

The section of the cutlery schedule referring to pocket knives and table knives was prepared a month before it was given out by the committee. It was in the possession of a certain manufacturer and he showed it to friends of his in New York and other cities weeks before anyone else knew what that section was to be. At the same time the majority of the ways and means committee had decided to submit the retroactive amendment.

It is a fact that the wool manufacturers of the country knew on the evening of January 6 what the wool schedule was to be. The present boom in sugar is directly traceable to the fact that the retroactive clause is to be used to put up the price of sugar to the trade, while the trust never intends to pay a cent of increased duty on sugars imported prior to the date the new bill becomes a law.—Chicago Chronicle.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——The municipal elections indicate pretty plainly what is thought of Dingleyism.—Utica Observer.

——It is as easy to tax the people rich as it is to increase the size of an orange by sucking out the juice.—Los Angeles Herald.

——On a moderate estimate the $200,000,000 which the Dingley tariff is expected to raise for the government will cost the people $1,300,000,000 in advanced prices.—Providence Journal.

——The home cities of McKinley, Forsker, Hanna, Alger, Bushnell, Billy Mason and other goldite, high-tariff republican leaders have repudiated and rebuked them most emphatically.—Illinois State Register.

——Mr. Hanna has formally and firmly refused to attach any importance to the recent municipal election results. Mr. Hanna is enough of a politician to shut his eyes when he doesn't care to view unpleasant things.—N. Y. Journal.

——It is not only Chicago, Canton and Cincinnati that have filed their protests against the Dingley tariff bill. Italy, Germany and the Netherlands have entered diplomatic objection, with other countries to hear from. Mr. Dingley does not seem to have pleased either insiders or outsiders.—Philadelphia Record.

——No wonder the tariff tinkers are having trouble with reciprocity. Reciprocity is in conflict with the high tariff idea. Real reciprocity is free trade, and is as damaging to the tariff scheme as the open bounty. If the tariff theory is of any value the tariff should be taken straight, if anything naturally so crooked can be taken that way.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch

Rate of taxation in Scott county —99 cents on the $100.

Louisville's colored citizens will hold an agricultural fair this fall.

In Warren county, jail prisoners will be worked on the public roads.

The tax rate of Woodford county for 1897 will be 36 cents on each $100 of taxable property.

The State Board of Equalization gave Scott county's assessment on land a 3 per cent increase.

A Paducah negro has just been sentenced to the penitentiary for obtaining 15 cents under false pretenses.

The Fiscal Court of Todd county fixed the tax rate for 1897 at $1 50 per poll and 33 cents on the hundred property tax.

During the meeting of the Third Baptist Church, in Owensboro, just closed, 206 people were received into the fellowship of the church.

One of the tickets for city offices at Pineville contains both Republicans and Democrats. W. H. Bond, a colored attorney, is on the ticket for Clerk.

Near Hopkinsville, Mrs. Connie Stoner had a quarrel with some neighbors and fired upon them with a pistol, shooting off Mrs. Mahala Bradshaw's nose.

Judy Ann Johnson, aged about 80, was left locked up in her cabin at Ruckerville by her relatives while they went visiting and she was burned to death.

A massive walnut tree, the largest in the Kentucky and Virginia mountains, was sold Tuesday of last week by James Mullins, a prosperous young farmer, on the extreme head of Elkhorn creek, near Wright, Ky., and 35 miles back of the nearest railroad train, Norton, Va. Mullins received $500 cash for the tree.

A Louisville man this week ate mince pie and drank bock beer just before retiring and owing to the many exciting things occurring, his dreams got badly mixed. He dreamed that Hunter and Gov. Bradley were standing on the scaffold at Newport about to be executed, and begging for mercy; Walling knocked out Jackson in the fourteenth round, and Fitzsimmons was elected Senator from Kentucky on the first ballot.—Winchester Democrat.

Lawlessness seems to have manifested itself in a new form, says the Lancaster correspondent of the Lincoln Journal. It is reported that a tobacco bed belonging to a farmer on White Rock, about eight miles from here, has been destroyed, a notice being left that the owner could cultivate five acres of tobacco but not fifteen, as he intended. Garrard produces over a quarter of a million of pounds of tobacco, and, if the crop is to be reduced one-third our revenue will be reduced in proportion and the farmer cannot live.

Citizens of Lexington and surrounding towns, says the Argonaut, are alarmed with reports from every direction of the fatalities attending the eating of greens. Two deaths in Lexington have been declared by the physicians as remotely attributable to the eating of this palatable dish, while a number of persons from other counties and states are also reported to have died from poisoning caused by eating them. It is the belief that the poisoning is caused by some kind of a pestiferous insect or germ, which, on account of the mild weather, was not killed during the cold season.

A disastrous fire occurred at Crittenden. An entire block was wiped out and the loss is very heavy. The following firms were damaged to the extent mentioned, and were insured as follows: George Caldwell, loss $1,000, no insurance; Crutcher & Vallandingham, hardware merchants, loss on building and contents, $3,000, insurance on building $1,000; Dean Richards & Co., loss on store of clothing, etc., $2,000 no insurance; Tobacco Growers Deposit Bank, loss on building and furniture, $2,000, insurance $1,000; E. K. McGlure, three story brick office and store building total loss, insurance $1,500. The origin of the fire is unknown, but is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

The Glasgow News has the following concerning the Green county onyx quarry: "T. H. Poore, Stoop & Co. have sunk their shaft and they found a fine quarry of onyx for which they have been offered $6,000 per cord. They also found in the same cave a fine quarry of marble which is worth $4,000 per cord. The fact is not to be doubted that there is an immense quantity of this precious stone, and the company expects to realize from it a vast fortune. The onyx quarry contains both red and white the former being most valuable. These facts have created great excitement throughout the vicinity. The principal vein is confined to T. H. Poore's land, while other branches seem to be connected to R. L. Haskin's land which joins Poore's at the entrance of the cave. This cave has been visited by a great many people since its discovery no less than 200 visitors in one day."

CROP AND STOCK.

Buffalo gnats are killing stock in Carlisle county.

All of the advanced fruit around Lancaster was killed by the frost Friday.

The fruit growers are hoping the frosts last week were not as fatal as reported.

Walnut logs are on the boom. J. Will Forsythe, of Lexington, has been in Bourbon county and has purchased over $3,000 worth.

The hemp, in Boyle county has about broken out, and some of it is of a very superior quality. The dealers are offering it for $2.50 to $3.50.

Will Tapp, of Dalton county, brought into Madisonville a remarkable freak in the form of a Siamese egg, or eggs. The eggs were perfectly formed, but joined together at the smaller end, with a splice half an inch long and a quarter of an inch in diameter.

The farmers from all sections of the county report that they are further behind with work than has ever been known, on account of the continuous wet weather, says the Bardstown Record. Very few gardens have been planted, and but little oats have been sown. However, prospects for a fine wheat crop are flattering.

There has been a good deal of excitement in different portions of the country about night raiders destroying tobacco beds. A great many of the farmers are of the opinion that the few beds that have been raided was done simply for the purpose of nipping a little tobacco cotton. Near Poplar Grove it is reported that a number of farmers have received notice not to raise any tobacco this year. Wm. Smith, of near Sweet Owen, was in town last Monday. He says he thinks that the owls in his vicinity are causing the trouble with tobacco beds. He says he noticed a female owl making for the woods one day last week wrapped in a shawl of tobacco cotton. The owls, he says, are very wise people, you know. Fred McPherson says the same owl, or her sister, lost her shawl pin in his hen house one morning last week.—Owen News.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

D. E. CASTLEMAN Chairman,
B. L. RICE, Secretary.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 28, 1897. NO. 27.

HON. W. S. HOLMAN, of Aurora, died at his home in Washington, on the 22d inst. of spinal meningitis, the result of a fall he received a few weeks ago. Mr. Holman was a native of Dearbon county, Indiana, where he was born, in 1822. He had a common school education, supplemented by a two years' course in Franklin College, Indiana. Then he taught school and practiced law until 1843, when, at the age of twenty-one years, he entered the public service as Probate Judge. He was Prosecuting Attorney from 1847 to 1849, and in 1850 he attended the Constitutional Convention. The following year he entered the Legislature, and from 1852 to 1856 he was Judge of Common Pleas. His congressional career began with the Thirty-sixth Congress, and out of the twenty Congresses that have elapsed since that time he had been absent from only four, namely, the Thirty-ninth, Forty-fifth, Forty-sixth and Fifty-fourth, an almost unparalleled record.

WHEN Dr. Hunter decided to withdraw from the Senatorial fight, he notified his close friend, Mayor Todd, of Louisville, who hastened to Frankfort, hoping to get into the swim, but he learned in about thirty minutes after his arrival that Hunter could not deliver the votes of those who had supported him, so Hunter and Todd shook the dust of the town from off their feet.

NEXT Saturday Hons. John W. Greene and M. D. Gray will be declared the nominees for Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney, respectively, in this judicial district. They have no opposition, and will be declared the nominees as provided for by the order of the district committee.

IN a recent debate in the House of Commons, it was shown that the food supply of the Island is only equal to the demands of one week. If England was to be cut off from the markets of the world in one week there would be great distress and in two weeks absolute famine.

TWICE the nominee of his party caueus for United States Senator Dr. Hunter could not reach an election, and he gave up the contest and left the Capital last week. He was defeated by a very small minority of the members of his party in the legislature.

GEO. HORSON, clerk of Hamilton county, Ohio, and one of Geo. B. Cox's pets, is behind several thousand dollars in his official accounts, and is trying to work the insanity dodge. The Republican officials in Cincinnati, are in hard lines about now.

THE Senatorial contest at Frankfort has developed a scandal the like of which was never before known in Kentucky politics; but it must be remembered that Kentucky is being manipulated, politically, entirely by a new force of hands.

SOME of the Ohio Congressmen who have not been pulling down plums as fast as they desire for their constituents, complain that the President is giving his personal friends all the pie.

JUDGE LYONS, colored, will be appointed postmaster for Augusta, Georgia, and the white, Republicans as well as Democrats, think they are being outraged.

WEST Virginia comes to the front with the most advanced case of the new woman. A girl who is but eighteen years of age has been arrested for illegal voting.

THE Kenton County Fiscal Court reduced the salary of the County Treasnrer from $1,000 to $400, and the incumbent did not resign, either.

OHIO put to death two criminals by electroeution last Tuesday night, and hanging for capital offenses is a thing of the past in Buckeyedom.

THE experiences of Gus. Wilson, St. John Boyle and Dr. Hunter, with Senatorial booms, have not been satisfactory even a little bit.

FOR several months the Doctor has been a Hunter for the Senatorial toga, but he has not succeeded in finding it.

THE base ball season has opened, and the cranks are busy discussing the merits of the several league clubs.

INDIANA has lost two of her statesmen this month, Hons. D. W. Voorhees and W. S. Holman.

THE Dingley tariff bill is being very much modified by the Senate.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, April 24th, 1897.

The gentlemen engaged in attempting to organize a revolt in the House against Czar Reed's high-handed way of doing things have zeal, will, brains, audacity—in fact, everything but the one thing necessary to succeed; votes enough to outvote Reed's supporters. There is lots of talk about a large number of Republicans being ready to join the revolt, but if brought to an issue it will be found that the "large number" will be about a dozen or possibly as many as twenty at the outside. This being the case it strikes me that those gentlemen are, with the best intentions, wasting time that might be put to a better use than raising expectations that cannot be realized among those who are not fully aequainted with the situation in the House. That there are enough Republicans in the House who are at heaet opposed to Mr. Reed's policy and methods to make a majority of the House when combined with the Democrats and Populists is probably true, but they all want the best committee assignments they can get and are not going to vote against the man who makes those assignments; they also want favors from the administration, and they know that Mr. McKinley is in favor of the Reed policy. Enough Republicans to make a majority of the House will support Reed, regardless of what they think.

"Billy" Mason, of Ill., this week established his record in the Senate as a "kicker," by making a speech in favor of his resolution for a cloture rule, in which he ridiculed the methods of that august body and charged its members with caring more for individual power than for the public welfare. Referring to the failure to act on the Morgan Cuban resolution he said that it was impossible to tear down the golden god of the Senate rules in order to act, and closed by saying "I would not scuttle the old ship, but I would like to put her in dry dock long enough to have her bottom scraped."

While no gold Democrat has been appointed to a prominent place by Mr. McKinley, he is indirectly showing his gratitude to the gold Democrats by allowing them to remain in very desirable offiees. Mr. Conrad N. Jordan, Assistant Treasurer of the U. S., at New York, is a conspicuous exampIe, although Senator Platt and the entire New York machine made a hot fight for Ellis H. Roberts, a Platt Republican. Mr. Jordan was in Washington this week to renew his $400,000 bond that expired at midnight on the 22d inst. His renewal of the bond makes it certain that he has been assured of his retention in office for an indefinite period, as a reward for being a gold Democrat. And the same policy is being pursued towards Claud M. Johnson, of Kentucky, Chief of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing; ex-Representative Forman, of Illinois, Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and others who fill places of less importanee.

The professional office holders—those who have been in office before—have secured about nine-tenths of the pie distributed up to date by Mr. McKinley, which seems to show that experience is as necessary in office seeking as in any other business; but that dosen't lessen the disappointment of the inexperienced reachers after official pie.

Senator Morgan has given notice that he would insist upon a vote next week upon his resolution for the recognition of the belligerency of the Cubans. The resolution can command a majority in the Senate all right, but there it will stop, unless Czar Reed sees fit to allow the House to do some business at this session outside of the tariff bill and the left over appropriation bills.

The adverse decision of the U. S. Supreme Court in the case of Chapman, the N. Y. Broker, who refused to answer questions in the Senate sugar scandal investigation, leaves Chapman with only one hope of escaping the thirty-day jail sentence imposed upon him when he was found guilty of contempt in a Washington court. That is, in his being pardoned by Mr. McKinley. Strong pressure is being brought upon Mr. McKinley to issue a pardon to Chapman.

Democratic Senators have been notified that if they would not force Senator Vest's resolution, declaring the action of Secretary Gary in issuing orders for the enforcement of the retroactive clause of the tariff bill to be illegal, to a vote, that clause would be either made satisfactory or dropped entirely before the bill is reported to the Senate. This confession that the clause in question was merely put in the bill to bluff importers is not surprising. It never had many advocates in the Senate.

OVER in Ohio $75,000 court houses are selling at $10 each to be converted into barns.

OUT of 300,000 votes polled in Chicago at the recent election 580 were Prohibition votes.

THE Eddyville people are protesting against the abandoning of the penitentiary at that place.

SOME of the largest tobacco growers in Clark county, have decided to cultivate none of the weed this year.

HENRY WATTERSON wants Grover Cleveland nominated for President in 1900, and to accomplish his desire he has begun abusing the ex-President through the editorial columns of the Courier-Journal.

SINCE the nomination of Deboe for Senator, interest has revived in the situation at Frankfort. The want of leaders caused the defeat of Hunter. His election could have been easily accomplished had he been fortunate enough to have had two as astute politicians as Bronston and Goebel commanding his forces.

THE gold Democrats who aided in the election of President McKinley held a meeting in New York, last Saturday night. The attendance numbered about 500, among them being many of the leaders. The meeting did not hesitate to acknowledge that Hanna had fooled them badly, by forcing the tariff to the front as the leading issue.

THE Erlanger people are very much annoyed by the prospect of the reduction of their transportation facilities. With one daily trip less by the commuter, and its other trips only to Gest street, those who reside in Erlanger and do business in Cincinnati will have ten cents per day added to their fair, and this will amount to considerable in a year.

THE Dispatch, the new Democratic paper started at Louisville, is a handsome eight page paper—regular edition—and ably edited. It has gone to the front already in the matter of circulation, and the demand for it continues to grow. The Democratic party in Kentucky will find in it a reliable advocate of its principles, and the indications are that it will receive a liberal support.

THERE is no question but that a great many of the Republicans in this part of the State—probably a majority—are glad that Hunter was forced by circumstances to surrender the nomination for Senator. Although he was the caucus nomince many of them were in hopes that the alleged Bradley-Blackburn combination would result in his defeat and the election of Bradley to the Senate.

A RAILROAD company has found an honest man. His cow was killed by a railroad train and in answer to the company's interrogatory as to the value of the animal said she was only an ordinary cow worth perhaps $35. By return mail he received a letter from the company enclosing a dratt for $35 and saying this was the first common ordinary cow killed since the road was incorporated.

THE legislature passed a law providing that the county in which a glandered horse is killed shall pay for the animal. Of what value is a horse that has glanders? None. If it has no value why should a county be required to pay for it when killed? It requires a strange course of reasoning to reach a conclusion that a worthless horse should be paid for when killed to prevent the spread of a deadly disease.

LAST Sunday's Enquirer contained a minute account of the air ship that has been seen so often in that State. The man who examined the strange craft would not permit the publication of his name, but no one should blame him for withholding it. He says he talked to the two men who were operating the ship, but was unable to gain from them any information as to the power that propelled their boat, or as to the material of which it was constructed. The air ship is a newspaper fake.

The Democratic State Executive Committee last Thursday issued the official call for the State Convention to be held in Frankfort on Wednesday, June 2, commencing at 11 a. m., to nominate a candidate for clerk of the Court of Appeals. Mass Conventions will be held at 2 p. m., standard time, Saturday, May 29, to select delegates in all counties constituting or being a part of one legislative district. County Chairman will preside, or, if he is absent, a Chairman will be selected by the delegates.

In all counties having more than one legislative district the local Democratic committees will select the delegates at the same time as the mass conventions. If there is a dispute in regard to the committee, then the Chairman of the State Executive Committee will determine.

The basis of delegate representation will be one delegate from each county, or where action is had by legislative districts the same number for every 200 votes or fractional part of 100 votes or over cast for Bryan.

The accredited delegates to the State Convention may be represented by written proxy.

All those who voted for Bryan and those who, by partieipating in the primaries, will consider themselves obligated to support the Democratic nominees will be allowed to vote at the primaries.

CROP AND STOCK.

In Bourbon county John W. Skillman bought of N. W. Houston a lot of lambs at 5 cents, to be delivered June 15th.

In Lincoln county G. A. Swinebroad bought of R. H. Brouaugh 53 stock cattle, mostly steers, at $3 85 and sold them a few days later at $4 to $4 50.

About 100 eattle at Stanford on Court day. Buteher stuff sold at 2 to 2½ cents; yearlings and two-year old steers 3 to 4¼ cents; heifers 3 to 3½ cents. Horses and mules dull.

Cloverport News: Mr. Julius Hardin, a prosperous farmer, who resides five miles south of this city, has invented a machine for shaving shingles, which eclipses any of the kind known. It can be worked by either steam, horse or hand power, will make one and a half shingle at a stroke; can be worked at any desired speed and turns out a perfect hand-made shingle.

Brandenburg Messenger: It has been twelve years since farmers in Kentucky were so much retarded in their work as now. The continued rains of the past two months prevented sowing oats sufficiently to cut the crop one-half, and 50 per cent. of the farmers have not sowed plant beds. No corn has been planted, and scarcely any ground has been broken. Gardens have not been planted and there will be no early "truck."

Stanford Letter in Harrodsburg Sayings: A fine Jersey cow belonging to Mr. George A. Eubanks was frightened to death Friday by a pair of mules running after her; a much loved pet sheep of his wife died that afternoon, possibly from sorrow over the cow's demise, and that night thieves drove to his crib and hauled off about six barrels of corn, taking some chickens along also. In addition thereto, his family is just pulling through grip, measles and whooping cough, besides various other afflictions and vicissitudes. He is a mighty good sort of a fellow and doubtless strongly believes that "whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth.

The old National road bridge over White river, at Indianapolis has been condemned, and will be torn down. It is a historic landmark, built about sixty years ago, and the first one built over the river in Marion county. The bridge has been one noted for its many crimes and dark secrets. It is a wooden structure, built up solidly on the sides, and the fact that it was always dark even in the daytime made it a fit place for the perpetration of evil acts. For many years it has been point ed out as the site where more crimes have been committed than any other spot about the city. Some of the older inhabitants describe the bridge during the war as a "regular slaughter pen," and it is not known how many murders have been committed there. All agree that if the old timbers could talk they could tell some horrible tales.

THE RECORDER.

BURLINGTON, : : : KY.

Four more states, Massachusetts, Ohio, Iowa and Virginia, will hold elections this year.

The weak platform which falls and kills people who occupy it has started upon its bone-breaking career very early this season.

The Pennsylvania woman who left her husband one cent, to be paid him five years after her death, evidently had a grudge against him.

According to the new policy of the post office department a change of residence by a fourth-class postmaster is considered equivalent to a resignation.

One of the oddest protests on record is that of the ladies residing upon a street in Cleveland, who petition against naming the thoroughfare Kissam street.

A firebug in New York who confessed in the hope of a mitigated sentence has been sent up for 20 years. Arson so often involves murder that its punishment is growing more severe.

The airship seems to be in too many places. The person who is looking eagerly for a certain thing usually finds it, even if he is perfectly honest. Human testimony is a very strange thing.

Venezuela has adopted with enthusiastic demonstrations of gratitude the boundary treaty which was engineered by the United States. Now will Venezuela please sit down and keep quiet for a quarter of a century.

This country is hardly fenced in yet as far as new railroads are concerned. The United States has only 5.7 miles of track per square mile, compared with 11.5 in France, 13.6 in Germany, 16.6 in England, and 29.1 in Belgium.

It is said that the prize fight kinetoscope negatives are spoiled, and very likely they will remain spoiled until the hostile legislatures adjourn. Then the world may expect a new development in science which will promptly restore them.

A Boston paper says: "Spring is here at last. A butterfly was caught at the South end yesterday." This may be the proper way to catch a butterfly, but when you grab a wasp it is better to catch it about the middle, shifting northwesterly toward the head.

Russian women are said to be the most brilliant and accomplished in Europe. They are great linguists, too. At a swell function recently given in Vienna Princess Helene Gottschofskoskyposkovsky was the only one present who could pronounce her own name.

The man of affairs who long ago forgot his Greek finds his school-day memories suddenly revived as he reads the names of the warriors on the frontier. To be told that Sinsinikos is pushing things, and that the Euzonoi have left Tyrnavos makes Xenophon seem a little younger.

The occasional benevolent intervention of the government for the relief of a distressed section of the United States is one of the most beautiful exhibitions of the efficiency of our federal economy. Such benevolence is rarely, if ever, misplaced, and always intensifies the coherency of state and nation.

A widow with seven children has just married a widower with 12 olive branches in a New York village, while a woman in Oklahoma has sued for a divorce from her husband and in the petition she asks for possession of 11 young sters, the fruits of the marriage. And still there are some who insist that love for children is on the wane.

A man in Iowa has drunk so much hard cider that a "mother of vinegar" has formed in his stomach, and a surgical operation will be necessary. Thus even the mild seductiveness of cider has its dangers. The man who drinks hard cider is exposed to the inward pangs of "mother of vinegar" and perhaps the outward attacks of mother-in-law.

A scientific man is putting forth the claim that insanity can be cured by music, and yet it is not many months since an oboe player, convicted of kleptomania in Ohio, set up the novel plea that his malady was directly caused by performing on the instrument, and three patients in an asylum in New York were driven mad by the incessant playing of an accordion in a boarding house.

Dr. J. Mount Bleyer, an ear and throat specialist of New York, has been able to photograph sound. The idea is an elaboration of that wherein the voice is recorded on the cylinder of the phonograph. Instead of the vibrations being imprinted on wax, they are caught by the camera in the shape of the geometrical figures they produce. Thus fond mothers may be able to get a picture not only of the baby but of the geometrical figure his little yell produces.

That the people of England and other European countries are progressive is shown by the fact that American baggage checks have at last been adopted on the leading railways of England and the continent. Hereafter when an American goes abroad he may travel in real luxury on American vestibuled trains secure in the knowledge that when he reaches his destination it will not be necessary for him to waste a half hour and any amount of temper in searching out and identifying his luggage. It has taken a long time for Europeans to realize and admit the superior advantages of the American system.

THE CREVASSE

In the Promised Land Nearly Four Hundred Feet Wide.

Deplorable Accounts of the Condition in the Bogue Country—Great Loss of Mules and Cattle—Upper Mississippi and Missouri Falling.

JACKSON, Miss., April 23.—A special to the Associated Press from Greenville, Miss., says:

The latest news Thursday morning from the Promised Land break in Issaquena county estimates the crevasse to be nearly 400 feet wide and pouring through in heavy torrents, six or eight feet deep. Back water is rising with startling rapidity, the country being already overflowed.

A message from Baleshed, Mr. R. Duncas' plantation, six miles above the crevasse, says the backwater rose one foot three inches Wednesday night and that all dry spots were rapidly disappearing. Great loss of mules and cattle has already resulted, and it is expected that human life has already been lost in the Steele bayou country, where people believed themselves safe from any further rise.

Dr. I. B. Toombs, of this city, a prominent physician and planter, made a trip out in the Bogue country 25 miles northeast of here Wednesday and brings back deplorable accounts of the condition there. He says that 500 Negroes, men, women and children, are huddled together with starving horses, mules, cows, pigs, poultry, cats and dogs on a piece of railroad grade. They are being looked after by no one and have starvation rations to keep them four or five days only. They have no tents and their only shelter is a patchwork of rags, stretched on poles and walled in with cross ties. The grade is cut through by the water above and below them and they are literally surrounded by an ocean of water.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., April 23.—The Missouri has fallen one and three-tenths feet since Wednesday and is still receding. The gauge Thursday read 21, exactly the danger mark. There now seems no likelihood of a further rise.

ST. LOUIS, April 23.—The river at St. Louis, it is expected, will rise to about 27.5 feet on Friday, and will then remain about stationary for a day or two. The Missouri will fall slowly. The Upper Mississippi will fall, except south of Hannibal, where there will be a slight rise for a day or two.

A rise of .3 of a foot was shown by the gauge here this morning, with an advance of .3 at Hannibal.

Above there on the Mississippi river the water is falling as well as in the Missouri river.

HOLMAN DEAD.

The Indiana Congressman Passes Away After a Long Illness.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—William S. Holman, representative from the Fourth Indiana district, died here Thursday afternoon at 2:10 o'clock.

The life of William S. Holman—"Judge" Holman, as he was called through the Fourth Indiana district, which he served in congress almost all his life—was full of years and usefulness. He was born September 6, 1822, in Dearborn county, Indiana, in which he had his home all his life. After getting the rudiments of an education in the district schools he went to Franklin college and studied for two years.

Next he taught a country school to support himself while he studied law. He was a judge from 1843 to 1846. He was a prosecuting attorney from 1847 to 1849. In 1850 he was a member of the constitutional convention of Indiana. The next year he went to the legislature. From 1852 to 1856 he was a common pleas judge in his district.

Then his congressional service began. He was successively elected to the Thirty-sixth, Thirty-seventh, Thirty-eighth, Fortieth, Forty-first, Forty-second, Forty-third, Forty-fourth, Forty-seventh, Forty-eighth, Forty-ninth, Fiftieth, Fifty-first, Fifty-second and Fifty-third sessions of congress. He was defeated in 1894 by a small majority by James E. Watson, a young attorney at Rushville, Ind., who succeeded in carrying Judge Holman's district for the first time in years. Holman was elected last fall over Marcus R. Sulzer, of Madison, Ind. Holman received 23,504 votes against Sulzer's 22,769.

Holman's political rivals expressed only kindly feeling for him, and it is said that the votes of republicans carried the election for him more than once.

The remains, escorted by a delegation of his colleagues in the house and a committee from the senate, will be sent to his late home near Aurora, Ind., leaving this city at 3:45 p. m. Saturday afternoon, via the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. Funeral services will be held Sunday at the old homestead near Aurora, and interment will be made in Riverside cemetery.

Stole Lightning Rods.

KOKOMO, Ind., April 23.—Thursday two young men, whose names are unknown, were arrested on the charge of stealing the lightning rods off the courthouse. The men had the rods down and were taking the tips, balls, arrowvs and other ornaments off when the that was discovered by officer Patton. After receiving a lecture by Mayor Kirkpatrick, the depreciators were released. It is 188 feet to the tower where the thieving was done.

Big Victory for the Patriots.

HAVANA, April 23.—From Puerto Principe City comes news of severe fighting, which lasted ten days, between the Spanish columns, under Col. Rizo, and several bands of patriots, numbering 3,000 men. The fighting resulted, after a series of skirmishes, in a great victory for the patriots, the Spaniards losing 800 men.

Died of Hiccough.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., April 23.—John Hume died from the effects of an aggravated attack of hiccough, which lasted three days and terminated in his death.

THE PLANS

For the Creation of a Reserve List of War Vessels — The Columbia is to Be the Nucleus of the Reserve Fleet.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The navy department has perfected its plans for the creation of a reserve list of war vessels. The first vessel to be made the nucleus of the reserve fleet is the Columbia. She will not be taken out of commission but will be laid up in reserve at League island as soon as she returns from the New York celebration next week. Only her crew of 403 men only will be retained on the ship. They will be commanded by four commissioners and three warrant officers. Drill will be constantly kept up, the engines and secondary machinery will be operated at short intervals, and the ship will be kept in such condition as to be able to put to sea within 20 days after orders for active service. The small crew retained on the ship will be sufficient to train the men newly assigned to her, being thoroughly familiar with all her peculiarities. The 200 old men saved from the Columbia's crew by the reduction will be transferred to the battleship Iowa, now ready for commission.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The removal of the following chiefs of divisions in the pension office has been decided upon to take effect May 1:

John G. Gray, of Delaware, chief of the western division; Thos. C. Featherstone, of New York, medical referee of the bureau at $3,000.

J. McLeanem Lipscomb, of Virginia, chief of the certificate division.

T. C. Rye, of Tennessee, chief of the mail division.

Frank C. Anderson, of Virginia, chief of the law division.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The house has adopted a resolution for the appointment of a committee of 25 members, of which the speaker is chairman, to attend the Grant tomb exercises next Tuesday. The house has also agreed to take three-day adjournments next week with the understanding that no business shall be transacted.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—The United States civil service commission will hold an examination, commencing on May 10, at Washington and at other points where it has competent boards of examiners, for the purpose of establishing a register for the grade of inspector and assistant inspector of salmon fisheries in Alaska. Persons desiring to be examined should file their completed applications with the U. S. civil service commission, Washington, D. C., at the earliest possible date.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—President McKinley has decided to nominate Wm. R. Day, of Canton, O., to be first assistant secretary of state, and ex-Representative Bellamy Storer, of Cincinnati, O., to be minister to Belgium. These nominations were to have been sent to the senate Friday, but owing to that body's adjournment over until Monday will not go in until next week. The filling of the office of first assistant to Secretary Sherman ends a vexatious problem that has bothered the president. Storer was slated originally for this appointment, but the nomination was opposed strenuously by Senator Foraker and other well-known Ohio republicans, who protested against it on personal and party grounds.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—Representative Maguire, of California, Friday introduced a resolution in the house declaring that the war between Turkey and Greece was a war between Moslem and Christian civilizations, and directing that the sympathy of the United States be extended to Greece, with the hope that her struggle may be successful. The resolution was referred to the committee on foreign affairs, but as that committee is not appointed no action will be taken at present.

Miners' Strike.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 24.—Four hundred miners in the Nixon mine, owned by the Alexander Black Coal Co., and the Glasshouse mine, owned by Jesse Sanford, both on the Chartiers branch of the Pan Handle railroad, struck. They want the mining rate advanced from 54 to 60 cents. The Moon Run Coal Co., employing 300 men, has agreed to do away with the ironclad contracts and the men will return to work Saturday at the 54-cent rate.

Murderer Butler Arrives in Auckland.

AUCKLAND, N. Z., April 24.—The steamer Mariposa, Capt. Hayward, from San Francisco, on April 3, which arrived here, had on board Frank Butler, who is charged with having committed several murders in Australia. Butler was quiet throughout the voyage, and persists in denying that he is guilty of the crimes laid at his door. He says that he would have used his revolver had he known detectives were on board the Swanhilda.

Frank Kloss Executed.

SAN QUENTIN PRISON, Cal., April 24.—Frank Kloss was hanged Friday for the murder of William Deady over two years ago. The men had a quarrel in a saloon and had parted. Kloss returned, found Deady asleep in a chair and stabbed his victim to death. Kloss made no statement on the gallows Friday, but had previously tried to justify his crime because he was intoxicated.

Winstandley and Frederick Free.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ind., April 24.—Judge Gibson quashed the indictment for purjury against Isaac S. Winstandley and Clarence J. Fredericks of the defunct New Albany Banking Co.

Wouldn't Leave Jail.

TIPTON, Ind., April 24.—M. R. Townsend, a well known auctioneer, was given 60 days in jail after a spree to "sober up." His friends had the sentence suspended, after he had served two weeks, but Townsend insisted upon serving his sentence. After a week's further voluntary confinement he was prevailed upon to leave the jail.

The Anti-Trust Bill Passed.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 24.—The anti-trust bill passed the New York state assembly Friday morning by an overwhelming majority.

LAST STRIKE

For Liberty to Be Made by the Patriots on Havana.

The Insurgents, Who Are Mobilizing for a Final Blow, Well Equipped With Clothing, Arms and Ammunition—Spanish Troops Leaving Cuba.

MOBILE, Ala., April 26.—The tramp steamer John Smith, which touched at Pensacola en route for New Orleans, brought exchange letters from points in the Caribbean sea. Among others was one from Harold Wendell Phillips, the latest addition to Cuba's war correspondents. Under date of April 16 he writes the London Chronicle, upon whose staff he is employed, as follows:

"INSURGENTS' CAMP, NEAR VICTORIA, DELOS TUNAS, April 19, 1897.—It is apparent from the unusual amount of activity going on in camp that an important war movement is about to take place. Some days ago information was received from the junta at New York to the effect that Spain had given orders to withdraw some 30,000 troops from Cuba, giving as a reason for so doing that the present war was practically over and her troops were needed in the Philippine islands. Upon receipt of this information Gen. Lavrel dispatched several messengers to various parts of the island now occupied by the insurgents with sealed orders and almost immediately following small detachments of the regular army reported here to be further equipped and reviewed by the commanding officer. Victoria Delos Tunas appears to be the headquarters for the new government, having been made the sent of the army hospital as well as storehouss for army supplies. Within the last fortnight 3,000 latest pattern of Winchester repeating rifles and hundreds upon hundreds of rounds of ammunition have been received and distributed from this point, as well as necessary provisions and wearing apparel, and I would not be surprised any moment to hear this bustle and confusion was caused by the mobilization of insurgents for a general strike for liberty and independence, and that the designation of their attack was upon Havana itself. I am led to believe this from the fact that daily at 10 a. m. a "council of war" is held within the commanders' tents, and that carefully prepared maps of the provinces of Havana and Matanzas are furnished each company upon their departure. The report that the insurgents' party is dead and a thing of the past is an erroneous rumor. It is hard, indeed, to find a more lively corpse. At present every one is working in unisoa with but one idea, namely, to strike a mighty blow at the capitol of the enemy, and it is the general impression that the present movement is for that purpose, for while the insurgents have been very quiet for some while, the time worn adage of "'tis darkest before dawn" applies strongly. The insurgents were never in a better condition to fight than now, the season being in their favor, and they lack neither food, clothing nor ammunition.

NEW YORK, April 26.—A letter received here from Havana, dated April 14, says:

Gen. Weyler has put down his last card here and lost. His commission has reported to him that Gen. Gomez will not receive it. The members are Senors Marcos Garcia, of Sameti Spiritus; Sportuno, of Trinidad, and Fernandez, of Cienfugos.

They sought to carry to the rebel chieftain a message that if he would end the war Spain would grant the most perfect autoonomy to Cuba under the safest guarantees.

Gen. Gomez sent word that they could not enter his camp; his sole exchange for peace was liberty and independence.

TRACTION ROADS

Responsible for Three Horrible Deaths in Pittsburgh, Pa.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 26.—The traction roads are responsible for three deaths in this city Sunday.

Early Sunday morning John K. McKelvy, son of John H. McKelvy, late president of the white lead trust, was killed by a consolidated traction car on Forbes street near Pride. It is supposed McKelvy, in crossing the street, miscalculated the distance, or the speed of the car, and was run down. He was dragged 200 feet and was horribly mangled. There being no jack screw on the car, it was nearly 30 minutes before the victim could be released. Mr. McKelvy was manager of the Armstrong & McKelvy Lead and Oil Co., and was prominent in business circles.

Sunday afternoon while Christian Wachter was driving out Second avenue with his wife and two children, his horse became frightened and jumped in front of a traction car at Greenfield avenue. The car struck the vehicle with terrific force. Mrs. Wachter and her two-year-old babe were killed almost instantly, while the husband and the other children were injured, but not seriously.

Extra Session of the Arkansas Legislature.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 26.—The general assembly convened in extra session at noon Monday. The appropriation bills will be the first legislation considered. Among important subjects to come up is that of a railroad commission bill which blocked all legislation in the regular session.

Will Have the Indictments Quashed.

FRANKFORT, Ky., April 25.—Ex-Chief Justice Pryor and John W. Rodman, attorneys for Dr. Hunter, ex-Congressman John H. Wilson and Hon. E. T. Franks, will call up the indictments against them before Judge Cantril Monday. Messrs. Wilson and Franks will enter the appearance of Dr. Hunter, and, through their attorneys, will move to quash the indictments. If this motion is overruled they will demur. Lastly, they will demand an immediate trial if defeated on the first two steps. This information was given out by Mr. Wilson.

BOMBARDMENT

Of Santoquaranta by the Greeks Causes Great Damage—All the Government and Private Buildings Are Destroyed.

CORFU, April 24.—The western Greek squadron is bombarding Santoquaranta and doing great damage to the town. All the government and private buildings have been destroyed with the exception of the Austrian embassy. All the stores and merchandise on the quays have been burned. Fifty refugees who had embarked on ships have been landed here.

NEW YORK, April 24.—A dispatch to the Journal from Constantinople says: There was a rumor Friday night that the sultan will refuse the demands of Bulgaria for five additional Berats or bishoprics. Such a refusal will surely result in a war with Bulgaria.

It is asserted, however, that the sultan would never have refused such a request from Bulgaria, unsupported by some power, in the face of recent reverses on the Greek frontier. The Bohemian government is preparing for war by announcing the issue of bills to the amount of 8,670,000 franes for an extraordinary war credit.

LONDON, April 24.—A dispatch to the Times from Constantinople says that while Osman Pasha will take supreme command of all the Turkish armies engaged against Greece, Edhem Pasha will remain in active command of the eastern army with headquarters at Macedonia

The correspondents of the Daily News at Constantinople says:

"It is reported that all telegraphic communication with Constantinople is now cut off except by way of Odessa. I am assured that Izzet Bey has been received again into the favor of the sultan."

The Athens correspondent of the London Daily Mail says it is reported that the Greek army in Epirus has left a contingent to attack Pentepigardia, while the main body has proceeded to Plakka, where fighting is in progress.

The Times correspondent at Canea says Friday the insurgents are attacking Fort Izzedin, which is occupied by the international troops in addition to the Turkish garrison.

Three warships have left Suda and anchored opposite the fort. The admirals have gone to reconnoitre in a torpedo boat. He says that Col. Vassos has written to the admirals to ask whether the powers are in alliance with Turkey. The object of this inquiry is obvious.

The Athens correspondent of the London Times says Saturday: Those in authority here regard the situation as highly critical, despite the favorable news from Epirus. Fighting continues at Mati. The Crown Prince Constantine has ordered his troops to maintain a strictly defensive attitude. A portion of the western squadron has been detached to bombard the fortress Parga, opposite Pax island.

A dispatch to the Times from Milouna Pass dated Friday, says:

"Edhem Pasha continues to pursue a cautious policy. His plan seems to be to capture in succession a number of small positions held by the Greeks, but to avoid a general engagement. The Turks are making a good military road through the pass. The cannonade continues from the Turks, who are advancing on the left wing; but in the direction of Tyrnavo matters are quiet, the Turks having taken and occupied the town. Large reinforcements are arriving and the result of the war is beyond doubt. The Turks treat their prisoners with humanity and kindness."

The Athens correspondent of the London Daily Chronicle says that the Crown Prince Constantine has wired to King George as follows:

"The Turks are quiet to-day, owing to our success yesterday (Thursday.) We have destroyed the Turkish battery at Ligeria. The Turks have retired from Nezeros and Rapsadi. The action of our fleet at Katerina was excellent. I was in the first line of fire yesterday."

The Chronicle's correspondent says: "The Turks are greatly dismayed by the destruction of their stores at Katerina and at Litochorion. Commodore Sachtouris destroyed the stores from the coast to the foot of Mount Olympus. Nothing remains, therefore, for Edhem Pasha to carry away but hunger. The coast road being barred, the only remaining road from Salonica is the Veria road, eight days from Elassons.

"The reports of the injury to the railway line by the blowing up of bridges and a tunnel are confirmed.

"Financially, everything is going well and the value of paper money has risen. It is reported here (Athens) that the Turkish troops will be withdrawn from Crete. Private advices from Volo say that all the villages between Katerina and Veria have risen.

"Among the wounded who have arrived here are several who state that a number of the Greeks wounded at Grizzali and unable to follow the Greek retreat, were shut up in a small church by the Turks, who set fire to the building and burned them to death."

ATHENS, April 24.—It has been decided to call out several of the landwehr, or militia.

In Greece all able-bodied males from 21 years of age and upward, are liable to be called upon for military service. The total service is for 19 years, of which two years, with considerable terms of leaves of absence, must be passed with the colors, eight and seven years are then passed in reserve, and the remainder of the total of 19 years is passed in the militia, or landwehr.

Consul-General Lee Dined.

HAVANA, April 24.—Several of the newspaper correspondents who will leave Cuba Saturday gave a dinner Friday evening to Consul-General Lee at the Hotel Inglaterra. Among the American journalists present were Mr. Springer, Dr. Burgess and Mr. Shields.

Greeks En Route for Greece.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., April 24.—Nine native Greeks passed through this city en route from Minneapolis to New York City on their way home to take part in the war against the Turks. A party of 50 passed through from Chicago Friday.

A Strong Point for the Winchester.

In time everything breaks or wears out. Of times a break can be repaired if the proper means are at hand. One of the many great advantages of using a Winchester make of rifle or repeating shot gun is that, if any part of the gun is broken, it can be easily replaced at a trifling cost. All Winchester guns are made by a system of interchangeable parts so that a part will fit any Winchester gun of like model. This permits the owner of a Winchester to renew any part of the gun without the aid of a gunmaker. Parts can be obtained through any gun dealer in the country. This feature alone should recommend strongly guns made by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Ct. Send for their large illustrated catalogue free.

Physicians Wise in their Generation.

Scrofula Tumors

Broke Out and Caused Intense Suffering — Hood's Sarsaparilla Keeps the Blood Pure.

"Several years ago I had scrofula which appeared in tumors in different parts of my body. It took five weeks for them to develop so they could be lanced and I suffered intensely. Physicians failed to cure me. After three years of great suffering the trouble reached my throat and my tonsils were consumed. I read of cures of scrofula by Hood's Sarsaparilla and procured six bottles. After taking a few bottles I felt better. I continued until I was eventually cured. I have never been troubled with scrofula since that time. Hood's Sarsaparilla keeps my blood pure in spring and fall." MRS. SARAH G. DALES, Rutland, Ill. Be sure to get Hood's because

TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL

The Great Exposition Will Open Its Gates May 1.

A Scene of Splendor Whose Completeness Has Never Been Rivaled —General Reduction in Railroad Rates.

[Special Nashville (Tenn.) Letter.]

The Tennessee centennial at Nashville, considered as a spectacular effect, has one marked superiority to the late Columbian exposition at Chicago. In the white city there was no sense of depth. It was all foreground. In whatever direction one looked there was nothing whatever but lath and plaster, gilt and tinsel. Nowhere could one look out beyond the temporary splendor of the passing hour and rest one's imagination with a glimpse of the permanent and the historic. Now at Nashville things are different. Standing on the "Rialto" here and facing eastward one beholds a great white statue of Athenae, beyond her the replica of the Parthenon, and beyond that and round about white arches, glittering domes, reaches of pale green waters, deep green stretches of lawn that have golden tones in the sunshine, brightness, lightness, long perspectives of white wall, shadowy darkness in arch after arch, a world of gleam and glitter, a fascinating, insubstantiality that has sprung suddenly out of the earth, and shall return whence it was digged. But this is not all. While standing on the Rialto wheel about and face eastward. The direction of the bridge is continued in a broad avenue that falls away straight in front of you among shelving lawns and scattered trees. It curves to the left and disappears. The eye, however, still ranges on. Bright sunshine and blue sky overhang a wide valley, and beyond the valley there are many houses. Among them low-lying clouds of smoke blend hazily with the blue of distance and billow upward along a ridge crowded with buildings. Here and there a tower shoots high above the haze. A spire top catches the sunlight and glitters like a jewel. Straight in front of you, at the very center of the view, crowning and dominating the whole vista, veiled a little by gray smoke, softened by the blue of the horizon and backgrounded by blue of heaven, there is uplifted against the clouds the historic state house of Tennessee.

The scenic value of this imaginative undertone, so to speak, which is possessed by the Nashville exposition, cannot be overestimated. So speaks Nathaniel Stephenson, of the Cincinnati Commercial Tribune, who visited the exposition grounds last week. In the course of a most brilliant piece of word painting he said:

"And here in the midst of the battlefields, where Tennessee made such a valiant attempt to break from the strong bond of the national union, she is now celebrating her original entry into that estate. A new day is dawning, not only literally as the visions of the night fade away, while the shadows begin to lift, but figuratively, in the choice of the event to which this southern state asks all the world to do honor. If the darkness in the shadow of the Parthenon has its ghosts of war and ruin, the brightness that is succeeding it brings forth the white statue of Athens, and thus

"'The old order changes, giving place to new,
And God fulfills Himself in many ways.'

"But now the darkness of the night has changed imperceptibly to an altogether different one, the darkness of the dawn. You have not yet become aware of any increase of light. What you have realized is a vague, uneasy feeling, as if things fixed and impossible were slowly drawing near you. Large, dark shapes of buildings are stealing gradually into the range of vision. Great bulks of blackness take on form and distinctness and resolve themselves into towers, domes, porticoes. Bit by bit the very air itself is playing the same strange trick. The starshine is falling steadily nearer to the earth. A blue, lower seen at any other hour of the 24 glimmers downward from the descending stars and makes the whole atmosphere one endless starry shimmer. This is neither night nor morning, but the most mysterious of all the hours, the hour before the dawn, when the ordinary conditions of life do not exist. You feel that you are no longer upon earth, but wandering about the streets of some dream city, tenanted by you known not what and located in some far place unexplored by man.

"The buildings loom vaster and vaster as the blue shimmer grows steadily deeper. The dome of the Agricultural building is crowned by the stars themselves. The tower of the auditorium springs away into the very heart of heaven. The pillars of the Parthenon have the height of mountains. The statue of Athens is some immeasurably vast creature which is not to be approached.

"And all these monsters of the dawn have the strange effect of being asleep. They are buildings no longer, they are living creatures wrapped in dead slumber, gazing eastward with sightless eyes, that will be awakened by the dawn. Perhaps it is the continuous though imperceptible changing of the degree of distinctness in their details, due to the steadily growing light in the heavens, that produces this uneasy effect of being alive. But however produced, it is there. So real is it that one catches one's self treading lightly for fear of waking these enormous creatures that are all about one."

In concluding his letter Mr. Stephenson says: "The men who conceived this building must have had qualities which it perpetuates, sweetness, nobility, loftiness, calmness, strength. There was Tennyson's ideal of

"'That gentleness
That when it weds with Manhood makes a man.'

"And looking at all this, at what the Parthenon signifies as well as what it embodies, captivated by the matchless serenity of its charm, realizing its contrast to the Nineteenth century, one asks again: 'To what result is all this pageant of American material progress going forward?'

"And one turns hastily away lest one look too long upon the unattainable and lose heart and despair of his generation."

The great Remenyi apparently thinks in the same lines as Mr. Stephenson. They are both painters, artists of high renown, only one paints in music and the other in words. Both are poets, one with concord of sweet sounds, and the other with the rhythm of words. Remenyi says, as he stands tremblingly before the replica of the Parthenon: "Whose idea was this?" and when told that the idea originated with Maj. E. C. Lewis, the director-general, he said: "Where is he?"

The women who have made the woman's department an accomplished fact deserve more than passing mention. They have labored like heroes for nearly two years, and have spared neither time, money or exertion, to make their work a success of international character. The president of the woman's board is Mrs. Van Leer Kirkman, a lady especially gifted for the office. Mrs. J. N. Brooks is chairman of the sales department, Mrs. James P. Drouillard is vice president of the board, Miss Ada Scott Rice is secretary, and Mrs. M. B. Pfleher is chairman of space and classification. The architect of the Woman's building is Mrs. Sara Ward Conley, artist, architect and art critic, who is a native of Nashville. Mrs. G. H. Ratterman, chairman of the patents' committee; Mrs. J. Hunter Orr, chairman decorative and applied art; Mrs. Ann Snyder, member of the general committee; Mrs. Paul McGuire, chairman of the ways and means committee. The women's congresses will be a feature of the centennial. The congresses, while general, are already classified, so that those interested in a particular subject can attend a course without consuming much time. In the departments there are education, music, art, home and literature. The lectures will be free and are intended to be philanthropic in character. They are also intended to serve another purpose. They will afford a fitting theater in which a thinking public can see and listen to the eminent women of the state. Of those there are scores who through patience, industry and ability have attained distinction and who are entitled to be known and loved by the nation as well as by the commonwealth in whose interest they have served so long and well.

The meeting of the railway passenger men at Nashville, the other day, was watched with great interest, for it was known that the object of the meeting was to decide upon the rates to the Tennessee Centennial exposition.

It was one of the most harmonious meetings ever held by that body, for they each knew that the motives that had prompted the enterprise were directed for the general good, and not for the benefit or aggrandizement of any individual or corporation.

The members of the passenger association, with the liberality that has always characterized their movements when the interests of the general public are concerned, determined to aid the Exposition association in their great work, and the consequence is that the rates are more advantageous, from every standpoint, than any that have ever been offered before. In fact, the fares have been placed at such a low figure that the Tennessee Centennial exposition, the national event of the current year, can be visited by everyone, for all obstacles have been removed.

It was agreed that the railway fares to the exposition should be placed on a sliding scale, and regulated by zones of fares, 25 to 50 miles each.

In the first zone of 50 miles the rate for the round trip will be 3 cents a mile.

From 51 to 100 miles, 2¾ cents per mile.

From 101 to 150 miles, 2½ cents per mile.

From 151 to 200 miles, 2¼ cents per mile.

From 201 to 275 miles, 2 cents per mile, with 50 cents added.

From 276 to 300 miles, 2 cents per mile, with 75 cents added.

From 301 to 350 miles, 2 cents per mile, with $1.50 added.

The rate, however, is in no instance to exceed 80 per cent. of the rate one way, on the zones from 201 to 350 miles.

For military companies and bands in uniform, of 25 or more, the rate will be two cents a mile, plus arbitrary, for the round trip. The same rate applies to schools, when accompanied by teachers. These rates limit the use of tickets to seven days after the date of issue.

A rate of one cent per mile, each way, short line mileage, plus arbitrary, for the Association of Confederate Veterans, whose annual reunion will be held in Nashville, June 22, 23 and 24, has been agreed upon.

The rates at hotels, restaurants and boarding houses are the lowest ever offered, and for meals, in numbers of instances, the price has been reduced from 20 to 25 per cent., and good living was never cheaper anywhere. The good people of Nashville have profited by the grave mistakes made at Atlanta and Chicago, and the prevailing sentiment is to keep the people here and induce them to come again, and not to permit them to go home dissatisfied and disgusted. There is no danger of anything running short; the supply whence resources are drawn is unlimited, and the adjoining territory is so rich in all the good things of earth that there will be no appreciable diminution in the stock on hand.

—Toothpicks prepared by nature are a product of Spain and Mexico. A comparatively small plant in Kew Gardens was estimated to have 17,500, and a large specimen in the same place could have had no fewer than 51,000.

The Greeks' Defeat at Larissa Was a Crushing Blow.

It Is Reluctantly Believed in Athens That the Greeks' Retreat From Larissa Was Somewhat Disorderly—Greece Will Persevere in the Struggle.

LONDON, April 26.—What seems likely to be the last week of the war is entered upon Sunday. It is difficult from the tangle of conflicting telegrams to understand the exact position of affairs.

Following the Greek defeat at Larissa, London opinion Sunday was almost unanimous that the end is in sight, and this view is probably shares by the powers, as they are already moving to intervene.

It is believed that intervention will first take the form of a suggestion of armistice, to which the combatants would no doubt agree. Since Saturday afternoon the British foreign office has been in close communication with the other members of the European concert, Great Britain suggesting that the time has now arrived for them to act. The French, German and Italian governments have already responded, offering to agree, though the German government adds as a condition that it will be necessary to enact a pledge from Greece to obey the mandate of Europe when this mandate is again given.

British foreign office believes that Greece will give this pledge as the disasters which have overtaken her have demonstrated that Turkey still possesses a formidable fighting machine at both places, they could not transport the guns to Pharsala.

It is reluctantly believed by some in Athenian circles that the retreat was somewhat disorderly, and that some of the guns were abandoned with but feeble defense. It seems probable, however, that in the main the retreat was in good order.

Sunday morning the word went forth here that the government will persevere in the struggle with greater determination. The report, however, has not served to allay the growing irritation at the belief that, even if Greece could not hold her own, the non-offensive policy manifested in the orders of the crown prince not to attack, was idiotic and un-Grecian. The retreat to Pharsala is considered a poor response to the fiery speeches of the Crown Prince Constantine to his troops.

Naturally all sorts of reasons are advanced to explain why the Greeks retreated, the more candid admitting that the Turks were too strong. It is also pointed out that the Turkish cavalry did much to turn the scale in favor of Edhem Pasha.

The Greek fleet is also the subject of many curious reports, one of which asserts that the eastern squadron has bombarded Dedeagach. It is known that the Turks yesterday ordered that all the lanterns in the lighthouses on the Gulf of Salouica should remain unlighted. Five ironclads and four torpedo boats are operating along the coast between Platamona and Katerina. The British and French subjects residing at Volo have addressed their respective envoys here, begging for the dispatch of war ships to Volo to protect them. The envoys have wired to their governments and to the consuls at Canea, but at Athens it is considered unnecessary to comply with the request, as an attack upon Volo is no part of the Turkish programme.

The triumph of the Turkish arms has caused the liveliest satisfaction here. The following telegram from Edhem Pasha is posted everywhere:

"Larissa was occupied Sunday by the cavalry of the imperial army. The Hellenite troops fled in disorder, abandoning a large quantity of arms and ammunition."

This has been put up as a bulletin in many places, while the people are also reading Edhem Pasha's dispatch announcing his possession of a strategic position in front of Tyrnavo, which is as follows:

The hill of Lesdaki, the most important dominant point to the north of Larissa, was taken by the Ottoman troops on Friday. Hamid Pasha's division having left Koskesi (Karya), effected a juncture with the other imperial troops at Milloorin. The town of Tyrnavo, which is situated two hours from Larissa, was occupied Sunday by the Elassona army corps.

The Ottoman troops continue to advance toward the plain of Larissa.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The Turkish legation received the following dispatch from Constantinople:

"The imperial troops took in Tyrnavo a great quantity of rifles and ammunition for cannon and rifles, also provisions. The Greek soldiers who were taken prisoners were sent to Elassona. The village has been surrounded by a military cordon. Ottoman patriots make continual rounds and efficient measures have been taken to prevent any depredations. The wise and proper behavior of our troops has been the subject of admiration of the foreigners who are on the spot."

ROME, April 26.—L'Opinione semi-officially says Monday morning: The hour is grave for Greece. Her abandonment of Larissa is more than a defeat. It is a demonstration of impotence, and its consequences are incalculable unless she has the courage to negotiate and to withdraw her troops from Crete.

The Canadian Tariff.

LONDON, April 26.—The Times will say editorially Monday: "The presentation of the consideration of Canadian tariff is beyond doubt the most remarkable step yet made towards financial legislation in the British empire. We much regret to see the attitude Mr. Foster has taken towards it.

THE BANKRUPTCY BILL.

The Measure Provides That Any Debtor, Other Than a Corporation,

Owing Over $200, May File His Petition Offering to Surrender All His Property for the Payment of His Debts, Except Such as Is Exempt.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The bankruptcy bill passed by the senate Thursday was framed by Senator Nelson, of Minnesota, and is simple compared with the Torrey bill. The bill provides that any debtor other than a corporation owing $200 or more who is unable to pay his debts may file his petition in the district court of the United States offering to surrender all his property for the payment of his debts except such as is exempt by the law of his domicile.

The petition shall give a schedule of all property, exempt and unexempt, and of all creditors and the amount and nature of the debts, and the petitioner shall offer to surrender all his unexempt property for a full discharge from his debts and liabilities. The petition shall be heard by the court in not less than 30 or more than 90 days. If the court upholds the petition the estate is transferred to an "assignee" for settlement, creditors can resist the proceedings before the court on certain enumerated grounds of fraud, preference to creditors, etc. Preferences four months prior to filing bankruptcy petitions are void and transfers of property within six months are void. Provision is made for distributing the estate among creditors. After the settlement, the court gives a final decree, discharging the bankrupt from all liabilities to any of the creditors described in the schedule who may become a party to the proceedings. But such discharges shall not include any obligations which shall have been created in consequence of his defalcation as a public officer, or as an executor, administrator, guardian or trustee, or while acting in any other fiduciary capacity; nor any debtor obligation to any surety of the bankrupt who has paid or may pay any such fiduciary debtor any part of it, nor any debtor obligation created by the obtaining of moneys or property under false pretenses. The provision as to involuntary bankruptcy is that if any debtor being a banker, broker, merchant, trader or manufacturer who owes $500 or over, shall, at any time within four months of the time of the filing of the petition, convey or voluntarily encumber any of his property with the purpose to prefer or defraud any of his creditors, he shall be deemed a bankrupt. Creditors having debts against such a bankrupt to the amount of $500 may, within four months after the act of bankruptcy has been admitted, file in the court a petition for an adjudication of bankruptcy.

The court then proceeds within 30 days to hear the case. The accused may demand a jury. On the hearing the court or jury holds whether the accused is or is not a bankrupt. Fees in both classes of bankruptcy are provided, viz: Attorney fees not above $100; assignee not above $3 per day. Appeals are allowed except when entire bankrupt estate is under $5,000.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—The president Thursday sent to the senate the following nominations:

Harold M. Sewall, of Maine, to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United State to Hawaii; Thomas H. Phair, of Maine, collector of customs, district of Aristook, Maine; James S. Harriman, of Maine, collector of customs, district of Belfast, Maine.

Mr. Allen spoke in favor of its adoption. The resolution was referred to the foreign relations committee.

The senate committee on Indian affairs Thursday reported favorably the nomination of Wm. A. Jones, of Wisconsin, to be commissioner of Indian affairs.

Two attempts were made to break in the jail. The second attack was made by a mob of 500 men, who overpowered the jailers and hung the prisoner to a lamp post.

The insurance will amount to $40,000.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—SENATE—The senate passed the Indian appropriation bill Monday. It is substantially the same as when it passed the house, and can occasion little division save on the amendment opening the Oncompahgre Indian reservation. Resolutions of inquiry were agreed to asking the secretary of state as to the operation of the reciprocity treaties made under the McKinley act. Mr. Vest introduced a resolution declaring illegal the recent order of the secretary of the treasury relative to imports arriving after April 1. The senator gave notice of pressing the resolution Tuesday and it may afford another test on the tariff. After the executive session the senate adjourned as a mark of respect to Representative Milliken, deceased. A resolution for a committee of five senators to inquire into the issuance of land patents to the Pacific railroads and to the California & Oregon railroad and the amounts of subsidies paid to the Pacific Mail Steamship Co. was favorably reported, but on suggestion of Mr. Stewart (Nev.) went over. During debate on the Indian bill Mr. Allen (pop., Neb.) offered an amendment for the establishment of an Indian supply warehouse at Omaha.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—SENATE—Senator Morgan's resolution declaring that a state of war exists in Cuba was discussed briefly in the senate Tuesday and then went over for a week, owing to the absence of Senator Hale, of Maine, who has been active in opposition. Mr. Morgan again urged the need of speedy action by this country to stay the devastation in Cuba. The resolution went over. The agricultural appropriation bill was then taken up and passed without amendment. At 1:40 p. m. the senate went into executive session, and at 2 o'clock the senate resumed legislative session and the bankruptcy bill was formally laid before the senate. In the course of the debate Mr. Allen (pop., Neb.) announced that he would obstruct in every possible way any bankruptcy bill which included involuntary bankruptcy. Mr. Nelson (rep., Minn.) amended his substitute bill so as to overcome criticisms heretofore made. Mr. Morgan gave notice that he would seek to secure a test on the pending Nelson substitute by moving at 4 p. m. Wednesday to lay the substitute on the table. Mr. Bacon (dem., Ga.) submitted numerous amendments modifying the stringency of the original bill as applicable to debtors.

HOUSE—Not in session.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—SENATE—Most of the day was given to the bankruptcy bill. The vote on the substitute and amendments will be taken up at 3 p. m. Thursday. It was agreed that a committee of 15 senators should represent the senate at the coming Grant memorial ceremonies. Senator Mason, of Illinois, made his maiden speech in the senate Wednesday and signified it by some breezy criticism on the rules of the senate. The speech was in support of a resolution introduced by the Illinois senator directing the committee on rules to report a rule by which debate could be closed and the previous question ordered. Mr. Hoar (Mass.) replied briefly, pointing out that the other branch of congress was more open to criticism than the senate. He was in accord with Mr. Mason, however, on the merits of new rules. A vote was taken on Mr. Gorman's motion to refer the Mason resolution to the rules committee, which prevailed, yeas 32, nays 23. No further discussion of the subject is promised as Mr. Hoar has a pending resolution to discharge the committee on rules from further considering the reform of the rules.

HOUSE—The chaplain of the house, Mr. Coudon, in his prayer Wednesday gave thanks that this nation was at peace with all others and prayed that higher and holier methods than war might prevail everywhere. He prayed for the friends of Representative Milliken, of Maine, who died Sunday and whose desk was draped in black and covered with flowers. The death of Mr. Milliken was announced by Mr. Dingley, and out of respect the house at 12:10 p. m. adjourned until Thursday.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—SENATE—The Nelson bankruptcy bill was passed Thursday afternoon. Mr. Allen (Neb.) offered the resolution providing that the chief executive express the sympathy of the American people to the government of Greece. Referred. The "free homestead" bill was made the unfinished business of the senate. A committee of 15 senators was named to participate in the Grant memorial exercises. On the announcement of the death of Representative Holman, the senate adjourned as a mark of respect, the adjournment being until next Monday.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—SENATE—The senate on Thursday adopted a special order for the consideration of the senate amendments of the Indian appropriation bill without reference to a committee. Mr. Bland, of Missouri, protested vigorously against the course, but only had a following of 34, not enough to get a second vote. Mr. Simpson, of Kansas, is out of the city, therefore was not in the senate. The senate amendments of minor importance were concurred in except that removing the Indian supply depot from Chicago to Omaha. The amendment relative to the opening of the Uncompahgre reservation was not acted upon Thursday. While it was being debated the death of Judge Holman was announced, and as a mark of respect the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON, April 24.—HOUSE—The house Friday completed the consideration of the senate amendments to the Indian appropriation bill and sent the bill to conference. The main contention, as on Thursday, centered about the senate proposition to open the Uncompahgre Indian reservation under the mineral land laws. Finally an amendment was recommended to the effect that no corporation should be allowed to obtain possession of these gilsonite deposits, but that government should lease the lands in limited areas and for limited terms of years. The senate amendment striking from the house the bill provision for the ratification of the oil and gas rights made by the chiefs of the Seneca Indians last December, after a sharp debate, was disagreed to. Mr. Bland, of Missouri, attempted early in the session to secure action on the resolution relative to the Union Pacific railroad mortgages which he tried to offer last week, but the speaker ruled that the resolution was not privileged. A resolution was adopted by which a committee of 25 was appointed to attend the dedication of the Grant tomb in New York on Tuesday and the house agreed to a programme of three days' adjournments for next week.

The White Squadron.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The White Squadron left its anchorage off Tompkinsville, Staten Island, early Sunday morning and sailed up the North river to its new anchorage off Grant's Tomb, where it will remain until Wednesday or Thursday. Large crowds gathered at the battery and on the piers of the North river front to see the vessels pass. The New York, the flagship of the squadron, with Adm. Bunce in command, took the lead, and the dispatch boat, Dolphin, from which President McKinley will review the naval parade, brought up the rear.

It was a remarkable freeze for the time of year.—Trimble Banner.

Mr. S. H. Goodin, proprietor of the ferry at Taylorsport, has equipped his ferry with a first-class new, steam boat, and greatly improved the wharf on each side of the river. He has spared no expense to make his one of the best boats on the river, and thus the farmers in the northern part of the county have opened up to them almost at their doors, good markets for their produce in the thriving towns of Addyston, Delhi, Home City and Fern Bank, which will save them the loug haul to Cincinnati. Mr. Goodin's enterprise should be supported by the Boone county people.

R. E. Cloud, James L. Clore, Waller Campbell and Wood Maxwell, saw a strange light passing over the Woolper neighborhood, last Thursday night about eight o'clock. It traveled in a northern direction. To Mr. Cloud it appeared about the size of a locomotive headlight. Clore and Maxwell thought it a star when they first saw it, but after watching it a few minutes they changed their notion, as it traveled too slow and changed its course. No outlines of anything that appeared to be supporting the light were noticed. The above are truthful people and their statements can be relied on, besides they were not together when they saw the strange light. Richard Underhill saw the mysterious light the same night that Ed Hawes saw it week before last, and he and Hawes agree as to time and the place of seeing it.

Last Wednesday afternoon this community was shocked by the report that Benjamin Rice, an old and highly respected citizen residing three miles out on the East Bend road, had committed suicide by cutting his throat with a razor. Mr. Rice was about the premises as usual up to 1:30 o'clock that day, when he was seen alive for the last time. His daughter, Miss Lucy, was engaged cleaning the yard when he disappeared, and after he had been gone some time, something was said to those assisting her in her work about his prolonged absence, when someone remarked, possibly, he had gone up to Mr. Henry Clore's, a neighbor whose residence was only a few hundred yards distant. Nothing more was thought about Mr. Rice's absence until late in the afternoon, when his failing to return, caused a search for him to be instituted, and in a short time his body was discovered lying on the ground behind the meat house near the kitchen, where it evidently had laid ever since a very short time after his disappearance about 1 p. m. The alarm was given, and in a short time several of the neighbors came in and the body was removed to the house and prepared for burial, and Esq. O. W. Gaines sent for to hold an inquest. which he did Thursday about noon, the jury finding that Mr. Rice came to his death from cutting his own throat.

Everything about Mr. Rice when found indicated that the rash act was committed in a most deliberate manner. He laid his cane and hat upon a chunk upon which he sat, unbuttoned the clothing about his neck, when he took a razor with which he had been shaving many years, and severed the gullet and both jugular veins, after which he pitched forward on his face, in which position he was found cold and stiff in death. Strange to say although a vast quantity of blood flowed from the wound, very little of it was on his clothing. Since the sad occurrence many remarks made by Mr. Rice in the last few months have been thought of by those to whom he talked, that now clearly indicate that he had been contemplating suicide for some time. Only a few weeks since his son Robert visited him and found him very despondent, and when he left for home, he said to him that he never expected to see him again.

Mr. Rice was a native of this county, being born in the Richwood neighborhood, April 9th, 1824, consequently he was a few days over 73 years of age. On the 11th day of June, 1846, he and Miss Ann Utz, daughter of the late Jonas Utz, were married. To them were born eight children, six of whom are living, W. J., M. S., B. P., John J. and Lucy. Mrs. Rice died several years ago. Mr. Rice was, and has been for many years, a member of the Burlington, Baptist church. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. T. L. Utz at the residence at 2 p. m., last Friday, after which the remains were consigned to their last resting place by the side of the wife in the family cemetery on the homestead.

In the death of Benjamin Rice the county looes a good citizen and neighbor, his children a loving and indulgent father. He was held in high esteem by his neighbors among whom he lived many, many years, and by them he will always be remembered as an honest, upright, good man.

Circuit Court.

In the suit to settle the estate of the late James L. Henderson, the claim of John L. Henderson for $822 25 for services rendered in taking care of his father during his last illness was scaled down to $400, which amount was allowed against the estate.

The Powers will case was on trial when we went to press, last week. It was concluded late Thursday afternoon by a verdict setting the will aside, the verdict being signed by 10 of the jurors. Jeffrey Powers, an aged citizen of Verona, the father of three living sons and two daughters, died in 1889, having on July 3d of that year made a will, disposing of his estate amounting to a considerable sum, probably $15,000. By the provisions of the will his two sons, John and Will, were cut out entirely. The will was probated in the Boone County Court in 1891, and in 1894, John and Will Powers began their contest, alleging that their father's will was the result of undue influence on the part of their mother and two sisters. There was one trial of the case previous to last week, the jury failing to agree upon a verdict. At the term of court just closed, the trial consumed two and a half days, resulting in a verdict as above stated. An appeal to the Court of Appeals was granted.

There was a large amouut of old business disposed of at the last term.

J. B. Berkshire renewed his bond as Master Commissioner.

Court adjourned Friday at 9 o'clock.

Montgomery Anderson, Geo. W. Anderson and Chas. Scott, of the Constance district, and Henry Tanner and James Carpenter, of Florence, were among the visitors to town Monday.

Will and Hugh Arnold, of Bellevue, were in town Monday. They have on hand yet about 15 hogsheads of the large crop of fine tobacco they raised last year. They have hung it up to redry.

W. M. Rogers, of Walton, was in town yesterday, and said they had been very uneasy about Charlie Roberts, and that a doctor from Cincinnati was called in consultation. He was some better yesterday.

Atty. J. G. Tomlin, of Walton, was in town yesterday, and when asked in regard to the gas well at that place, he said the owners came out from the city and plugged it up, and went away, saying it had failed, but the citizens there do not believe it.

Sheriff Roberts and family went to the Walton neighborhood, last Friday, to spend a few days, and that night Mr. Roberts was taken very sick at Mr. W. M. Rogers' (his father-in-law), and has not been able to return, and will not be for several days, as he is yet a very sick man.

Mr. David Riggs, of Erlanger, is being urged by many of his Republican friends to become a candidate to represent Kenton county in the next Legislature. If Kenton will persist in sending Republicans to the legislature, we would be glad to see her honor Mr. Riggs with the office.

It is a revelation to most people to know that such railway equipment exists south of the Ohio river as that of the Queen and Crescent Route. The block system; electric equipments such as track signals, electric headlights and crossing gongs; together with a perfectly lined rock-ballasted roadbed, all provide for the swift and safe movement of passenger trains of the most luxurious pattern. The Vestibule Limited leaves Chattanooga over the Queen and Crescent Route daily, on schedules which each year are made a little shorter, through scenery which is unsurpassed. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

Sorrow Made Very Beautiful the Character of Ruth.

Trouble, the Great Educator—Through Darkness and Storm, Calamity, Men and Nations are Developed—A Lesson Drawn From Ruth's Sufferings.

The text of Dr. Talmage's sermon Sunday was Ruth ii, 3: "And she went, and came, and gleaned in the field after the reapers; and her hap was to light on a part of the field belonging unto Boaz, who was of the kindred of Elimelech."

The time that Ruth and Naomi arrived at Bethlehem is harvest time. It was the custom when a sheaf fell from a load in the harvest field, for the reapers to refuse to gather it up; that was to be left for the poor who might happen to come along that way. If there were handfuls of grain scattered across the field after the harvest had been reaped, instead of raking it, as farmers do now, it was, by the custom of the land, left in its place, so that the poor, coming along that way, might glean it and get their bread. But, you say: "What is the use of all these harvest fields to Ruth and Naomi? Naomi is too old and feeble to get out and toil in the sun; and can you expect that Ruth, the young and beautiful, should tan her cheeks and blister her hands in the harvest field?"

Boaz owns a large farm and he goes out to see the reapers gather in the grain. Coming there, right behind the swarthy, sun-browned reapers, he beholds a beautiful woman gleaning—a woman more fit to bend to a harp or sit upon a throne than to stoop among the sheaves. Ah, that was an eventful day!

It was love at first sight. Boaz forms an attachment for the womanly gleaner—an attachment full of undying interest to the Church of God in all ages, while Ruth, with an ephah, or nearly a bushel of barley, goes home to Naomi to tell her the successes and adventures of the day. That Ruth, who left her native land of Moab in darkness, and traveled through an undying affection for her mother-in-law, is in the harvest field of Boaz, is affianced to one of the best families in Judah, and becomes in aftertime the ancestress of Jesus Christ, the Lord of Glory! Out of so dark a night did there ever dawn so bright a morning?

I learn, in the first place, from this subject how trouble develops character. It was bereavement, poverty and exile that developed, illustrated and announced to all ages the sublimity of Ruth's character. That is a very unfortunate man who has no trouble. It was sorrow that made John Bunyan the better dreamer, and Dr. Young the better poet, and O'Connell the better orator, and Bishop Hall the better preacher, and Havelock the better soldier, and Kitto the better encyclopaedist, and Ruth the better daughter-in-law.

I once asked an aged man in regard to his pastor, who was a very brilliant man, "why is it that your pastor, so very brilliant, seems to have so little heart and tenderness in his sermons?" "Well," he replied, "the reason is, our pastor has never had any trouble. When misfortune comes upon him, his style will be different." After awhile the Lord took a child out of that pastor's house, and though the preacher was just as brilliant as he was before, oh, the warmth, the tenderness of his discourses! The fact is, that trouble is a great educator.

You see sometimes a musician sit down at an instrument, and his execution is cold and formal and unfeeling. The reason is that all his life he has been prospered. But let misfortune or bereavement come to that man, and he sits down at the instrument, and you discover the pathos in the first sweep of the keys.

Misfortune and trials are great educators. A young doctor comes into a sick room where there is a dying child. Perhaps he is very rough in his manner, and rough in the feeling of the pulse, and rough in his answer to the mother's anxious question: but years roll on, and there has been one dead in his own house; and now he comes into the sick room, and with tearful eye he looks at the dying child, and he says, "Oh, how this reminds me of my Charlie!" Trouble, the great educator. Sorrow—I see its touch in the grandest painting; I hear its tremor in the sweetest song; I feel its power in the mightiest argument.

Grecian mythology said that the fountain of Hippocrene was struck out by the foot of the winged horse Pegasus. I have often noticed in life that the brightest and most beautiful fountains of Christian comfort and spiritual life have been struck out by the iron-shod hoof of disaster and calamity. I see Daniel's courage best by the flash of Nebuchadnezzar's furnace. I see Paul's prowess best when I find him on the foundering ship under the glare of the lightning in the breakers of Melita. God crowns his children amid the howling of wild beasts and the chopping of blood-splashed guillotine and the crackling fires of martyrdom. It took the persecutors of Marcus Aurelius to develop Polycarp and Justin Martyr. It took all the hostilities against the Scotch Covenanters and the fury of Lord Claverhouse to develop James Renwick and Andrew Melville and Hugh McKail, the glorious martyrs of Scotch history. It took the stormy sea and the December blast, and the desolate New England coast, and the warhoop of savages to show forth the prowess of the Pilgrim Fathers.

When amid the storms they sang.
And the stars heard, and the sea;
And the sounding aisles of the dim wood
Rang to the anthems of the free.

It took all our past national distresses, and it takes all our present national sorrows to lift up our nation on that high career where it will march long after the foreign aristocracies that have mocked and tyrannies that have jeered shall be swept down under the omnipotent wrath of God, who hates despotism, and who, by the strength of His own red right arm, will make all men free. And so it is individually, and in the family, and in the church, and in the world, that through darkness and storm and trouble men, women, churches, nations are developed.

Again, I see in my text the beauty of unfaltering friendship. I suppose there were plenty of friends for Naomi while she was in prosperity; but of all her acquaintances how many were willing to trudge off with her toward Judah when she had to make that lonely journey? One—the heroine of my text. One—absolutely one. I suppose when Naomi's husband was living, and they had plenty of money and all things went well, they had a great many callers; but I suppose that after her husband died, and her property went, and she got old and poor, she was not troubled very much with callers. All the birds that sang in the bower while the sun shone have gone to their nests, now that the night has fallen.

Oh, these beautiful sunflowers that spread out their color in the morning hour! But they are always asleep when the sun is going down! Job had plenty of friends when he was the richest man in Uz; but when his property went and the trials came, then there were none so much that pestered as Eliphaz, the Temanite, and Bildad, the Shumite, and Zophar, the Naamathite.

Life often seems to be a mere game, where the successful player pulls down all the other men into his own lap. Let suspicions arise about a man's character, and he becomes like a bank in a panic, and all the imputations rush on him and break down in a day that character which in the time would have had strength to defend itself. There have been reputations that have been half a century in building which go down under one push, as a vast temple is consumed by the touch of a sulphurous match. A hog can uproot a century plant.

In this world, so full of heartlessness and hypocrisy, how thrilling it is to find some friend as faithful in days of adversity as in day of prosperity? David had such a friend in Mordecai, who never forgot their cause; Paul had such a friend in Onesiphorus, who visited him in jail; Christ had such in the Marys, who adhered to Him on the cross; Naomi had such a one in Ruth, who cried out: "Entreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee; for whither thou goest, I will go; and whither thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God; where thou diest will I die, and there will I be buried; the Lord do so to me and more also, if aught but death part thee and me."

Again, I learn from this subject that paths which open in hardship and darkness often come out in places of joy. When Ruth started from Moab toward Jerusalem to go along with her mother-in-law I suppose the people said: "Oh, what a foolish creature to go away from her father's house to go off with a poor old woman toward the land of Judah! They won't live to get across the desert. They will be drowned in the sea, or the ghouls of the wilderness will destroy them." It was a very dark morning when Ruth started off with Naomi, but behold her in my text in the harvest field of Boaz, to be affianced to one of the lords of the land and become one of the grandmothers of Jesus Christ, the Lord of Glory. And so it often is that a path which often starts very darkly ends very brightly.

When you started out for Heaven, oh, how dark was the hour of conviction—how Sinai thundered, and devils fomented, and the darkness thickened! All the sins of your life pounced upon you, and it was the darkest hour you ever saw when you first found out your sins. After awhile you went into the harvest field of God's mercy; you began to glean in the fields of divine promise, and you had more sheaves than you could carry, as the voice of God addressed you, saying: "Blessed is the man whose transgressions are forgiven and whose sins are covered." A very dark starting in conviction, a very bright ending in the pardon and the hope and the triumph of the Gospel!

So, very often in our worldly business or in our spiritual career, we start off on a very dark path. We must go. The flesh may shrink back, but there is a voice within or a voice from above saying, "You must go," and we have to drink the gall, and we have to carry the cross, and we have to traverse the desert, and we are pounded and flailed of misrepresentation and abuse, and we have to urge our way through 10,000 obstacles that have been slain by our own right arm. We have to ford the river, we have to storm the castle, but blessed be the God, the day of rest and reward will come. On the tip-top of the captured battlements we will shout the victory; if not in this world, then in that world where there is no gall to drink, no burdens to carry.

How do I know it? Know it! I know it because God says so: "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst no more, neither shall the sun shine on them, nor any heat, for the lamb that is in the midst of the throne shall lead them to living fountains of water, and God shall wipe all tears from their eyes."

It was very hard for Noah to endure the scoffing of the people in his day while he was trying to build the ark, and was every morning quizzed about his old boat that would never be of any practical use, but when the deluge came and the tops of the mountains disappeared like the backs of sea monsters and the elements, lashed up in fury, clapped their hands over a drowned world, then Noah in the ark rejoiced in his own safety and in the safety of his family, and looked out on the wreck of a ruined earth.

Christ, hounded of persecutors, denied a pillow, worse maltreated than the thieves on either side of the cross, human hate smacking its lips in satisfaction after it had been draining his last drop of blood, the sheeted dead bursting from the sepulchers at his crucifixion. Tell me, O Gethsemane and Golgotha, were there ever darker times than those? Like the booming of the midnight sea against the rock, the surges of Christ's anguish beat against the gates of eternity, to be echoed back by all the thrones of Heaven and all the dungeons of hell. But the day of reward comes for Christ; all the pomp and dominion of this world are to be hung on His throne; crowned heads are to bow before Him on whose head are many crowns, and all the celestial worship is to come up at His feet, like the humming of the forest, like the rushing of the waters, like the thundering of the seas, while all Heaven, rising on their thrones, beat time with their scepters: "Hallelujah, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

That song of love, now low and far,
Ere long shall swell from star to star;
That light, the breaking day watch tips
The golden-spired Apocalypse.

Again, I learn from my subject that events which seem to be most insignificant may be momentous. Can you imagine anything more unimportant than the coming of a poor woman from Moab to Judah? Can you imagine anything more trivial than the fact that this Ruth just happened to alight—as they say—just happened to alight on that field of Boaz? Yet all ages, all generations, have an interest in the fact that she was to become an ancestress of the Lord Jesus Christ, and all nations and kingdoms must look at that one little incident with a thrill of unspeakable supernal satisfaction. So it is in your history and in mine, events that you thought of no importance at all have been of no very great moment. That casual conversation, that accidental meeting—you did not think of it again for a long while: but how it changed all the phases of your life!

It seemed to be of no importance that Jubal invented rude instruments of music, calling them harp and organ: but they were the introduction of all the world's minstrelsy; and as you hear the vibration of a stringed instrument, even after the fingers have been taken away from it, so all music now of lute and drum and cornet is only the long-continued strains of Jubal's harp and Jubal's organ. It seemed that Tubal Cain learned the uses of copper and iron; but that rude foundry of ancient days has its echo in the rattle of Birmingham machinery, and the roar and bang of factories on the Merrimac.

It seemed to be a matter of no importance that Luther found a Bible in a monastery, but as he opened that Bible and the brass-bound lids fell back, they jarred everything, and the rustling of the wormed leaves was the sound of the wings of the angel of the Reformation. It seemed to be a matter of no importance that a woman, whose name has been forgotten, dropped a tract in the way of a very bad man by the name of Richard Baxter. He picked up the tract and read it, and it was the means of his salvation. In after days that man wrote a book called "The Call to the Unconverted," that was the means of bringing a multitude to God, among others Philip Doddridge. Philip Doddridge wrote a book call "The Rise and Progress of Religion," which has brought thousands and tens of thousands into the kingdom of God, and among others the great Wilberforce. Wilberforce wrote a book called "A Practical View of Christianity," which was the means of bringing a vast multitude to Christ, among others Leigh Richmond. Leigh Richmond wrote a tract called "The Dairyman's Daughter," which has been the means of the salvation of unconverted multitudes. And that tide of influence started from the fact that one Christian woman dropped a Christian tract in the way of Richard Baxter, the tide of influence rolling on through Richard Baxter, through Philip Doddridge, through the great Wilberforce, through Leigh Richmond, on, on, on, forever, forever. So the insignificant events of the world seem, after all, to be most momentous.

Again, I see in my subject an illustration of the beauty of female industry.

Behold Ruth toiling in the harvest field under the hot sun, or at noon taking plain bread with the reapers, or eating the parched corn which Boaz handed to her. The customs of society, of course, have changed, and without the hardships and exposure to which Ruth was subjected, every intelligent woman will find something to do.

I know there is a sickly sentimentality on this subject. In some families there are persons of no practical service to the household or community; and though there are so many woes all around about them in the world, they spend their time languishing over a new pattern or bursting into tears at midnight over the story of some lover who shot himself! They would not deign to look at Ruth carrying back the barley on her way home to her mother-in-law, Naomi. All this fastidiousness may seem to do very well while they are under the shelter of their father's house; but when the sharp winter of misfortune comes, what of these butterflies? Persons under indulgent parentage may get upon themselves habits of indolence, but when they come out into practical life their soul will recoil with disgust and chagrin. They will feel in their hearts what the poet so severely satirized when he said:

"Folks are so awkward, things so impolite.
They're elegantly pained from morning until night."

Through that gate of indolence how many men and women have marched, useless on earth, to a destroyed eternity! Spinola said to Sir Horace Vere: "Of what did your brother die?" "Of having nothing to do," was the answer. "Oh!" said Spinola, "that's enough to kill any general of us." Oh can it be possible in this world, where there is so much suffering to be alleviated, so much darkness to be enlightened, and so many burdens to be carried, that there is any person who can not find anything to do?

MOST INTERESTIN' BURYIN'.

Incident Was Told in a South Carolina Churchyard.

"Been through the bury'n ground? I know about most all the fine monuments," volunteers the boss after the church has been inspected. He is dressed in a full suit of blue jeans. He is healthy looking, long-legged and gaunt and a broad-brimmed felt hat and drooping black mustache seem in keeping with his swinging gait and odd, drawling accents. He fairly beams upon finding that his services as guide are acceptable.

"This is a mighty tasty stone," he comments, laying his brown hand on a marble shaft. "They give out that it cost $90. It's tolerable plain for that, but then the Griggses mostly has things plain. They say Miss Griggs wanted a harp on it, and it wouldn't have cost no more either, but old man Griggs he jist shut up like a steel trap at the notion of a harp. He 'lowed they could git this monument (with a stress on the "ment") or none at all. 'Twas Miss Griggs' sister what died. She took a heavy cold 'long about March.

"I take it that that there grave is the most interestin' bury in' 'mongst the whole lot," he goes on, leading the way to a spot between two tall pines, where the ground is thickly covered with brown pine needles. "That was a duel. The fight come off toward sundown, up in the mountains, and this fellow was hauled here in a wagon and buried quick, after 12 o'clock at night. You see, it was against the law then, in them wayback days, to fight, and the one what did the killin', he and the seconds was anxious to git across into Georgia before the business leaked out. I disremember the names now, but they were big people; one was a governor from up here by Greenville somewheres. The dead man was brought along on a common wagon, and there wasn't time for no funeral nor nothin'. Some pine tops, green, fresh-broke pine tops, was throwed on top of the wagon body, to make things look better. After the grave was filled up, in their hurry like, out not likin' to leave it with no mark to know it by, they took two of the pine tops and stuck 'em up, one to the head and one to the foot. Those two trees is them same pine tops. Seems like the Lord Almighty let 'em grow purpose to keep that sin een mind."

"What was the cause of the quarrel?" he is asked.

"It ain't exactly knowed for sure. Some holds out it was about a boundary line twixt two plantations, and I've heard it said it was a old election squabble. Anyway, the dead man was fixin' to marry soon, and his sweetheart never did git over it to enjoy herself no more."—N. Y. Post.

OUR FRIENDS' FAULTS.

We Should Try to Keep Them in the Background.

It is related of Alexander the Great that upon a certain occasion, when he requested a famous artist to paint his portrait, he said: "I have never had a satisfactory picture. If you can hide that scar," lifting his finger to mark his face, "and give me a good picture, you will not only increase your renown, but I promise you a fortune beside." The sequel is that the artist so thoroughly succeeded in bringing out prominently the leading characteristics of Alexander, at the same time hiding the scar, which if seen would mar the pleasure of looking at the portrait and detract from the full appreciation of his most noble qualities, that the conqueror was not only delighted and satisfied, but he also carried out to the letter his promises of fortune and fame.

In this little anecdote is contained a good precept for the guidance of friends. It is characteristic of some people to magnify "scars." It is true that about us there are not many people who can be called perfect, yet if others tried as assiduously to extol their virtues and good qualities as sometimes they seem to strive to remind them and others of their faults and failings, what a wonderful change the world would see! There would be little motive for family or social gossip, for our "scars" would either fade or be altogether concealed. Indeed, some of our acquaintances would hardly be recognized; but, on the other hand, it would be a pleasure to know that there are among us some, who, like Alexander's good portrait painter, find pleasure in thus hiding the scars and bringing out the best that may be discovered in friends and acquaintances. This hiding of the faults and weaknesses of our friends is a rare and beautiful trait of character. It is a friendly virtue which we should study to cultivate; for in speaking of one's friends it is always an after-satisfaction to remember that we have dealt kindly in their behalf.—Boston Budget.

To Preserve Flowers' Colors.

The natural colors of flowers may be preserved with almost their original brilliancy after being dried very thoroughly in sand. The Gardeners' Monthly, which suggests this simple process for manufacturing artificial flowers, states that the most delicate flowers can be made in this way to look for several years as though they had been freshly gathered. The flowers should be placed in a pan or other dish and covered with perfectly clean, dry sand. This should be sifted over the flower so as not to break or bruise the petals. Every chink and cranny should be filled without disturbing the natural position of the leaves. When the pan is full and every crevice has been filled solidly the flowers are allowed to dry for several days. It is often found effective to warm the sand and keep the buried flowers in a warm oven. The sand should then be removed, great care being taken not to break or tear the leaves, which will be very brittle.—N. Y. World.

DIAMONDS OF GOLCONDA.

Marco Polo's Account of Them Reads Like One of Sinbad's Tales.

It is in this kingdom that diamonds are got; and I will tell you how. There are certain lofty mountains in those parts; and when the winter rains fall, which are very heavy, the waters come rushing down the mountains in great torrents. When the rains are over, and the waters from the mountains have ceased to flow, they search the beds of the torrents and find plenty of diamonds. In summer also there are plenty to be found in the mountains, but the heat of the sun is so great that it is scarcely possible to go thither, nor is there then a drop of water to be found. Moreover, in those mountains great serpents are rife to a marvelous degree, besides other vermin, and this owing to the great heat. The serpents are also the most venomous in existence, so that anyone going there runs fearful peril; for many have been destroyed by these evil reptiles.

Now among these mountains there are certain great and deep valleys, to the bottom of which there is no access. Wherefore the men who go in search of the diamonds take with them pieces of flesh, as lean as they can get, and these they cast into the bottom of the valley. Now there are numbers of white eagles that haunt these mountains and feed upon the serpents. When the eagles see the meat thrown down, they pounce upon it, and carry it up some rocky hill-top, where they begin to rend it. But there are men on the watch, and as soon as they see that the eagles have settled, they raise a loud shouting to drive them away. And when the eagles are thus frightened away the men recover the pieces of meat, and find them full of diamonds which have stuck to the meat down in the bottom. For the abundance of diamonds down there in the depths of the valley is astonishing, but nobody can get down; and if one could, it would be only to be at once devoured by the serpents which are so rife there.

There is another way of getting the diamonds. The people go to the nests of those white eagles, of which there are many, and find plenty of diamonds which the birds have carried off with the meat that was cast into the valleys. And when the eagles themselves are taken diamonds are found in their stomachs.

So now I have told you three different ways in which these stones are found. No other country but this kingdom of Mutfili produces them, but there they are found both abundantly and of large size. Those that are brought to our part of the world are only the refuse, as it were, of the finer and larger stones. For the flower of the diamonds and other large gems, as well as the largest pearls, are all carried to the great khan and other kings and princes of those regions; in truth, they possess all the great treasures of the world. —Noah Brooks, in St. Nicholas.

MOHAMMED'S COAT.

Sacred Relic to Which the Sultan Annually Pays His Devotion.

No more striking illustration of the alarming condition of affairs that prevail just now at Constantinople could be afforded than the fact that the sultan should have considered it necessary to proceed by water, instead of by land, from his residence at the Yildiz Kiosk to the old seraglio for the purpose of paying his annual devotion to the holy coat of Mohammed, which is preserved in a great box in the innermost sanctuary of the imperial treasury. The extent to which this garment is venerated by all believers may be estimated by the fact that the principal and most highly cherished title of the sultan is that of "guardian of the holy mantle." This robe, which it is needless to say is green, was brought to Constantinople by Sultan Selim along with the keys of the holy cities of Medina and Meeca, from Cairo, where they had been preserved until that time in the keeping of the caliphs.

This worship of the mantle by the sultan is the most solemn and important religious function which the Turkish ruler is called upon to perform throughout the year, and, as a general rule, his majesty's progress from the Yildiz Kiosk to the Sublime Porte is marked by a magnificent display of troops four or five ranks deep, who line the entire route on either side.

This year, for the first time since his accession to the throne more than 20 years ago, the sultan, through dread of assassination, has abandoned the customary procession by land, and has gone by water instead, furtively and almost by stealth, the public being led till the last moment to believe by the military display that the sultan was about to proceed to the old seraglio in the usual manner.—Chicago Record.

Discovery of Platinum.

Platinum was first discovered early in the sixteenth century in a Spanish mine of South America, from which source it receives its name, "platina del Pinto"—little silver from the River Pinto. It is the rarest and most peculiar of metals. In contradistinction to aluminium, the lightest, it is the heaviest of metals. It is twice as heavy as silver and nearly three times heavier than cast iron. Platinum is almost as soft as copper and as ductile as gold. It can be rolled into sheets so thin that 1,000 of them piled on top of each other would not exceed an inch in height. The average imports of platinum to this country are valued at nearly $2,000,000 a year.—N. Y. Herald.

FASCINATIONS OF POISONS.

Men Who Make Cyanide of Potassium Are Strangely Tempted to Eat It.

There is a factory in London that makes only the deadliest poisons known to chemistry. Last year it produced 1,000 tons of cyanide of potassium. Five grains of this is sufficient to kill a man. In one room of the factory a visitor found tons of this deadly poison. It resembles very closely white crystallized sugar. The visitor remarked to the manager: "It looks good enough to eat."

"Ah," replied the manager, gravely, "that is just one of the dangers we have to guard against. For some inexplicable reason cyanide of potassium exercises a remarkable fascination over the men engaged in its manufacture. They are haunted by a constant and ever-recurring desire to eat it. They are perfectly alive to the fact, however, that to give way to the craving would mean instant death, and are consequently usually able to resist it. But not always. During the time I have been here three of our best-and steadiest workmen have committed suicide in this strange manner, impelled thereto apparently by no cause save this mysterious, horrible longing. I myself have felt the same strange lust when I have been long exposed to the cyanide fumes, and have had to leave the works for a time in consequence. So well is this curious fact recognized that there are always two men at work together in this branch of our business, and a jar of ammonia, which, as you may know, is the antidote to the poison, is kept constantly near at hand."

Apart from this remarkable infatuation, which may be likened to the desire experienced by many people when standing on the brink of a precipice to throw themselves down, the manufacture of potassium cyanide is not particularly dangerous. Neither is it unhealthy. In fact, it is asserted that men have gone into the cyanide house ill and debilitated and in a short time have been restored to robust health.—N. Y. World.

Didn't Want to Be King.

The family life of the reigning household both at Athens and at Decelea is said to be exceptionally happy. A story is told, well illustrating the extent to which democratic feeling has taken hold even of the king's sons, to the effect that as the children were playing together one day they got to talking about what they were to do when they grew up, and the crown prince said to his brother: "Oh, George, you be king when you are grown up; I don't want to." Neither did Prince George want to be king, and both decided that it was a disagreeable fate. Now one has been at the head of the Greek fleet, and the other has been sent in command of the land forces to Larissa. I recall well that one day when I was walking along the Odos Amalias, or Amelia street, with my wife we saw the crown prince and crown princess also out promenading on the street; and what a tall, fine-looking fellow he was!—blond, and very large, erect, and in uniform.—President William E. Waters, in Chautauquan.

The Cannon Car.

Military journals express interest in an invention by which it is proposed to arm a self-moving car, driven by a 16 horse-power engine, with two rapid-fire cannon, mounted on pivots so as to sweep in all directions. Having four broad-tired wheels, it is claimed that the car can run across a level country (barring fences, of course) at the rate of 45 miles an hour. Terrible pictures are drawn of the havoc that such cars could make on a battlefield. Only one man is needed to operate the car and its cannon, and he is protected by strong steel shields.—Youth's Companion.

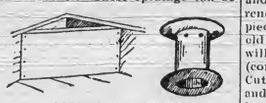
HOMEMADE BROODER.

Constructed on Simple and at the Same Time Correct Principles.



The incubator has come to stay in the poultry world, and many farmers are also availing themselves of its advantages. Where incubators are used, one must have brooders, and unless these can be made at home, the expense of a hatching "plant" is very materially increased. Fortunately, brooders can be constructed that will do very good work, though of course they must be watched a little more closely than would be necessary with the self-regulating brooders that one can buy.

A plan is shown herewith that gives a brooder constructed on simple and at the same time correct principles. The diagram, Fig. 1, is very nearly self-explanatory. A box three feet square, or thereabouts, has in the bottom a brooder lamp or stove. Above this is a sheet of iron as large as the inside of the box, and supported at the four sides, and by an iron prop near the lamp, if it is inclined to sag. Make the edges air-tight with cement, so that no fumes from the lamp can get up above the sheet iron. Have a sheet iron drum made as indicated in Fig. 3 and set this into the brooder floor, filling in the rest of the floor about the drum with cement, that there may be no danger from fire. The drum need not be over six inches in height. It has a half dozen openings under the top, as shown in the sketch. When the lamp is lighted, air enters at one side above the sheet iron, is heated and rises in the drum, passes out through the openings into the chick chamber and is diffused about it. Three or four ventilating holes are in the wall near the floor, for the exit of cold air. This gives a constant movement of warm air into the brooder. These openings can be partly closed when desired. An opening in the side near the bottom of the lamp chamber, and one near the top on the opposite sides, give fresh air for the lamp and an exit for its fumes. The lamp is inserted through a small door in the side of the box. One whole side of the brooder chamber is a drop door, for the easy sweeping out of the floor. The top (in door) can have a pane of glass in it, so one may see the chicks, and the thermometer hanging against one side. Glass on two sides gives light. The top must fit very tightly. If this brooder is to be used out of doors, a roof must be added, as indicated by dotted lines. The corners of the brooders are cut off, as seen in Fig. 2, so that the chicks may not crowd into them and the weak be trampled upon and smothered by the stronger, should the chamber ever become cold. This is an important matter and should not be overlooked. — Orange Judd Farmer.

AMONG THE POULTRY.

Save all the feathers.

Wheat is one of the best egg producing foods.

Sunflower seed promote laying and good health.

Keep the tail and wing feathers separate from the others.

Chaff is a good material for the nests of the early sitting hens.

The secret of raising goslings is to keep them dry and warm.

Young fowls need bone meal to supply strength and vigor to the growing frame.

It will require an average of one pound of grain per week for ten weeks to feed a chick.

If chicks are allowed a free run on light warm days it will add considerable to their vigor.

The use of cross-bred cocks often prevents uniformity in the color and characteristics of the chicks.

Keep the yard and poultry-house floors sprinkled with air-slaked lime and there will be fewer cases of roup.—St. Louis Republic.

Horses Holding Their Own.

An observing gentleman from the west says he believes the market for horses is rapidly improving. He says people got the idea that electricity and the bicycle were going to render the demand for horses less than they have. In some parts of the west horses are now becoming scarce because they have been disposed of at an astonishing rate. Electricity has about run its length as a displacer of horses and the bicycle is covering its own field pretty thoroughly. What the horseless wagon will do in the future is a problem, but until highways are materially improved, it cannot come into general use.

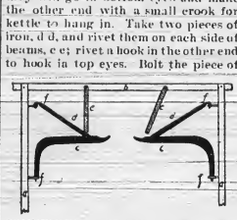
Feeding the Laying Hens.

It is a mistake to keep the laying hens with those which do not produce eggs, for the reason that the layers require more food than the others, and do not receive it. Usually when hens do not lay they are too fat, and should be fed on foods containing but little grain, and also fed sparingly; consequently, when all the hens are together, the non-producing hens may become fatter while the layers do not receive enough. It does not pay to feed hens that do not give a return for the food consumed.—Farm and Fireside.

BUSINESS METHODS.

Why Farmers Should Look After Their Insurance Policies.

Farmers sometimes forfeit their insurance by neglect. While the mutual companies do not, as we understand it, hold farmers to the strict letter of the law, as do the stock companies, but go more on the equities of the case in their settlements than or strictly legal points, nevertheless it is wise to have everything straight at the start and keep it straight. For example, many farmers during the year make additions to their buildings. The company should be informed of this fact and additional insurance, whether against fire, lightning or tornado, should be taken out to cover the increased value. Many farmers sell or trade properties during the year and this vitiates their policy unless an assignment is made, returned to the company, and a new policy issued. Where farmers do not sell outright they frequently deed portions of their property to their wives or members of their families, thus making a change of title and in such case the policy should state the facts.



Another matter. In making out a policy always see that the property that you wish to protect is specifically meationed in the policy and that it is so meationed that there can be no dispute about it. For example, we heard of a case lately that is likely to lead to litigation in a stock company. The farmer so insured carried so much insurance on grains. A fire occurred and in addition to the grains a lot of clover seed was burned. The question came up at once, is clover seed a grain? It will be very difficult to prove that it is. Therefore the policy should read grain and clover seed, or any other kind of seed.

Another matter. Always keep your policy where you will know where to get it should it be needed for any purpose and if possible keep it in a fire-proof safe. Bankers usually take care of papers of this kind and it would be a good thing to leave your policies together with your banker, or in some other place where they are as safe as possible from fire.—Wallace's Farmer.

RENDERING LARD.

Simple and Handy Device Which Makes the Task Easy.

The illustration portrays a simple and handy device for heating water and rendering lard in kettles. I made the pieces, c c, out of the iron gangs of an old cultivator; any kind of light iron will do for balance. Set two parts, a a, (common fence posts) in the ground. Cut a mortise in top for crosspiece b and pin them so the weight of the kettle will not pull them together. Get two eyes, f f, for bottom (gate eyes will answer). To make them stronger, the two top eyes, f f, should be fitted with nuts. Make bottom of beams, c c, so they will go in bottom eyes and make the other end with a small crook for kettle to hang in. Take two pieces of iron, d d, and rivet them on each side of beams, c c; rivet a hook in the other end to hook in top eyes. Bolt the piece of iron, e e, to crosspiece b, so they will drop down between pieces d d, and lock beams so that they cannot swing from over the fire. To remove the kettle from the fire, remove lock e and the beam can be swung either way. I find it a very convenient way for rendering lard. If lard is forming or getting too hot, it can easily be swung from over the fire until danger is over and when done, the kettle need not be removed from the beams until the lard is taken out.—H. M. Hodson, in Farm and Home.

OILING THE HARNESS.

If Undertaken at All, This Work Should Be Done Well.

Harness will last much longer and look much better if kept well oiled, and will not get so stiff after being exposed to a day's rain. During the spring it is difficult to keep harness from getting wet, and it will pay well before the season's work begins to see that it is thoroughly oiled. In doing the work, the harness should be taken apart and washed clean, using warm water and castile soap, and then wiped dry, when the oil should be applied. If so clean that washing is not needed, it will be better to wipe off with a wet rag as the oiling can be done better. It is best to take harness all apart, in order to get at all of the parts and oil thoroughly. Good harness oil can be purchased all ready for use, or neatsfoot oil, with a little lamp black, will be found good. If the harness has not been oiled for some time and is hard and dry, it will be best to go over them twice, finishing all up, and then commencing with the first piece and going over again. After every part has been thoroughly oiled, it should all be hung up over a frame of some kind and allowed to dry. It should not be hung in the sun or where the wind strikes, as it will dry too rapidly. The oil should have plenty of time to soak in. Like most other work on the farm, if undertaken it will pay to do well.—Journal of Agriculture.

Separate the Flocks.

The first thing to do with flocks that are kept on farms rather than on ranches is to separate the flock into a number of small ones, each composed of one kind, and having a regard to sex, age and general condition. The weak ones should not be placed with the strong. The weather or stock flock should be in one flock, the breeding ewes in another, and the lambs in another. If the best results are to be secured.

ABSENT-MINDED.

The Professor Thought Her Face Was Familiar.

Prof. Charles Fahnestock is a near-sighted, absent-minded, but genial young man, with all the qualities that lead to success except that he has a very poor memory. This leads him into trouble, especially when he meets ladies to whom he has paid marked attention.

Recuperating for the past few weeks at the winter city by the sea where so many Philadelphians and Chicagoans go to recover from the effects of arduous social seasons of ante-nuptial dinners, he became smitten with the charms of a young lady. They became inseparable, and friends of each were hourly expecting to hear of an engagement. At last one evening they were sitting in a dark corner of the glass-covered verauda, and this bit of conversation was wafted from behind the palms:

"I swear," declared Charlie, passionately, "that I love you!"

"But, Mr. Fahnestock," came the young lady's voice, coldly and distinctly, "you have so poor a memory. You might forget me."

"Never!" he protested. "I could forget that I was living sooner than I could forget you! Would years of deathless devotion—"

"Do you remember ever having met me before?" interrupted the lady, more coldly still.

"Never, never! because I never did! If you think so you are mistaken. At least—at least," he stammered, as a memory of his failing came over him, "I never knew you. Where did we meet?"

"We met in the west two years ago. We were married, and, a year later, divorced. Good night!" and she swept from the piazza.

"Well, I'll swear!" said the professor, looking after her dubiously. "I-h-o-u-g-h! her face looked familiar! That night he paid his bill and departed, and now the affairs of the college are receiving his undivided attention.—N. Y. Journal.

HARMONY IN MARRIED LIFE.

The Right Kind of a Wife Makes the Right Kind of a Husband.

"If you wish to be a good companion to your husband study to make each 'Good morning' that you say to him an incentive to a better life," is Ruth Ashmore's advice to young women, whom she addresses upon "The Profession of Marriage." "Learn to make each 'Good night' a benediction of love for the day's work, the day's loving and the day's sympathy. Look for his good qualities. He is like you in having faults; with very little trouble you can find these faults, and by talking about them and reminding him of them you can make your married life unendurable. You can bring about heartburnings, you can cause strife, and before you know it hatred may take the place of love. Look for his virtues, and, seeking always for goodness, you will grow better every day just as certainly as you would grow bad if you looked only for that which was wicked. Remember there is much that will have to be forgiven in you, and whenever you feel inclined to remind Tom of a weakness read the book in which is set down your foibles and your follies. A woman who, even after her marriage, carefully studies her profession, can make her husband what she wishes him to be. Everything that is good is contagious, and the right kind of a wife makes the right kind of a husband.

"Respect the rights of your husband; he is a man, not a child, and how can the world honor him when you, who are his closest companion, do not? Do not even in jest, deride or underrate him. People are slow about deciding when one is jesting or when one is in earnest. And what you meant to be funny may cause some stupid person to say: 'How horrid Tom must be! Why, his wife says dreadful things about him!'"—Ladies' Home Journal.

The Home Influence.

"Charity begins at home," says the old adage, and we might add, "so does every other good thing." Possibly we might go still farther and say much of the mischievous evil of life begins there, too. Certain it is that whenever good men set themselves to do a good work in this crooked world their thoughts turn always to their homes, as if there they must look for the very heart of the nation. Make the home what it should be and the land will take care of itself. Save the children of to-day and we have made sure of a blessed to-morrow. Any uplifting influence, then, that purifies and strengthens the home, any cheerful influence that gladdens it, should meet with cordial welcome from the hearts of those who desire that the "ax be laid at the very root of the tree." Nay, more than cordial welcome should be given; every movement designed to bless the home should have the earnest aid of parents, and even of the little ones themselves.—Washington Home Magazine.

Make nice short pastry and roll out rather thin, and then cut three inches long and 1½ wide, and bake in a sharp oven. A presidential election occurred about this time, and one of the boys—an Irishman—remarked to Sing: "Well, Sing, yez'll have to lav goin' to China now. The Irish be goin' to run things here, and they won't have any haythen Chinee around." Quick as a flash Sing retorted: "All light, me go Ireland. Wish no run things there."

"When I Saw —your advertisement
I thought that it was probably like the announcements of many other makers of harvesting machinery—big blow and little show; but I'm ready to surrender; go ahead, gentlemen, you're all right; I bought one of your binders last season and it is equal to any claim you ever made for it."
This is the condensed essence of what Mr. Thomas Carney, of Washington Court House, Ohio, has to say about the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator Harvester and Binder. The claims made for McCormick Machines are strong claims. That's because Affairs have come to a pretty pass in Mercer, one of a tier of counties that boasts of being the garden spot of creation, when good citizens are forced to leave and take up their abode in distant states because they have incurred the displeasure of a band of outlaws and incendiaries. But that is just the condition that confronts us today, and the boasted 'strong arm' of the law seems powerless to either protect the lives or property of citizens. To such an extent has the intimidation gone that citizens in some parts of the county who have no sympathy with the night riders, are afraid to open their mouths in condemnation of their dastardly deeds or contend for their property rights lest they be notified to quit the country, be shot in the dark, or the tinder applied to the saving of years."—Democrat.

FROM OWEN COUNTY.

[News]

Con Henderson, who lives on Dickey's Fork, this county, has two children, a girl 8 years of age, and little boy 5 years of age. One day last week the little boy was sitting on the floor with a cup of water in one hand and an old barlow knife in the other. The little girl took the water from him and threw it out. The little fellow became angry and walked up to the little girl and plunged the knife the full length of the blade into her abdomen. Dr. Carlton attended her and thinks her condition very serious.

Richard Kemper lost a very fine jack last week through an accident on his part. The hoof of the animal had grown to an extreme length, and he got an ax to cut off the superfluous growth. He placed the foot on a flat piece of wood and raised the ax, and just as he brought it down the animal put his foot out, and the sharp blade severed the leg as if it had been a stick of wood. To relieve the animal of its suffering, he took his gun and shot it.

FROM GRANT COUNTY.

[Courier]

After being in a dead lock for nearly a week and taking one hundred ballots the Grant County Fiscal Court at last unanimously elected a County Treasurer in the person of Joseph Glascock, one of Williamstown's most prosperous merchants. There was no politics whatever in the election. Just a question of which bank would do the best for the county. The county has been paying a Treasurer a salary of $425 per annum and when the two banks came and agreed to furnish a County Treasurer with a good bond, to serve without salary, upon conditions that the deposits of the Treasurer should be placed in the bank during the term; it took the Court by surprise and when the banks got to bidding against one another and at last each of them offered as much as $100 cash bonus each year for the privilege of naming a County Treasurer who would keep his deposits in their bank the eyes of the Court were somewhat opened and each member thereof saw the absolute necessity of making an election. If they failed to elect the old Treasurer would hold over and continue to draw his salary at the old rate. An election under the proposition from each of the banks meant a saving to the county in the next 2 years $1,050. Mr. Glascock did want not the position but wanted his bank to have it. The two Democratic members of the Court were voting for Robert Lemon and Robert Webb and each of them got two votes any number of times. The two Republican members of the Court voted for C. H. Harrison, D. L. Cunningham, Joe Glascock and quite a number of other Republicans. Mr. Glascock tried very hard to induce the Court to elect Mr. Lemon but he could pull but two votes in that direction. It seemed to outsiders that the Court was hopelessly hung up; but the Democratic members had made up their minds not to be very obstinate in the election of an official who would not only have to serve without salary, but pay the county $100 per year as well. On the 100 ballot Mr. Glascock got all the votes and was declared elected.

A large amount of oak and poplar timber and some walnut is being shipped out of Grant county to Cincinnati and other markets at the present time. It will not be many years until the last stately forest tree in Grant has laid its trunk and limbs upon the ground. A pity it is that some of the old monarchs of the forest can not be saved, but their end is almost in sight. The tireless and endless toil of men for sustenance and money would destroy the hills and the mountains themselves could they but profit by so doing.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was furthcr agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

D. E. Castleman Chairman,
B. L. Rice, Secretary.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MAY 5, 1897. NO. 28.

THE Frandfort Capital, edited by Walter Forrester, Gov. Bradley's right-hand man, has this to say of Dr. Hunter:

"Nothing in Hunter's political career dirty as that has been, has been so graceful and becoming as the manner of his quitting that political carecr.

"Hunter sneaked into the Senatorial race under cover of darkness, and twice he has sneaked out under cover of darkness. Twice he has been whipped out of the State Capital, in disgracc; disgraced by his own voluntary actions, in an effort to procure votes by dishonorable means. Convicted of stupid lying and bad faith to his friends, he has at last secured the well earned contempt of those who have trusted him.

"Hunter is absolutely without shrewdness or ability even amounting to the mean cunning that has been attributed to him. His ridiculous prominence for the past eighteen months has been due solely to the affectation of mystery with which he has surrounded himself, and by such prodigal mendacity as has amounted almost to a talent. He is no organizer and even in the little circle of little men that surrounded him, there were many who were recognized as his superiors in political sagacity.

"Not a single Republican of any prominence was associated with Hunter, with one exception, and that was George Morgan Thomas, of Vanceburg, who seems to have tottered up out of the grave for one final farewell performance, in a most interesting and instructive attempt to outdo Hunter himself. Morg. Thomas was the man who first and most persistently insisted that Kentucky should present Gov. Bradley's name for first plaee at St. Louis, and after promoting this movement, went back to the Ninth Congressional district and joined in the anti-Bradley movement. And Hunter and Thomas ran a dead heat in the Senatorial Derby.

"Otherwise, Hunter's organization was a Coxey's Army of political tramps and starving plaee hunters who disgusted the decent Republicans as well as the Democrats of all shades. And Hunter finally sneaked out of Frankfort after promising to help some who had trusted him, and after betraying them and publicly exhibiting his own political littleness and imbecility by an attempt to boom Geo. D. Todd for the nomination.

"Hunter's manner of leaving the field of Kentucky politics affords all the vindication that is needed of the determined course of those who have foreed him to leave this field. And this is the end of Huntcr."

AT first Representative Leiberth, of Newport, thought he could influence enough votes to defeat Deboe after he was nominated for Senator, but it took him only about twenty-four hours to discover his mistake, and he commenced falling over himself to get back in line. The excuse he gave for his conduct for the first day or two after Deboe's nomination lacked every element of sincerity. Leiberth would have defeated the last nominee if he could, but finding it impossible, and knowing that by standing out against him alone would remove him entirely from the race for Collector of Internal Revenue in this district, he got back into camp as soon as possible, but it is not probable that his action has strengthened him in the least as a candidate for Collector.

THE Dingley tariff bill which the Senate committee has been considering several weeks will be before the Senate for the next two months, when, so changed as to be beyond recognition by Mr. Dingley, it will be referred to a conference committee, as it is eyident that the House will not be willing to accept the Senate amendments. Then the fight will begin in earnest, and will be very similar to that over the present tariff law. President McKinley and Congressman Dingley each think the bill as it left the House was very near perfection, and they will demand that it be passed without any changes made by the Senate, and that body will contend for the amendments which make it almost a new bill.

THERE will be a full crop of candidates to fill the vacancy in office of Congressman in the fourth Indiana district, the result of Hon. W. S. Holman's death. It is thought that the Governor will call the election for an early day.

THE North Kentucky Agricultural Association will be held September 1, 2, 3, 4 this year. The premius will be increased in number and in size.

Now let the Kentucky pie banquet proceed.

THE candidates have one month in which to consult with the dear people.

THE legislature adjourned from last Thursday until Monday. It needed rest.

WHO will be in command of the Kentucky pie counter is information very much desired by those who are asking for a slice.

THE candidates were pretty busy with the voters last Monday. Next county court day they will be on hand to organize the Salt river expedition.

AFTER electing Deboe the joint assembly did not entertain enough respect for him to appoint a committee to inform him of his success and to conduct him into the House for a speech.

SENATOR DEBOE can not make a speech, but should he make Hon. W. H. Lyons his private secretary, he will always have at his elbow one who is equal to every occasion requiring oratory.

THE Republicans having elected the United States Senator, the distribution of Kentucky's portion of the pie can now proceed, and the wailing and gnashing of teeth will soon be heard in the camp of the pie-hunters who hail from Corncrackerdom.

THE Nashville Centennial Exposition opened in a blaze of glory, on the first inst. The show is not yet complete in all its departments, but at this early day it is said to be a grand display of nearly everything that goes to make up a grand exhibition of that class. It will close October 31st.

THE legislature will have to adjourn this week or continue its session without a quorum, as each of the Republican members is an applicant for a federal office and will follow Senator Deboe to Washington to be ready to accept the appointment each is expecting Senator to secure for him.

IN another column will be found the proclamation of D. E. Castleman, chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee in this Judicial District, declaring Hons. John W. Greene and M. D. Gray the Democratic nominees for the office of Circuit Judge and Commonwealths Attorney respectively, to be voted for at the November election, 1897.

THE man who sprung Dr. Hunter's silver letter on him in the joint Assembly, last winter, was soon thereafter given a good appointment, and the man who had him indicted this winter, has been given an appointment. When these facts are considered together it looks very much like somebody was determined to have the Doctor defeated at all hazards.

THE gold Democrats, members of the legislature, are going to publish an address to the people of Kentucky. They recognize their responsibility for the election of a Republican United States Senator, and they five in number, will try to shift that responsibility upon sixty-five Democrats. Legislators who represent their constituents never find it necessary to publish addresses in order to set themselves right.

IN regard to Congressman Bailey voting for the nominees of the Chicago Democratic convention, the Courier-Journal says he "surrendered his convictions and yielded his scruples on the tariff question." How can the Courier-Journal have the gall to charge such an offense against anybody when it bent all its energies to assist in the election of Major McKinley, whose position on the tariff it had been combatting for decades?

THAT a Republican thus goes to the Senate, instead of a Democrat, is due to the course of the silverites in the Legislature, who subordinated all else to the desperate chance of advaneing the personal fortunes of one most selfish politician.—Courier Journal.

Even so. The fool Democrats to the number of sixty-five would not forfeit all pretenses to self respect, at the regular session of the legislature, and permit four or five so-called Democrats, supported by the Courier-Journal, to dictate to them whom they should elect. Tho five so-called Democrats subordinated all things to the selfish designs of those whose political collar they wear.

[Louisville Dispatch.]

The election of Debee to represent Kentucky in the United States Senate completes the humiliation which the bolters from the Democratic party have heaped on the State, through their unholy alliance with the Republican party. They have given to the State, Bradley for Governor, and a legislature which has squandered one hundred thousand dollars of the money of the taxpayers to elect a man to the United States Senate whose mediocrity will lower the standard of the State in the eyes of the nation. Bradley and his wasteful and extravagant administration, and Deboe who will be a mere figure head in the Senate, are the legitimate offspring of the liason between the Courier-Journal and its followers with the Republican party. This same combination gave the electoral vote to McKinley by trickery and fraud, and now when Cleveland's stomach revolts at the dose which he and they have swallowed, Deboe is rammed down their throats as a settler. They ought to get out of sight and throw up their boot heels every time they think of it.

A dispatch from Walton to Monday's Enquirer says of the Walton gas well: "Foreman Mr. W. H. Metcalfe, of the Snyder Company, states in regard to the natural gas found in boring the wells that he finds the pressure as strong as ever. The drilling for water has been suspended, as they think they would be likely to again strike gas. The workmen reached a depth of 355 feet when the gas was struck. This was ignited by a gasoline torch, used while working at night. The diameter of the well beingsix inches, the blaze reached a distance of 12 or 15 feet above the ground. It was still burning several days afterward, when Foreman Metcalfe plugged the well. The orifice was plugged as tightly as possible, and yet the gas is still escaping, and can be heard and smelled for quite a distance. Mr. Livingston, of the Snyder Company, from Cincinnati, has inspected the well, and thinks there will be suffieient gas to run all the machinery used in the factory. The company has commenced work on the pond, from which they will obtain their supply of water.

If it were a toll-gate to be destroyed, instead of an anti-mob law to be made, the Kentucky Legislature would doubtless feel more at home.—Courier-Journal.

Senator Foraker compelled the President to send Hon. Bellamy Storer abroad. This is a very effective way of disposing of one's political enemy.—N. Y. Journal.

The 6,500,000 people who voted the Democratic tieket last year can rest assured on one point. They excited the displeasure of Hon. Grover Clcveland.—N. Y. Journal.

Col. Watterson has got 'em again. He thinks he sees in Grover Cleveland's latest speech a bid for 1900, and it gives the Kentucky Colonel the jim-jams.—Boston Herald.

In his fright lest Cleveland should secure another nomination, Editor Watterson appears to have been as badly demoralized as the Greeks were at Larissa.—Louisville Commercial.

Mr. Deboe should proceed cautiously as a Senator in the matter of finance. The time may come when he will find his silver record the most agreeable one to stand by.—Enquirer.

The Waldorf Politieal Purity and Party Rescue Leaguc (limited and consecrated) is now prepared to do business. All contributions should be sent directly to Mr. W. D. Bynum.—Washington Post.

Up to the hour of going to press no one had been able to discover just what the New York Reform Club was trying to celebrate by its Cleveland dinner on Saturday night.—Philadelphia Press.

Since all men are mortal might it not be well to insert a clause transferring, in the event of his death, Hon. Grover Cleveland's proprietary and patent right in reform to his residuary legatees?—Albany Argus.

Upon one issue all political parties can agree, and its banner ought to be hoisted in order that its friends might rally around it. That issue is the election of United States Senators by the people.—Louisville Commercial.

The Journal does not believe that the Waldorf is the place, $12 a plate the means, nor Grover Cleveland the adviser tor the rehabilitation of the Democratic party—if, indeed, after getting eloser to the people than any party has been since Lincoln's time, it needs rehabilitation at all.—N. Y. Journal.

The opposition to the election of Dr. Hunter, was never based on intelligent grounds, and he has been beaten by the worst elements in his own party. Had the Republican party turned from Dr. Hunter to Mr. Yerkes or to Mr. Boyle, the movement would have been intelligible.—Louisville Post.

There is one feature in the speech of Grover Cleveland at the Reform Club dinner which is especially pathetic. It is the passage which tells of the wicked deception practiced on him by McKinley, Hanna & Co. in the last campaign. It is the old, old story of innocence betrayed and then deserted.—Enquirer.

But Mr. Cleveland, having turned his back upon both the Democratic and Republican parties, ought to start a new party and call it the Holyocracy. He and his followers are too good to belong to any political party which meets popular issues in a practieal way, and tries to deal honestly and fairly with the people.—Cleveland Leader, Rep.

The outside press comment on Deboe generally has at the beginning, in the middle or on the home-stretch, "it is needless to say he is a Republican." And from all accounts when it comes down to brains and fitness for the senatorship it is needless to say anything, for there's nothing to say. He will vote with his party and against the Democratic party; and he will be shadowed by Hunter and overshadowed by Lindsey.—Commonwealth.

WERE an election held in Kentucky to-day even the gold Democrats would poll more votes than the Republicans, four-fifths of the latter being in Washington, D. C., or on their way there.

THE Louisville Commercial is chagrined at the appointment of Capt. Noel Gaines, of the McCreary Guards, to make an inspection of certain companies of the State Guard. It was Gaines who brought about the indictment of Dr. Hunter for conspiracy to bribe representatives to vote for him for Senator, and the Commercial deplores the fact that Gaines should be given a good job for the part he has taken in the prosecution of Hunter. The Bradley people secured the appointment for Gaines.

To Whom It May Concern.

Whereas, the Democratic Executive Committee of the 15th Judicial District of Kentucky, convened at Walton, Boone county, Ky., on the 2d day of January, 1897, for the purpose of nominating Democratic candidates for the offices of Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney for said district passed the following resolution, viz:

"If there is no oppositiou to any candidate for either of said offices, then such candidate as has no opposition shall on the first day of May, 1897, be declared the nominee of the party for such office by the Chairman of the District Committee."

It now appearing that the Hon. John W. Green, of Owen county, is the only announced candidate for Circuit Judge, and Hon. M. D. Gray is the only announced candidate for the office of Commonwealth's Attorney in said district. Therefore, I, D. E. Castleman, Chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee for the 15th Judicial District, by virtue of the power conferred upon me by said Committee, do hereby declare the Hon. John W. Green, of Owen county, the nominee of the Democratic party for the office of Circuit Judge, and Hon. M. D. Gray, of Grant county, the nominee for the office of Commonwealth's Attorney of said district, and hereby direct the various County Clerks of the counties composing said district, upon receiving a duplicate of this order, to place the names of said Green and Gray in appropriate places on the official ballot, under the Democratic device, the rooster, to be voted for at the November election, 1897.

Witness my hand as the Chairman of the Executive Committee of said District and resident of Boone county.

The Baltimore Methodist in a recent issue remarked editorially: "Will the brother who inadvertently acquired an umbrella during the recent session of the Baltimore conference return it to this office?" The ordinarily worldly man under similar circumstances would have believed that his umbrella was stolen.

Woman's advance into the law is by no mincing strides. New York has a so-called woman's law class as a course in the University of the City of New York. Tuesday evening 47 women received degrees as graduates of this class. One interesting incident was the candidacy of both a mother and daughter for diplomas.

The thrift of Europe is too little appreciated in this land of prodigality and plenty. In Brussels the public school children were told when going and returning from school to pick up such castaway metal objects as met their eye. In eight months they gathered 7,781 pounds, of which 1,925 pounds was tinfoil, and with the proceeds clothed 500 poor children and sent 96 sick to sanitariums.

Morris poem, "Woodman, Spare That Tree," is familiar to every schoolboy but how many persons know that it was a gigantic elm which stood on the corner of Vesey and Church streets, New York, that was memorialized in the verses? Henry Weld, who was sexton of St. Paul's chapel 41 years, had a big stock of reminiscences of that part of the city, and he remembered well the old tree. It was cut down to extend the vestry offices of Trinity parish.

The question of the right of an attorney to shed tears in defense of his client has been passed upon by the supreme court of Tennessee, which held that it was not only allowable, but among "the natural rights of counsel which no statute or constitution could take away." Indeed, says the court, "if counsel have tears at command, it may be seriously questioned whether it is not his professional duty to shed them whenever proper occasion arises." The court did not pass on the right of the client to exhibit emotion at the size of the bill.

It is stated that there are 1,000,000 blind people in the world, or one to every fifteen hundred inhabitants. A German oculist believes that a majority of the cases are due to fever, and that 75 per cent. of the afflicted persons could, by proper treatment, have retained sight. More than half of the blind population of Europe is in Russia. While the blind population of the United States is less than one-third as large as that of Russia, the number of inmates of blind asylums is larger here than in any other country. The number in these institutions was at last reports 3,480.

IMPOSING CEREMONIES

During the Dedication of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant's New Tomb.

A Myriad of Men and Many Banners Gathered at Riverside Park—Battleships of Every Nation Gathered in the Harbor and River to Do Homage.

NEW YORK, April 28.—When the sun rose over Manhattan on the day of days in her history of patriotic pageants, he found a cloudless dome awaiting him. The prayers of a million or more had been answered and storm seemed impossible. It was cool—almost cold—and the brightly tinted clouds held no augur of sorrow. Briskly blew the northwest wind and joyfully it tossed the striped and starred bunting which from every vantage point in Greater New York gleamed in a beauty and a brilliancy no other flag on earth can hope to equal. Flags there were by the hundreds of thousands, from the huge emblem, with its 50 foot of fly and 50 foot of hoist, to the tiny emblem which decorated the collars of the truck horses. Flags in the great thoroughfares and in the narrowest alleys; from tenement windows and on the staffs of public buildings; from the stalls of street venders and the facades of mighty hostelries and loftier office buildings; from the spars of merchant ships and from the bows of the humblest of canal boats.

Long before the sun had risen above the eastern horizon the streets were thronged and earnest was given of the mighty hosts which later in the day would crowd the line of march and surge around the mausoleum of the great general.

The ceremonies proper began at sunrise, when the tall flag pole near the tomb was flying the immense American flag furnished by the daughters of the revolution. There it will fly night and day, in fair weather and foul, until the winds have worn it away and the suns have faded its colors. At the same time the marines on the warships were piped to quarters and landed on shore to stand and receive the head of the land column.

Bands were playing on land and water; children were singing and youths shouting in very joyousness of spirit, for it was agreed on all sides that the prevailing note should be joy over the memory of a great man honored; not sorrow over the death of a hero.

The Fifth Avenue hotel was the scene of hustle and excitement during the early morning. The broad corridors were filled with native and foreign dignatories, and almost every second person blazed with bullion and military trappings.

In a side room were the members of the reception committee, who formed the escorts of the guests of the city. Among the earliest of these guests was Speaker Reed, who loomed like a veritable giant.

Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador, was under the wing of Chauncey M. Depew, Gen. Schofield and Gen. Ruger were together. Mr. Cleveland arrived at the hotel at 9:16 with Mr. Gilder. Troop "A" had already lined up on the west side of the park. Acting Inspector Allaire with 105 men kept the roadway clear and only those with passes were permitted within the lines.

Secretary Long, of the navy, followed close on the ex-president's heels.

Loud shouts of the people announced the arrival of the president at 9:20. He rode in a carriage with Gen. Porter and Mayor Strong. His reception was flattering in the extreme and he bowed repeatedly. His usually grave face was wreathed in smiles. Vice President Hobart joined the president and Gen. Porter and the mayor, and the open barouche in which they were seated drew up in the center of the plaza where it took its place at the head of the line. Gen. Butterfield, in his uniform of a retired general of the army, rode at the right of the barouche, which was preceded by a picked force of mounted policemen. The military escort included one sergeant and ten men of troop "A."

In the meantime the diplomats had departed by the 24th street entrance, leaving the way clear for the Grant family, the cabinet and others.

The Grants left the hotel by the Fifth avenue entrance a few minutes ahead of the president's party. Mrs. Grant leaned on the arm of her son, Col. Fred D. Grant, and the others followed. Altogether they occupied eight carriages.

The initial step in the parade was made almost on schedule time, and by 9:40 o'clock the presidential procession was on the move.

The order of this procession was:

1 Squadron "A."

2 President McKinley, Vice President Hobart, Mayor Strong and Gen. Porter.

3 Mrs. Julia Dent Grant, Col. Frederick D. Grant, Mrs. Frederick D. Grant, Mrs. Nellie Grant Sartoris.

4 Mrs. Jessie Grant, Miss Nellie Grant, Master Chapman Grant.

5 Five carriages bearing the rest of the Grant family.

6 Ex-President Cleveland and Richard Watson Gilder.

7 Maj.-Gen W. S. Rosecrans, Maj.-Gen. C. C. Augur, Maj.-Gen. H. G. Wright, Maj.-Gen. J. G. Parke.

Cheers greeted the distinguished party as it moved through the decorated streets, the enthusiasm being noteworthy that President McKinley's face was joyous and his hat was in a state of constant salute.

Mrs Grant and her family, to the third generation, were objects of especial attention, and the widow of the hero was visibly affected at the great popular demonstration.

The visitors got a chance to see a million people. The unbroken wall of humanity six miles long was an inspiring sight.

The arrival of the official portion of the procession at the tomb was the signal for a most stupendous outburst of patriotic cheering from the 50,000 people in the grand stands and on the lawns around the monument and on Claremont Heights.

The president and the other guests alighted from their carriages at the monument stands and took the places assigned to them in readiness for the oratorical and musical ceremonies at 10:36 o'clock, and stillness reigned in place of the noisy enthusiasm that marked the arrival of President McKinley.

The warships which lay at anchor in the river in sight of the tomb claimed the attention of the crowd before the arrival of the dignitaries and the commencement of the services of dedication. The river was dotted with small boats which were tossed about on the roughened waters and looked from the bluff like so many bobbing corks. All was life and bustle aboard the men-of-war. The merchants' marine division was located in the lower bay.

At 5 o'clock orders flashed from the flagship for the fleet to dress for the day's festivities. A few moments later a rainbow of colors began going up from the bow of the New York. Immediately every vessel in the fleet followed suit.

The big ships made a magnificent showing in their gala attire, with rainbows of bunting from bow to stern. The naval grand division was under the command of Rear Admiral Francis H. Bunce, U. S. N.

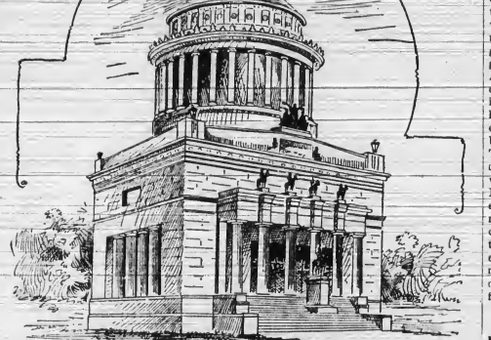
At 11:04 o'clock President McKinley entered the speaker's stand and was followed by the others who were to participate in the ceremonies. The president, however, stood with bared head, despite the nipping wind that swept across the exposed stand and delivered his address.

The vast crowd listened with keen attention to the president's words, and at intervals broke into cheers when some incident in the dead soldier's career was alluded to by the distinguished speaker. Even those who were too far removed from the speaker to hear a word seemed to be as much interested as those who were within earshot.

At the conclusion of the president's address Col. Fred Grant advanced and shook him warmly by the hand. The two men stood in the foreground of the wonderful picture, the spectators applauded, "The Star Spangled Banner" was played by the band, after which Horace Porter was introduced by the mayor. The orator of the day was accorded a warm reception. More discreet than the president, Gen. Porter kept his hat on while he was speaking. He read his address from typewritten manuscript.

At this point when Gen. Porter began to speak the biting wind forced many of the ladies in the presidential party to seek the shelter of the tomb. Among those were Mrs. McKinley, who was slightly indisposed. Gen. Porter was followed by Mayor Strong.

The "Hallelujah Chorus" from Handel's "Messiah," and the doxology were sung, and this concluded the ceremonies at the speaker's stand. The president and other officials and the distinguished guests then retired to the tent in the rear of the tomb, where an elaborate luncheon was served.



The president was escorted to the table by Mayor Strong, and Col. Grant escorted his mother, Mrs. Julia Dent Grant.

An interesting feature was the parade of the merchant marine, which was divided into four divisions.

F. G. Osborn was the rear admiral in command of the merchant marine on the flagship America. His command assembled in the upper bay, eastward of the center of the channel, on the Brooklyn side.

The first division was composed principally of tugs and lighters belonging to the New York Central and Erie railroads.

The second and third divisions were made up of tugs and steam lighters, with a couple of big ocean tugs in the lead.

GRANT MONUMENT.

The fourth division consisted of sidewheel steamboats, ferry boats and tugs.

Each division was divided into two squadrons, and there were about a hundred and fifty boats in line.

All the vessels were covered with bunting, flapping out as stiff as boards in the brisk wind, and presented a pretty and animated picture.

The hour set for them to start up the North river was 2 o'clock, but as early as noon they began to assemble at the rendezvous.

The black, wicked-looking torpedo boat Porter, sharply outlined against the white hulls of the U. S. squadron, rushed in and out of the naval lines, carrying orders, while the big patrol of the harbor police, with four steam launches as assistants, each newly painted for the occasion, scurried hither and thither on errands to the commanders of the merchant marine divisions.

The parade was started in splendid order and maintained excellent order throughout; the flotilla turning the stake boat anchored half a mile above the head of the warships in admirable style, and then stemmed the tide until all fell in, in quadruple columns, behind the monitors to await the coming of the president on the Dolphin.

The reception to the president and vice president at the Union League club Tuesday evening was a fitting culmination of the day's events. Preparations for the event had been made in the most lavish and extensive manner, and the exterior and interior of the commodious club house presented a brilliant scene.

More than 1,000 invitations had been issued, and fully half that number were accepted, judging from the large assemblage. The invited guests included the diplomatic corps, Bishops Potter and Newman, Archbishop Corrigan and a host of foreign and American dignitaries. The officers of the army and navy were also in attendance.

At midnight all was quiet. The warships' lights no longer were reflected by the placid Hudson, and the gray tomb on the eminence above stood out boldly against the black sky, at last a fitting monument erected by a grateful nation to the soldier president, who through victories and war brought peace and who, with peace, brought honor.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—SENATE.—The senate chamber had a deserted appearance when the session opened Monday, many of the senators having gone to New York to attend the Grant ceremonies. Mr. Harris, of Tennessee, was at his desk for the first time in many weeks, and was congratulated on his recovery from a serious illness. In the absence of the vice president and president pro tem., Mr. Frye, Mr. Nelson, of Minnesota, occupied the chair. Dr. Milburn's opening prayer made eloquent reference to the gathering of thousands to pay tribute to the great chieftain, Grant, and invoke that the glow of patriotism, freshly enkindled, may strengthen our nation, our government and the union of the states.

When the Indian bill was reported back from the house an effort was made to send it to conference, but Mr. Gorman objected, saying that it had been understood that no business whatever was to be transacted. Thereupon, at 12:05 p. m., on motion of Mr. Morrill the senate adjourned to Thursday.

HOUSE.—The house held a purely formal session Monday. Many of the members had gone to New York to attend the Grant tomb exercises, and under the arrangement made last Friday, after the reading of the journal an adjournment was immediately taken until Thursday. The president's message transmitting the report of the Mexican boundary line commission was, however, received before adjournment. Mr. C. W. Stone (rep., Pa.), presided as speaker pro tem. There were less than 40 members present.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—SENATE.—A message from the president transmitting the report of the commission to adjust the boundary line between the United States and Mexico and west of the Rio Grande was read. Then Mr. Quay presented a resolution calling upon the secretary of the interior for information as to whether the leases of the Seneca's oil lands had been made in the usual manner and whether there had been any corruption. It was agreed to without debate. During the presentation of memorials Mr. Spooner offered one "from several thousand men in the woods engaged in the lumber districts of Wisconsin," asking for the enactment of the lumber schedule of the Dingley bill. The senate was quite deluged with resolutions. Mr. Vest (dem., Mo.) offered a resolution for a comprehensive inquiry by the commerce committee of the senate into the causes of, and remedies for the Mississippi floods and said he would call it up at the next meeting of the senate. Adjourned until Monday.

HOUSE.—The house was in session seven minutes Thursday. The journal was not read. The objection that there was no quorum present was interposed by Mr. Simpson (pop., Kan.), whereupon Mr. Payne (rep., N. Y.) made a motion to adjourn. Mr. C. W. Stone (rep., Pa.), who was in the chair, held that an adjournment under the order of the house made last Friday would be until Monday next.

WORKING WOMEN'S

National Convention in Philadelphia—A Meeting of Uncommon Interest.

PHILADELPHIA, April 29.—Several hundred women, active in their respective localities, assembled here Wednesday to take part in the national convention of working women's societies. The chief object of the convention is the betterment of the condition of the working women, and the delegates directly represent clubs of working women and girls. Perhaps the most prominent organization represented is the Chicago Association of Young Women's clubs, composed of ten clubs of self-supporting women banded together for mutual help. It maintains a business woman's exchange and other enterprises of a business and money-earning nature. The convention, which opens Wednesday and continues until Friday night, will be addressed by Miss Grace Dodge, Mrs. Frederick Nathan and other women of prominence. Similar movements have been extremely successful on the other side of the water; the National Union of Working Women, which was organized about the middle of the seventies, having had at one time a membership of over twenty-five thousand.

FOUR DEAD.

In a Tenement Fire in New York Mothers Throw Children From a Window.

NEW YORK, April 29.—Four persons lost their lives in the flathouse, corner of Third avenue and Fifty-fourth street, Brooklyn, Wednesday morning.

The dead are: Mrs. Celia Barnett, 52 years old; Mrs. Carrie Newell, 38 years; John Newell, 5 years, and Lewis Newell, 3 years.

The two boys are children of Mrs. Newell, and were thrown from the fourth-story windows by the terror-stricken mother, and, although men below held blankets to catch them, their efforts were fruitless and the children were killed. The mother herself was found later by the firemen in the hallway burned beyond recognition.

After throwing her two children out of the window, it is supposed that the woman attempted to escape herself down the stairs, but owing to the dense volumes of smoke that filled the building, was overcome and suffocated. Mrs. Barnett, the other victim of the fire, was found burned to a crisp in the bed.

TIMELY DISCOVERY.

Lives Would Have Been Lost But for the Quick Action of the Switchman.

COLUMBUS, O., May 1.—Passengers on the Panhandle train arriving at 3:15 Friday morning from the east owe their lives to Thomas Burks, a switchman, who accidentally discovered shortly before the train was due, that a cut of cars had by a wrong throw of the switch been thrown on the main track at Leonard avenue.

By use of a lever under the wheels he managed to start the cars down onto the switch, but, finding the motion so slow that they would probably not clear the main track by train time, he secured a handcar and ran east to meet the limited passenger train and stop it.

It was only two minutes until train time, but he signaled the engineer and saved the train. At that point the train makes high speed.

Near the Danger Line at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, May 1.—The river gauge registered 29.9 feet Friday—just one-tenth below the danger line—a rise of 1.2 feet during the 24 hours. Points above here, on both the Mississippi and Missouri rivers, show a decline, but Local Forecaster Frankenfield says that the rise will continue here until Saturday morning when the gauge will show 30.5 feet of water. For a day or two the river here will remain stationary. The Missouri will fall slowly, and the upper Mississippi will fall, except at Clarksville, south to where a further slight rise will occur Friday.

It has been said that the conveniences of one age become the necessities of the next; but no ordinarily sane man will contend that the necessities of one age should become the inconveniences of the next. When binding was done by hand the left hand cut harvester was a necessity. The grain fell on the platform of the harvester and was delivered into the receiver with its heads towards the rear of the machine. The man stood in the receiver facing the grain. With the left hand machine the heads of the grain are at the left hand of the man doing the binding, so in taking out the bundle with the hand around it, whether the man turned to the front table or to the back table he kept his position toward the bundle itself—that is, with the heads toward his left hand; hence, in making the tuck he shoved the ends under the band toward the heads. Grain is handled by the shocker by grasping into the heads, as shown in the illustration, and the tuck should therefore be toward the heads, so that it will not pull out.

The hand binding harvester with men to do the binding is out of date, and so is the left hand machine, which has been superseded by the McCormick Right Hand Open Elevator, the success of which makes it seem highly probable that there will be no progressive manufacturer building left hand machines in three years.

The application of roller bearings to grain cutting machinery was made by J. G. Perry in 1869, and his patent, No. 86,584, for an improved reaper, showed and described various ways of using roller and ball bearings in harvesters. In view of these facts it is somewhat amusing to read the claims of a certain reaper maker of the present day, who says he was the first to introduce roller bearings in harvesting machinery. As a matter of fact this manufacturer is comparatively a beginner in the art of reaper building and has originated nothing.

Unquestionably the most practical and satisfactory application of roller bearings to binders and mowers has been made by the McCormick Harvesting Machine Company. The Particular form used by them was patented in 1882 and is now to be found in all McCormick machines. The especially valuable feature of the McCormick roller bearing is seen in the form—or cage as it is called—which holds the rollers from running together, and if for any cause the cage is taken from the shaft the rollers will not fall out and get lost. In order to avoid the McCormick patent the other harvesting machine company who claims to be the originator of roller bearings in harvesters has cut out the metal in the ring at the ends of the rollers. If the cage is taken out the rollers slip out and become filled with grit, or worse, get lost.

The methods of the McCormick Company result in an annual saving of many thousands of dollars to the farming public. New devices are not embodied in their machines until long and oft-repeated trials have shown them to be practical. It has been the same with the roller bearings as with everything else—McCormick experimenting is done at McCormick expense, and not at the expense of the farmers, who are too often duped by manufacturers who rush into print for notoriety and bull the market with impractical forms.

Success and Its Cause.

The phenomenal popularity of the guns and ammunition made by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Ct., is not surprising when the great gains and care taken by this celebrated house to put nothing but perfect goods on the market is considered. Every gun they make is tested for strength, action and accuracy and unless it comes up to the high Winchester standard it never leaves the factory. Winchester ammunition is made with equal care, every different cartridge or load being tested before it is loaded for market. Winchester guns and ammunition are unsurpassed as results show. VERY SIMPLE

Were the Opening Ceremonies of the Tennessee Exposition.

President McKinley, in the White House, Touches a Button

And the Whir of Machinery Begins—Enthusiastic Thousands Speed the Enterprise With Cheers—Tennessee's Centennial Celebration.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May .—The Tennessee Centennial exposition has been opened to the world, and the first day of May, 1897, will be forever memorable in the annals of Tennessee.

MAJOR A. W. WILLS,
Commissioner General Tennessee Centennial Exposition.

The men who have thonght out and worked out this wonderful enterprise have done so in such an unpretentious manner that the people of Nashville themselves hardly realized that the white city was an accomplished fact until they heard its praises echoed and re-echoed by the press throughout the world.

The principal buildings are as follows: First, the parthenon, an originally designed and completed by Phidias at Athens; the erechtheon, or history building, will be the depository of valuable relics; the commerce building, known since the world's fair in exposition parlance as the manufacturers and liberal arts building; the education and hygiene building; agricultural transportation. Negro building, machinery, government building, the woman's building, minerals and forestry, and others of lesser note, nearly 50 in all.

The women of Tennessee have played no mean part in the necessary work of making the exposition a great success. They organized the woman's department by placing Mrs. Van Leer Kirkman, a sweet, womanly woman and a famous beauty at the helm as president, and she has been ably assisted by Miss Ada Scott Rice as secretary and a board of managers selected from the best material in the state.

The opening of the exposition marks the 100th year of the admission of the state into the sisterhood of the commonwealths. The inaugural ceremonies a year ago were attended by a military pageant that was significant of the prowess of the Volunteer state, and after the baptism of arms comes the sweet presence of art and science and the formal opening Saturday was marked by the absence of the citizen soldiery in uniform, though every man present was a soldier if called upon to protect his home in fair Tennessee, and to maintain the dignity of the Volunteer state. The members of both houses of the legislature and their wives assembled at the Union street depot of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railway at 9 o'clock, and were conveyed in special trains to the handsome terminal station at the west side of the exposition park. The place of rendezvous was the Administration building, whence the officials, legislators and distinguished guests, including the governor of the state, Hon. Robt. L. Taylor, Gen. Ignacio Garfia, postmaster general of the republic of Mexico, and suite, escorted by a vast concourse of citizens, proceeded to the auditorium, which, in a few moments, was filled with above 7,000 people, while a perfect multitude was unable to obtain admission, and contented itself with listening to the inspiring strains of Bellstedt & Ballenberg's superb military concert band of Cincinnati. The ceremonies were opened with prayer by Rt. Rev. Thos. F. Gailor, co-adjutor bishop of Tennessee.

After "America" had been played in a most impressive manner, Maj. J. W. Thomas, president of the Tennessee Exposition Co., arose and was received with cheers and applause.

Loud and continuous cheering followed the conclusion of President Thomas' remarks, and the band struck up "The Star Spangled Banner," amid tumultuous cheering and waving of hats and handkerchiefs.

The next address was by Hon. Robert L. Taylor, governor of Tennessee. As he advanced toward the front of the platform the crowd rose as one man, and it was several minutes before his excellency could proceed with his address.

At the conclusion of the address the band struck up "Dixie," and then the very earth itself seemed to shake with the thunders of applause. It was a sight never to be forgotten.

When order was restored, or rather when quiet once more reigned, Maj. E. C. Lewis, the director general of the association, under whose skillful guidance the marvelous project materialized and came into being, stepped forward, and as he did so the volume of applause shook the very firmament.

At the conclusion of Maj. Lewis' address, at a given signal, the wires flashed the magic word to the white house at Washington, President McKinley touched the button, and, as the band played "Hail Columbia," the machinery was set in motion and the Tennessee centennial exposition was opened to the world.

GUTHRIE FLOOD.

Eighty-two Persons Are Missing, Most of Them Being Negroes.

It Is Claimed That Several Bodies Have Been Sighted in the Debris at the Railroad Bridge—Many Thrilling Incidents During the Flood.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 30.—The receding flood has left an immense pile of wreckage at the railroad bridge six miles below the city. Search for the dead was begun at that point Thursday evening, and when darkness put a stop to the work the bodies of a white man and a colored baby had been recovered. It is claimed that several other bodies have been sighted in the debris there.

An attempt was made to poll the residents of West Guthrie Thursday afternoon, but the count taken is not considered at all accurate. It shows 82 persons missing, most of them being Negroes.

There were thrilling incidents by the score. John Nelson, a Negro, 90 years old, cut a hole in the roof of his house and pulled his family up, all floating to safety. Henry Wilson, given up to die of pneumonia, waded into the water, saving four people. He is getting well. Dr. Sargent floated 15 miles on a kitchen roof. George Ruffin saved three children and was swept away while trying to reach his mother. John Metz saved many and nearly perished.

Two printers, who could not swim a stroke, manned a raft to rescue people, but were swept away and had to be rescued. People were saved by firing rockets with lines to them. Thieves attempted to loot houses all night, but were driven away. Hundreds of men are at work and building. Bridges go up Friday. The Santa Fe has 500 men working on tracks. Trains went north Thursday, but it will be several days yet before traffic opens south.

GUTHRIE, Ok., April 30.—Daylight in the Cottonwood valley found dozens of people still clinging to trees, overturned houses or timbers in positions which they had sustained during the weary night. Here and there positions known to have been occupied when darkness came on Wednesday night were empty Thursday morning and the only conclusion to be drawn is that the luckless victims had dropped into the river during the night, drowned and their bodies swept down stream. For miles along the scene of devastation 2,000 people, homeless, half ill from exposure and hungry, passed a miserable night, and morning found most of them too weak to avail much assistance either to themselves or others. During the night the water had receded rapidly and the work of rescue was more easy Thursday morning. When darkness stopped further rescue Wednesday evening every man available went busily to work to construct rafts for use Thursday, and when the first light of day broke small parties started out from different points and began transporting the people from their perilous position to land. The water was not so high or swift as Wednesday and the rescuers made rapid progress. During the night organized relief, under the direction of Guthrie people, was pushed as rapidly as possible and renewed efforts were put forth Thursday morning. No more reliable information of the dead or the property damage than was given Wednesday night could be compiled Thursday morning. Hourly bodies left or land by the receding waters or found pocketed in houses or piles of debris, came to light. This within a few miles of Guthrie. What the damage to life and property further out in the country will only be known when wire and railway train communication, now at a standstill, is resumed.

The Mob Foiled.

BALTIMORE, April 30.—An attempt was made at Belair, near here, Wednesday night to lynch John Blanchard, 44, who attempted to assault Margaret, 7, the daughter of T. Howard Hanway, a prominent citizen. Blanchard had been doing chores around Hanway's house. Wednesday at noon Mrs. Hanway found him attempting the crime. She rescued her daughter and gave the alarm. Blanchard escaped, but was arrested by Sheriff Cooley and locked up. A mob gathered at the jail to lynch him, but Cooley slipped him out the back way and drove to Baltimore with him, reaching here Thursday morning.

Hanna Donates $10,000.

CLEVELAND, O., April 30.—Senator Mark Hanna has decided to donate $10,000 to a fund which is being raised for the purpose of erecting a public library in his native town of Lisbon, Columbiana county. The Lisbonites, it seems, recently secured a donation of $5,000 from a wealthy lady residing in the place, but the fund grew slowly nevertheless, and they were almost in despair when their hopes were revived by the news of Mr. Hanna's donation.

Fatal Boiler Explosion.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 30.—A boiler explosion at Aldermun's saw mill, in the Kanawha valley, West Virginia, Wednesday night, killed two men and injured five more. The killed are: Perry Deavers, George Conley. The injured: Z. W. Hickman, Thos. Hickman, Wm. Balton, Vinton Alderman, John McCuley. The three former will probably die. The mill was badly wrecked and the loss will be heavy.

A Murderer Probably Burned.

BALTIMORE, April 30. — The posse searching for John Scott, the murderer of William Frazier, has set fire to the house forest in which it is supposed he concealed himself. The fire is now raging over several hundred acres, and if Scott is hidden there he is dead before this.

CONFLAGRATION

Fire in Pittsburgh Entails a Loss of Over Three Million Dollars.

Jenkins, Wholesale Grocer, Horne & Co.'s Six-Story Dry Goods House, Duquesne Theater, Methodist Book Concern, the Speer Mansion, Mayer's Glove House, Huck's Cigar Factory, Snaman's Carpet House Destroyed.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 3.—The greatest fire that has visited this city since the memorable one of 1845 started shortly after midnight in the immense wholesale grocery establishment of Thomas C. Jenkins, on Penn avenue and Liberty street, and at 2:30 o'clock Monday morning was still burning fiercely. Three large blocks, extending from Liberty to Penn avenue and from Fifth street to Sixth street, have been reduced to smoldering ruins, and while the fire is now believed to have spent its fury, it is not yet under control. The loss will exceed $2,000,000, and it is well covered by insurance. Among the buildings destroyed are Jenkins wholesale grocery establishment, Horne's six-story drygoods establishment, Horne's office building, the Duquesne theater and the Methodist Book Concern.

The fire started in the cellar of the Jenkins building in a pile of barrels filled with waste paper. The flames were discovered by Watchman William Hunter while making his rounds on the third floor. He had smelled smoke earlier in the evening, but believed that it came from the outside and had paid no attention to it. The flames had leaped rapidly up the elevator shaft and he made a vain attempt to extinguish the fire with buckets of water. An air draft used to ventilate the great building fanned the flames, and he found it impossible to do anything. He made his escape from the building with great difficulty because of the immense volumes of smoke. The alarm was turned in about the same time by Officer Milton Bailey, who noticed smoke issuing through the window.

The fire made rapid headway after it had started, and by 12:30 o'clock flames began to pour out of the Penn avenue front. All the fire departments of the city and Allegheny were summoned and the firemen fought bravely to check the progress of the conflagration.

The fire ate its way so rapidly that the firemen narrowly escaped the falling debris. Flames filled Penn avenue completely and shot into the air 200 feet or more, presenting one of the most magnificent sights seen for years. The splendid buildings of Joseph Horne & Co., opposite, caught and the firemen worked desperately to prevent its loss. At 1 o'clock the Horne building was burning from cellar to roof and the flames had communicated to Horne's immense office building adjoining.

The structure was of stone and also six stories in height. It was occupied by W. P. Grier & Co., china dealers; Bon Marche Glove Co.; Snaman's carpet house and scores of physicians. Hucks cigar factory and Hall Bros. building next fell victims to the fire fiend, and they were quickly followed by the Duquesne theater, Methodist Book Concern building and the Sun. prise clothing store. The latter was an immense five-story building running back a depth of 200 feet.

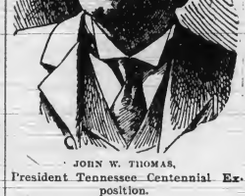
As soon as the fire attacked these buildings several streams of water were turned on them, but the water had no more effect than if it was not an extinguisher. The flames from the burning oil in the Jenkins building rolled out against them, and in five minutes the two beautiful Horne buildings were burning briskly. The firemen then left the Jenkins building to its fate and used their united and desperate efforts to save the Horne buildings. All the streams of water that could be summoned were turned on these buildings, but they were now one mass of fire. The fire department then turned their attention to the surrounding buildings, but the raging flames rapidly ate their way to all sides.

At 3 o'clock the fire was finally mastered, but was still burning with intense fury within the limits of the blocks bounded by Fifth and Sixth street east and west, and Liberty and Penn avenues north and south. The loss, it is now believed, will be greatly in excess of the first estimates and is placed at $3,000,000.

A number of firemen were injured by falling wires, but none of them are seriously hurt.

The individual losses, as far as could be obtained at this hour, are as follows:

Horne & Co., dry goods and office building, with stock, $1,500,000, covered by insurance in a hundred insurance companies; T. C. Jenkins, $300,000 on stock and $200,000 on buildings.



The Duquesne theater is still burning, and the loss will probably reach $30,000; Mayer's glove house, $3,000; W. P. Grier & Co., $10,000; Snaman's carpet house, the Methodist Book Concern building, with tenants, probably $50,000; Huck's cigar factory, $3,000; Speer mansion, $50,000; tenants of Horne office building, $50,000. Small losses were sustained by J. D. Chantler, Beesom Paper Co., Harmony creamery and Force & Briggs Machinery Supply Co.

In No. 500 Penn avenue the Mollinger Remedy Co. occupied two floors, while on the lower floor was Sweeney's military parlors. Jordan's millinery establishment, the Novita Remedy Co. and Dr. T. F. Baskerwitch occupied 502; Dr. Sykes, Dr. T. H. Swift and Miss M. J. Conlon, dressmaker, occupied No. 504; Mme. Velma, millinery; M. E. Hart, dressmaking; Neill & Geis, manicure parlors and M. E. Evans, infants' goods, occupied No. 506, which adjoined the Jenkins block on Penn avenue.

TENNESSEE CENTENNIAL.

Thousands of Workmen Putting the Finishing Touches on the Exposition Buildings.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 1.—Four thousand two hundred men were at work Friday putting the finishing touches on the Tennessee Centennial exposition, which will be open for the reception of visitors Saturday at 8 o'clock. A heavy rain fell Thursday night and the skies are overcast Friday; but the officials are working with undampened ardor, for the weather man promises fair weather for Saturday.

JOHN W. THOMAS,
President Tennessee Centennial Exposition.

The city is gaily decorated and every incoming train adds to the throng of visitors. Director General Lewis says the first days' crowds will find more in perfect readiness than they can see in 12 hours. The inaugural attendance, the conditions being fair, is variously estimated at from 35,000 to 50,000.

The ceremonies at the opening Saturday will be very simple. A civic parade will occupy the early morning hours in the city, ending at the grounds, where brief addresses will be made by exposition, state and city officials. Exactly at noon, President McKinley, seated in the white house, will touch the button which will by electric enrrent set the machinery of the exposition in motion. This exposition is nearer ready for the opening than any other ever was.

STRUNG UP.

Seven Negroes Suffer the Death Penalty at Sunnyside, Tex., at the Hands of a Mob of Their Own Race for Brutal Murders.

HOUSTON, Tex., May 1.—For three murders, ravishing two girls and burning down the humble home of their poor victims, and incinerating the bodies of six, perhaps seven, Negroes Friday night suffered the death penalty at the hands of a mob of their own race.

Thursday night at 12 o'clock a mob of Negroes took from a room at Sunnyside, Tex., where they were being guarded, Fayette Rhone, aged 21; Will Gates, 35; Lewis Thomas, 20; Aaron Thomas, 13; Jim Thomas, 14; Benny Thomas, 15, the four latter being brothers, and Will Williams, all Negroes, and hanged the first named six to an oak tree. The seventh was hunged but has disappeared. Several shots were heard shortly after the mob took them from the room and he may have tried to escape. The Negroes all confessed to having murdered Henry Daniels, an old Negro, his step-daughter, Marie, and a seven-year-old child, burning the bodies of the two oldest by setting fire to the cabin, where the crime occurred and throwing the little one's body into a well. Old man Daniels had the proceeds of a robbery which the Thomas boys had committed and they demanded it of him under pain of death. They outraged the grown girl and the seven-year-old girl and then killed both.

At a late hour this evening the bodies were still hanging in the street. As far as can be learned the mob was composed of white and black men, with the colored element largely predominating. Friday night there was a calm after the storm, and public opinion is almost universal that if the right parties were apprehended no harm has been done.

FIVE MORE BODIES

Recovered From the Debris of the Flood at Guthrie, O. T.

GUTHRIE, O. T., May 1.—Five more bodies were recovered Friday from the debris left by Wednesday's disaster in West Guthrie, being those of George Owens, Mrs. Charles Buffins, Henry Simons, Mrs. Watson and child. Scores of organized searching parties are at work, but progress is slow, since tons of debris must be dug over in the search. It is believed that the rushing water of the Cimmaron river conceals many corpses. The Cimmaron is two miles north of the city, and when the flood came the waters of the Cottonwood joined it. The Cimmron's bottom contains quick sand and it is one of the most treacherous streams in the country. It is literally jammed with wreckage and the bodies of dead animals. Farmers are fishing out and carrying off the wreckage by carloads. Over 1,500 homeless people are being cared for by the city.

Division Superintendent Dolen, of the Santa Fe railway, states that traffic will be open to the south by tomorrow morning. Over four miles of the Santa Fe roadbed was washed out.

A. & P. Railway Foreclosure.

ALBUQUERQUE, N. M., May 1.—The foreclosure sale of the Atlantic & Pacific Railway Co. will take place at Gallup, this county, on May 3, 1897. O. N. Marron, the special master, will officiate as auctioneer. The road will then pass to the hands of the Atchison Topeka & Santa Fe.

Reproductions of Prize Fights Prohibited.

LANSING, Mich., May 1.—The house of representatives Friday passed a bill to prohibit reproduction of prize fights by vitascope, kenetescope, etc. The penalty is a fine of $500 to $1,000 or two years imprisonment, or both.

DELYANNIS RESIGNS.

A New Cabinet For Greece Was Immediately Formed.

Peace Reported to Have Been Established Between Greece and Turkey—Greeks Evacuating Volo—Women and Children Died During the Retreat.

ATHENS, April 30.—The king summoned M. Delyannis, the premier, Thursday morning and called upon him to tender his resignation. His majesty subsequently entrusted the opposition leaders with the task of forming a new cabinet.

ROME, April 30.—The Secolo, of Milan, publishes a dispatch from Athens saying that peace between Turkey and Greece has been concluded.

LONDON, April 30.—A special dispatch from Athens says that the Greeks have occupied the heights of Pentepigadia, north of Arta, and about half way between that place and Janina, in Epirus, and entrenched themselves there.

SALONICA, April 30.—Advices received here from Larissa say during the stampede of the soldiery and populace from that city on the approach of the Turks, there was a serious encounter between Italian volunteers and Greek soldiers, during which many of the latter were wounded and several children were killed.

BERLIN, April 30.—A dispatch to the Nord Deutsche Zeitung from Athens says that King George has signed a decree withdrawing the exequateurs of all the Turkish consuls in Greece.

ROME, April 30.—A dispatch from Athens to the Messagero says that 900 women and children died during the terrible retreat from Tyrnavos to Larissa.

The king has entrusted M. Delyannis, the retiring premier, with full power to represent him during the formation of the new cabinet, and only insisted that M. Teotoki should enter the cabinet.

It is believed that M. Deligeorgis will be president of the chamber.

Following is the official list of the new cabinet ministers, as corrected Thursday evening:

Premier and Minister of Marine—M. Ralli.

Minister of War—M. Tsamavos.

Minister of Finance—M. Simopoulo.

Minister of Education—M. Carapanos.

Minister of the Interior—M. Teotaoki.

Demetrius Ralli, the new premier and the minister of marine, was the leader of the opposition. He has been minister of justice and minister of interior and is well-known throughout the country as an able lawyer and orator. He is 59 years old and studied at the universities of Athens and Paris.

After Friday's vote of confidence M. Ralli and Simopoulo will go to the Greek headquarters at Pharsalos.

ATHENS, April 30.—The Greeks have captured the magazine at Philipania with a large quantity of ammunition and 10,000 shells. There have been a number of minor skirmishes Thursday along the line.

LONDON, April 30.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Athens had an interview with M. Ralli Thursday afternoon, during which the Greek statesman outlined his policy. M. Ralli said: "My policy will consist in the reorganization of the army, whose recuperative forces are practically inexhaustible, and the re-establishment of order, together with a satisfactory solution of our foreign relations. We refuse to accept a mandate from the king or the chamber. We must have an absolutely free hand.

WONDERFUL FLIGHT

Of Daylight Meteors Witnessed by Prof. Brooks, of the Smith Observatory.

GENEVA, N. Y., April 30.—Prof. Brooks, director of the Smith observatory, while taking daylight observations of Mercury Thursday afternoon, between 3 and 4 o'clock, observed through the large telescope a wonderful flight of daylight meteors. They were intensely white, many of them having the appearance of Vega or some other bright star when seen through a large telescope in day time. The direction of motion was toward the sun. During the passage of the meteors, which lasted half an hour, over one hundred were seen at times, two or three meteors passing through the telescopic field together.

Fire in the Monongahela House.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 30.—The gorgeous decorations of the banquet hall at the Monongahela house were destroyed by fire Thursday evening. The American club had made lavish preparations for its annual banquet Thursday night, and wished to secure a photograph of the hall. In the attempt to secure a flash light picture, an explosion occurred and the buntieg, pictures, flags, etc., were burned. The banquet was held in the dismantled hall as per programme, but was an hour or so later in commencing.

After the bank failed, it was found that the president had overdrawn his account $80,000.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., April 30.—The Westinghouse Air Brake Co. Thursday posted notices in its foundry department announcing a reduction of wages ranging from 20 to 40 per cent. WIN A BATTLE.

The Greeks Repulse 8,000 Turks at Velestino—The Latter's Loss Enormous.

ATHENS, May 1.—A telegram just received here says that a great battle has been fought at Velestino between a Turkish force of 8,000 and Gen. Smolenski's brigade. The dispatch states that the Turks were repulsed with enormous losses.

ATHENS, May 1.—The battle of Velestino raged fiercely from sunrise until Friday morning. The Greeks have been reinforced, the rein orcements arriving at the critical stage of the fight. Gen. Smolenski telegraphs that the Turks will be unable to capture Pharsalos because the Greeks position is strong and the moral of the Greek troops completely restored.

LONDON, May 1. Students of the eastern war agree that the most important news from the front Friday is the action of England, France and Russia in asking, through their ambassadors, that an armistice shall be granted by Turkey. Russia and Austria have addressed notes to the Balkan state, apparently in the interest of peace. The Greeks are falling back. The Turks control Epirus, and it is said that they are preparing to land troops from the warships in Crete.

ATHENS, May 1.—News is anxiously awaited from the battle reported in progress at Pharsalia. This is the second line of the Greek defense, and if the Turks break through a road to Athens will be nearly opened.

The Turkish cavalry has occupied Volo. It is officially announced that the Turkish troops have occupied Trikhala without firing a shot, and have also expelled the Greeks from the town of Bash Tounar, in Epirus.

It is rumored that a large force of Turkish troops is being quietly gathered at Smyrna with a view of landing in Crete to expel Col. Vassos.

The news that Osman Pasha is marching to Janina, Epirus, with 30,000 additional Turkish troops is confirmed.

The Greek soldiers are pouring into Arta in an almost unbroken column, coming apparently from every point of the Turkish territory hitherto occupied by the Greeks. These soldiers show no sign of a desire to continue the fight against the Turks.

Turkey has within the past few days assumed a much more independent stand toward the powers. She will resent intervention, and no settlement on the basis that Turkey shall evacuate Thessaly if Greece evacuates Crete will be accepted. The Turk wishes to profit by his victories in land or by a handsome indemnity for the war.

ROME, May 1.—Dispatches received here from Athens say that the new Greek cabinet has been coldly received and the animosity of the populace toward King George continues.

LONDON, May 1. — The Evening News Friday afternoon publishes a dispatch from Constantinople, dated Friday, saying that the Turkish cavalry occupied Volo Thursday evening. The dispatch adds that a ten days' delay has been granted to the Greeks who are desirous of leaving Constantinople.

LONDON, May 1.—It is semi-officially stated that European intervention between Turkey and Greece in the present position of affairs is regarded as wholly impracticable, both Greece and Turkey having resolved to continue the war. The powers are thus obliged to stand aside until one of the combatants is finally defeated.

ATHENS, May 1.—There was no news Friday from Arta, but it is rumored that the Greek forces which have been operating in Epirus against the Turks, are retreating.

At a cabinet council held Friday it was decided that the minister of war, Col. Tsamados, and the minister of the interior, M. Theotokis, should proceed to Pharsalos in order to ascertain the condition of the Greek forces there.

LONDON, May 1.—The Standard's correspondent at Athens says: Thursday evening, as the Crown Princess Sophia was returning from a visit to the Ambulance hospital, she was hissed and jeered by the crowd, which forced her to return to the hospital. The royal carriage was then summoned and the princess drove to the palace at the top of the speed of her horses.

"The royal arms have been stripped from the carriages in order that the occupants may drive about unrecognized and thus avoid similar experience. As another indication of popular feeling, I may point out that many of the tradesmen who have been wont to display the royal escutcheons in front of their shops have removed these.

"While a priest was offering prayers for King George and the royal family in one of the most prominent churches Friday he was interrupted by protests from the congregation. The ringleader was arrested, but the disorder was so great that many women fainted in terror."

LONDON, May 1.—The Athens correspondent of the Daily Chronicle, Mr. Henry Norman, says the report is current there (Friday evening) that France has proposed to the other powers a suspension of hostilities and the summoning of a congress at which the rectifications of the Greek frontier on the basis of the treaty of Berlin might be considered.

LONDON, May 1.—Friday's news from the seat of war indicates the continuous advance of the Turks in both Thessaly and Epirus; but Edhem Pasha is carefully concealing the time and place of his principal attack.

The Maher-Sharkey Bout.

NEW YORK, May 1.—The Maher-Sharkey bout will take place in New York city in June and the purse will be $12,000. Buck Connolly, Maher's backer, is responsible for that statement, but would not mention the name of the club that had secured the bout.

The change of time on the Q. & C. does not suit the Erlanger passenger travel at all. Many of those who take the trains at that point for the city are country people who were very well pleased with the schedule as arranged for years past. Everybody who patronizes the road are protesting.

The change of schedule on the Southern railroad requires the mail wagon to leave here on its morning trip in time to reach Erlanger at 7:13, at which time the train going north is due at that place. Those who desire patronizing the wagon in the morning should bear in mind that it leaves here about 5:30 o'clock.

A few days since a young gentleman who drives a huckster wagon in this part of the county, stopped at a house, where the lady appeared at the door and the following conversation took place:
"Please, madam," said he, "can you tell me of any road that the hucksters do not travel?" "I can," said the lady. "Which road is it?" asked the young man. "The road to heaven," came the quick reply, and the huckster gave his horses the lash and was soon out of sight, but not on the road to heaven.

Miss Sallie Conner, daughter of Jas. D. and Jennie Conner, of the Hebron neighborhood, who died last Wednesday night, was 24 years, 8 months and 25 days of age at the time of her decease. She was a favorite among her family and companions, was of a sunny and cheerful disposition, and will be missed in the community where she lived, by a large circle of loving friends and relatives. She leaves a father, mother, three sisters and a brother to mourn her death. Hers was the first death to occur in the family, and on account of being so sudden and unexpected it was a great shock to her bereaved ones. The life she lived, however, should furnish the cousoling assurance that she is now enjoying the blessings of that better Home on High.

The following is from the Courier-Journal of the 30th ult. The Doctor's many friends in this county will be sorry to hear of his misfortune:
Dr. W. Ed Grant, one of the best-known physicians in the city, was seriously, if not fatally, injured about 3:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon by falling through the elevator shaft at the Kentucky School of Medicine. At a late hour last night it was said by his physicians that his condition was very critical, and fatal results were feared.
Very little is known as to how the accident happened. The first information had of it was about 4 o'clock, when a laundry woman about the college was attracted by groans in the basement. She notified Dr. Rodman, and he at once made an investigation, and found Dr. Grant lying at the base of the shaft in an unconscious condition. He was removed to the third floor of the building where his injuries were examined. It was found that his left thigh was broken, his head badly cut in several places, and his body severely bruised. It is not known whether he is internally injured. He has been at the college since the accident, and is being attended by Drs. Rodman and Holloway. He has been unconscious ever since the accident.
Dr. Grant was seen walking about the halls of the college about 3:30, and it is thought that the accident occurred about that time. There are two doors side by side, one of which leads to the elevator shaft and the other to a stairway. It is supposed that Dr. Grant was thinking deeply, and walked through the wrong door without noticing where he was going. He has so far been unable to tell anything about the accident, and it is not even known which floor he fell from. The distance from the first floor to the basement is about twelve-feet, and from the second about tweuty-eight feet.
Dr. Graut is professor of anatomy at the Kentucky School of Medicine, where the accident occurred, and is recognized as one of the most able members of the faculty. He is also Medical Examiner for the New York Life Insurance Company and has a considerable private practice besides.

Notice is hereby given that the line between Burlington and Bullittsville voting precincts has been changed by the Boone county court so as to include us in the Bullittsville precinct.

ERRAND OF MERCY.

Dr. Talmage Appeals to Americans for Aid to East India Sufferers.

Bread Wanted for the Starving People—He Calls to Mind That Christ Was Born in Asia and Begs Quick Help for the Helpless and Needy.

Dr. Talmage is on a mission of bread for the famine sufferers of India. He is speaking every day to vast audiences in Iowa and Illinois, helping to fill the ships provided by the United States government for carrying corn to India.

His text Sunday was Esther i., 1: "This is Ahasuerus which reigned from India even unto Ethiopia."

Among the 773,693 words which make up the Bible, only once occurs the word "India." In this part of the Scriptures, which the Rabbis call "Megillah Esther," or the volume of Esther, a book sometimes complained against because the word "God" is not even mentioned in it, although one rightly disposed can see God in it from the first chapter to the last, we have it set forth that Xerxes, or Ahasuerus, who invaded Greece with 2,000,000 men, but returned in a poor fisher's boat, had a vast dominion, among other regions India. In my text India takes its place in Bible geography, and the interest in that land has continued to increase until, with more and more enthusiasm, all around the world Bishop Heber's hymn about "India's coral strand" is being sung. Never will I forget the thrill of anticipation that went through my body and mind and soul when, after two weeks' tossing on the seas around Ceylon and India—for the winds did not, according to the old hymn, "blow soft o'er Ceylon's isle"—our ship sailed up one of the mouths of the Ganges, past James and Mary island, so named because a royal ship of that name was wrecked there, and I stepped ashore at Calcutta, amid the shrines and temples and sculptors of that "City of Palaces," the strange physiognomies of the living and the cremations of the dead. I had never expected to be there, because the sea and I long ago had a serious falling out; but the facilities of travel are so increasing that you or your children will probably visit that land of boundless fascination. Its configuration is such as no one but God could have architected, and it seems as if a man who had no religion going there would be obliged to acknowledge a God, as did the cowboy in Colorado.

His companion, an atheist, had about persuaded the cowboy that there was no God. But coming aminst some of that tremendous scenery of high rocks and awful chasms, and depths dug under depths, and mountains piled on mountains, the cowboy said to his atheistic companion, "Jack, if there is no God now, I guess from the looks of things around here there must have been a God some time." No one but the Omnescient could have planned India, and no one but the Omnipotent could have built it. It is a great triangle, its base the Himalayas, a word meaning "the dwelling place of snows," those mountains pouring out of their crystal cup the Indus, the Brahmaputra and the Ganges to slake the thirst of the vast population of India. That country is the home of 240,000,000 souls. Whatever be one's taste, going there, his taste is gratified. Some come as the hunters of great game and there is no end to their entertainment. Mighty fauna: Bison, buffalo, rhinoceros, elephant, panther, lion, tiger—this last to be the perpetual game for Americans and Europeans, because he comes up from the malarial swamps where no human being dare enter; the deer and antelope his accustomed food, but once having obtained the taste of human blood he wants nothing else, and is called "the man-eater." You can not see the tiger's natural ferocity after he has been humiliated by a voyage across the sea. You need to hear his growl as he presses his iron paw against the cage in Calcutta. Thirteen towns have been abandoned as residence because of the work of this cruel invader. In India, in the year 1877, 819 people were slain by the tiger and 10,000 cattle destroyed. From the back of the elephant or from galleries built among the trees 1,500 tigers went down, and $15,000 of government reward was paid the sportsmen. I advise all those who in America and other lands find amusement in shooting singing birds coming home with empty powder flask and a whole choir of heaven slung over their shoulder, to absent themselves for a while and attack the justifiable game of India. Or if you go as botanists, oh, what opulence of flora! With no distinct flora of its own, it is the chorus of all the flora of Persia and Siberia and China and Arabia and Egypt.

The Baptist missionary, Carey, who did infinite good to India, had two great passions—first, a passion for souls, and next a passion for flowers, and he adorned his Asiatic home and the American homes of his friends, and museums on either side the sea with the results of his floral expeditions in India. To prepare himself for morning prayers, he was accustomed to walk amid the flowers and trees. It is the heaven of the magnolia and the abelmosk and palm tree. The ethnologists, going there, will find endless entertainment in the study of the races now living there and the races of whose blood they are a commingling. The historian, going there, will find his theory of Warren Hasting's government in India the reverse from that which Edmund Burke gave him in the most famous address ever made in a courtroom, its two characteristics matchless eloquence and onesidedness of statement. The archaeologist will be thrown into a frenzy of delight as he visits Delhi of India and disdown and finds seven dead cities underneath the now-living city. All success to the hunters and the botanists and the ethnologists and the historians and the archaeologists who visit India, each on his or her errand! But we today visit India as Christian women and men to hear the full meaning of a groan of hunger that has traveled 14,000 miles, yet gets louder and more agonizing as the days go by. But why have any interest in people so far away that it is evening there when it is morning here, their complexion darker, their language to us a jargon, their attire unlike that found in any American wardrobe, their memory and their ambition unlike anything that we recall or hope for? With more emphasis than you put into the interrogatory "Why," I answer, First: Because our Christ was an Asiatic. Egypt gave to us its monuments, Rome gave to us its law, Germany gave to us its philosophy, but Asia gave to us its Christ. His mother an Asiatic; the mountains that looked down upon Him, Asiatic; the lakes on whose pebbly banks He strolled and on whose choppel waves He walked, Asiatic; the apostles whom He first commissioned, Asiatic; the audiences He whelmed with His illustrations drawn from blooming lilies and salt crystals, and great rainfalls, and bellowing tempests, and hypocrites' long faces, and croaking ravens—all those audiences Asiatic. Christ during His earthly stay was never outside of Asia.

When He had 16 or 18 years to spare from His active work, instead of spending that time in Europe, I think He goes further toward the heart of Asia, namely India. The Bible says nothing of Christ from 12 years of age until 30, but there are records in India and traditions in India which represent a strange, wonderful, most excellent and supernatural being as staying in India about that time. I think Christ was there much of the time between His twelfth and his thirtieth year, but however that may be, Christ was born in Asia, suffered in Asia, died in Asia and ascended from Asia, and all that makes me turn my ear more attentively toward that continent as I hear its cry of distress.

Besides that, I remember that some of the most splendid achievements for the cause of that Asiatic Christ have been made in India. How the heart of every intelligent Christian beats with admiration at the mere mention of the name of Henry Martyn. Having read the life of our American David Brainerd, who gave his life to evangelizing our American savages, Henry Martyn goes forward to give his life for the salvation of India, dying from exhaustion of service at 31 years of age. Lord Macaulay, writing of him, says:

> Here Martyn lies! In manhood's early bloom,
> The Christian hero found a Pagan tomb!
> Religion, sorrowing o'er her favorite son,
> Points to the glorious trophies which he won.
> Immortal trophies! Not with slaughter red,
> Nor stained with tears by friendless orphans shed:
> But trophies of the Cross! In that dear name,
> Through every scene of danger, toil and shame,
> Onward he journeyed to that happy shore,
> Where danger, toil and shame are known no more.

Is there in all history, secular or religious, a more wondrous character than Wm. Carey, the converted shoemaker of England, daring all things for God in India, translating the Bible into many dialects, building chapels, and opening mission houses, and laying foundations for the redemption of the country, and although Sidney Smith, who sometimes laughed at things he ought not to have satirized, had in the learned Edinburgh Review scoffed at the idea of what he called "low-born, low-bred mechanics" like Carey attempting to convert the Brahmins, Carey stopped not until he had started influences that eternity, no more than time, shall have power to arrest, 213,000 Bibles going forth from his printing presses at Serampore. His sublime humility showing itself in the epitaph he ordered from the old Gospel hymn:

> A wretched, poor and helpless worm,
> On thy kind arms I fall.

Need I tell you of Alphonse Jacroix, the Swiss missionary in India; or of William Butler, the glorious American Methodist missionary in India; or of the royal family of the Scudders, of the Reformed Church of America, my dear mother church to whom I give a kiss of love in passing; or of Dr. Alexander Duff, the Scotch missionary, whose visit to this country some of us will remember? When he stood in the old Broadway tabernacle, New York, and pleaded for India until there was no other depth of religious emotion for him to stir, and no loftier heighth of Christian eloquence for him to scale and closed in a whirlwind of hallelujahs, I could easily believe that which was said of him—that while pleading the cause of India in one of the churches of Scotland he got so overwrought that he fell in the pulpit in a swoon and was carried into the vestry to be resuscitated, and when restored to his senses and preparations were being made to carry him out to some dwelling where he could be put to bed he compelled his friends to take him back to the pulpit to complete his plea for the salvation of India, no sooner getting on his feet than he began where he left off, but with more gigantic power than before he fainted. But just as noble as any I have mentioned are the men and women who are there now for Christ's sake and the redemption of that people. Far away from their native land, famine on one side and black plague on the other side, swamps breathing on them malaria, and jungles howling on them with wild beasts or hissing with cobras; the names of those missionaries of all denominations to be written so high on the roll of martyrs that no names of the last eighteen hundred years shall be written above them. You need to see them in their work in schools and churches and lazarettos to appreciate them. All honor upon them and their households, while I smite the lying lips of their slanderers.

Most interesting are the people of India. At Calcutta I said to one of their leaders, who spoke English well:

"Have these idols which I see any power of themselves to help or destroy?"

He said: "No; they only represent God. There is but one God."

"When people die where do they go?"

"That depends upon what they have been doing; if they have been doing good, to Heaven, and if they have been doing evil, to hell."

"But do you not believe in the transmigration of souls, and that after death we go into birds or animals of some sort?"

"Yes, the last creature a man is thinking of while dying is the one into which he will go. If he is thinking of a bird, he will go into a bird; if he is thinking of a beast, he will go into a beast."

"I thought you said that at death the soul goes to Heaven or hell."

"He goes there by a gradual process. It may take him years and years."

"Can any one become a Hindoo? Could I become a Hindoo?"

"Yes, you could."

"How could I become a Hindoo?"

"By doing as the Hindoos do?"

From the walls of one of their museums at Jeypore I had translated for me these beautiful sentiments:

The wise make failure equal to success.

Like threads of silver seen through crystal beads, let love through good deeds show.

Do not to others that which if done to thee would cause thee pain. And this is the sum of duty.

A man obtains a proper rule of action by looking on his neighbors as himself.

From that continent of interesting folk, from that continent that gave the Christ, from that continent which has been endeared by so many missionary heroics, there comes a groan of 80,000,000 people in hunger. More people are in danger of starving to death in India to-day than the entire population of the United States. In the famine in India in the year 1877, about 6,000,000 people starved to death. That is more than all the people of Washington, of New York, of Philadelphia, of Chicago put together. But that famine was not a tenth part as awful as the one there now raging. Twenty thousand are dying there of famine every day. Whole villages and towns have died—every man, woman and child; none left to bury the dead. The vultures and the jackals are the only pallbearers. Though some help has been sent, before full relief can reach them I suppose there will be at least 10,000,000 dead. Starvation, even for one person, is an awful process. No food, the vitals gnaw upon themselves, and faintness and languor and pangs from head to foot, and horror and despair and insanity take full possession. One handful of wheat or corn or rice per day would keep life going, but they can not get a handful.

The crops failed and the millions are dying. Oh, it is hard to be hungry in a world where there is enough grain, and fruit, and meat to fill all the hungry months on the planet; but alas! that the sufferer and the supply can not be brought together. There stands India to-day! Look at her! Her face dusky from the hot suns of many centuries; under her turban such achings of brow as only a dying nation feels; her eyes hollow with unutterable woe; the tears rolling down her sunken cheek; her back bent with more agonies than she knew how to carry; her ovens containing nothing but ashes. Gaunt, ghastly, wasted, the dew of death upon her forehead and a pallor such as the last hour brings, she stretches forth her trembling hand toward us and with hoarse whisper she says: "I am dying! Give me bread! That is what I want! Give it to me quick; give it to me now—bread! bread! bread!" America has heard the cry.

Many thousands of dollars have already been contributed. One ship laden with breadstuffs has sailed from San Francisco for India. Our senate and house of representatives, in a bill signed by our sympathetic president, have authorized the secretary of the navy to charter a vessel to carry food to the famine sufferers, and you may help fill that ship. We want to send at least 600,000 bushels of corn. That will save the lives of at least 600,000 people. Many will respond in contributions of money, and the barns and corn cribs of the entire United States will pour forth their treasures of food. When that ship is laden till it can carry no more we will ask Him who holds the winds in His fist and plants His triumphant foot on stormy waves to let nothing but good happens to the ship till it anchors in Bengal or Arabian waters. They who help by contributions of money or breadstuffs toward filling that relief ship will flavor their own food for their lifetime with appetizing qualities, and insure their own welfare through the promise of Him who said: "Blessed is he that considereth the poor; the Lord will deliver him in time of trouble."

FRANZ HALS' portrait of a man in a white ruff and black hat brought $17,585 recently in London, that being the highest price paid at an action sale in England for one of his pictures, not two dozen of which in all have been sold in this country. An interior with figures by Jan Steen sold for $5,000, two landscapes with figures on horseback by De Keyser brought $5,775 and $2,625. Sir Edwin Landseer's "Hinds Alarmed" was sold for $2,625, and C. Stanfield's "Nelson's Victory Towed Into Gibraltar After the Battle of Trafalgar" for $1,260.

A WILLIAMSBURG (New York) policeman has earned a large-sized medal for a display of ingenuity almost unexampled in a "cop." He arrested three men at once a few days ago but they refused to accompany him to the station house. Of course he couldn't very well handle three men and of course he didn't want any one of them to get away from him. How did he solve the problem? Easily enough by just swearing in one of the disorderlies as an officer and ordering him to escort one man while he escorted the other to lock and key.

WHAT MAKES HARD TIMES?

Some Facts and Figures That Speak for Themselves.

Why hard times in this country is a question well worth considering. Why such suffering as we have had for years when the land has been blessed with abundant harvest and with a population disposed to active industry with organized industries of the very best and natural resources unequaled.

A recent government report shows how the farmers have suffered from low prices, and this gives us some light at least. We give some figures that speak for themselves:

In 1896 we produced 2,283,000,000 bushels of corn; the farm price for it was 21.5 cents a bushel, and the total value $491,000,000. In 1891, for a corn production of 2,060,000,000 bushels, the farm price was 40.6 cents a bushel, and the total value was $836,440,000, or $345,000,000 more than the farmers received in 1896 for a vastly larger crop. A loss like this must affect the whole country.

In the latter part of 1896 a slight improvement took place in the price of wheat, owing to scarcity abroad, yet the farmers got for the crop of that year $202,000,000 less than for the crop of 1891. The average of wheat was 72.6 cents a bushel, against 84 in 1891, but we had the advantage of a failure of the European and Indian crops, which forced up the price of wheat; otherwise we would scarcely have got more than the 50-cent average. With crops of wheat half as large again as ten years ago we are getting some $70,000,000 a year less for it.

Oats make a worse showing. For a vastly larger crop in 1896 the farmer receives $70,000,000 less than for the average crop of the six years from 1890 to 1895, and $50,000 less than for the average from 1880 to 1889.

In these three great farm products the farmers received $570,000,000 less in 1896 than the average of preceding years. This decline in prices has been going on for some 20 years, and if cotton and other crops were taken into the account the loss would be increased by hundreds of millions more.

All this explains the shrinkage in everything else; in the prices of mill and factory products and the wages of the mechanic, the laborer and miner. Farmers and those dependent on the marketing of their products constitute fully one-half the population of the union.

The republican party proposes to remedy all this by increasing taxation, thereby making dearer those articles the farmer has to buy. In addition to this, their protective policy is calculated to seriously cripple our trade with foreign nations where our breadstuffs and provisions find a market. Let us not forget that the country during all these years has been under republican policy. The ruin is theirs.—Springfield (Ill.) Register.

TO RESTORE SILVER.

This Country Must Act Upon Its Own Responsibility.

The so-called "silver men" in the United States have no desire to block the way to a just and proper international agreement for the restoration of bimetallism. If the monetary system known by that name is a good one, or if it be better than gold monometallism, it follows, as of course, that it cannot become a bad thing if procured by international agreement.

But we do not believe that such an agreement with the leading commercial nations is within the scope of reasonable probability under existing conditions. The two nations whose concurrence is deemed essential are England and Germany. The finacial policy of both countries is absolutely controlled by the creditor classes. It is true that the best economic thought of Europe, both in England and upon the continent, is in favor of bimetallism. But this "economic thought" is not the controlling force in European politics. While the great arguments in favor of bimetallism are unanswered, and will remain unanswered, it is not apparent that any progress has been made toward its reestablishment. In truth, the tendencies seem to be the other way. The reason is perfectly plain. The moneyed men, who constitute the world's great creditors, are benefited by the appreciation of money. It enables them to collect their pay in money more valuable (i. e., of greater purchasing power) than that which they loaned. Now and then we find a man whose generous instincts lead him to surrender a pecuniary advantage. But such men are few, and, as a rule, they do not belong to the class of professional money lenders. The latter are altogether insensible to argument based upon moral and equitable considerations if those considerations are opposed to their interests. When dealing with the money lenders themselves argument in favor of enlarging the money volume is simply wasted.

These same classes are all powerful in shaping the financial policy of their respective governments. There is no form of wealth so potential as ready money. We know something of its power in our own politics. The banker controls the "business man," the business man controls his employes, and together they, in large measure, control the elections. In Europe, where universal suffrage is unknown, where the governments are either practically in the hands of a single man or a select few, it necessarily follows that the distinctively "creditor classes" constitute a relatively greater "power" than they do here. They not only influence the elections in countries where elections are held, but they influence the leading "statesmen" and, in large measure, dictate their policy.—National Bimetallist.

——It was supposed that the change of administration would cause a general rise in values, but so far the only things that have risen have been the Mississippi river, the airship and popular indignation.—Washington Times.

THE PEOPLE IGNORED.

A Case of Government by the Money Power.

The people last fall voted for currency reform, and they looked for and expected it, until they were given to understand that the republican campaign promises were only a feature of a sort of bunco game. A great number of voters supported the republican candidate for the presidency under the assurance that his election would promote the interests of the bimetallic cause. Those voters also were fooled, although the president has made a show of carrying out the pledge of the St. Louis platform. We are not to have any currency reform; we are not to have a bimetallic policy. We are to have only tariff of a high brand. High tariff has long been an article of republican faith, and the leaders would like to put another rubber measure on the statute book, so that if it should happen to just antedate the return of prosperity, a pure republican policy would be credited with having brought good times. The New York Press' Washington correspondent thus explains the failure of currency legislation to materialize:

"Leading republicans know that if the house should pass a bill reforming the currency or to permit pooling or any legislation objectionable to the silver combine in the senate the tariff bill would be made the object of their revenge.

"The activity of the house in thrusting upon the senate corporation or financial legislation instantly would rekindle with added fire all the animosities of the campaign, and the silver question would jump to the front. There would be endless debate, and the result would be the failure of everything which is earnestly desired. Above all issues the republican managers intend to keep the tariff forward."

There's the whole secret. The republican party does not want to take any orders from the people. It proposes to show them that it knows better than they do what they want, and while there is something desperate about this bluff, it will work well if the country be favored with that prosperity, which, it is widely believed, will not return until something is done to relieve the stringency that is caused by a faulty currency system. That is, republican defiance of the will of the people will go down with the people if it shall prove to be a success, but the chances for success are so slender that the republican leaders may well pause before proceeding to the length of establishing a policy of robbery instead of one of relief. They have no notion of pausing, however, unfortunately for them and their party.—Binghamton (N. Y.) Leader.

TRUE DEMOCRATIC PRINCIPLES.

Grover Cleveland's Anti-Democratic Position.

In setting forth what true democracy is Mr. Cleveland says that "above all things" it "insists that the money of the people should be sound and stable, neither shrivelling in purchasing power in the hands of the poor, nor by its uncertain value driving enterprise and productive energy into hiding." This is true, as far as it goes. Democracy, above all things, insists that the money by means of which the people make their changes shall not appreciate in value to such an extent as to double their debts—to such an extent as to cause the products of their labor to shrivel and shrink in value in their hands until they are unable to buy enough money with them to pay their debts and taxes. Democracy insists that it is far better for the prosperity of the country for the purchasing power of money to "shrivel" than it is for the purchasing power of the products of the people's labor to shrink.

We have seen what an unstable and unsound dollar has done for the people even during Mr. Cleveland's administration. It has resulted in the prostration of trade, the paralysis of business and the destruction of millions of values, all because the value of the unsound and unstable dollar has been increasing in purchasing power, while the products of the people's labor have been decreasing in price. Democracy is as fair to the debtor and the producer as it is to the owners of capital loaned or invested. The whole mission is of justice. It is not true that a rise in general prices to the level of 1873 would work injustice to any class. Those who are profiting by the shrinkage in the debt-paying and purchasing power of the products of human labor have no right to such an advantage, for it is an advantage that works overwhelming injustice to the people, and, indeed, to all classes.

We are very glad that Mr. Cleveland made his speech. For the first time in his public career he takes his true position; for even through the fog in which his ideas are enveloped the people can see that he has no sympathy whatever with the fundamental principles of democracy. He may not be a republican, but he is an anti-democrat. His associations must his sympathies are all with the small class that is enriching itself at the expense of the people's prosperity.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE ARMENIAN HOLOCAUST.

A Hundred Thousand Christians Killed by the Turkish Hordes.

Readers of Mr. Gladstone's eloquent letter on the Cretan question probably noted his reference to the estimate of a German of the slain in the Armenian massacres. Mr. Gladstone quotes from "Armenia and Europe, an Indictment," by Dr. J. Lepsius, of the University of Berlin.

Dr. Lepsius is a distinguished professor in Berlin, bearing a name as distinguished. He made the investigation for himself. He rode through Armenia, heard both sides, talked with Moslem and Armenian, government officers and civilians, collated his facts with German method, and began with a prepossession in favor of Turkey. This is his awful summary:

"Killed in the massacres, about 85,000.

"Towns and villages laid waste, about 2,500.

"Churches and convents destroyed 568.

"Forced to adopt the Mohammedan faith, 559 villages, with all their surviving inhabitants, and hundreds of families in the towns.

"Churches turned into mosques, 232.

"Number of those without means of subsistence, about 500,000.

"These figures only give the extent of our statistical information. A full statement of the facts would be much more terrible.

"When we think of the thousands in the unregistered villages who were murdered, or died of their wounds, or who perished trying to escape, or succumbed to hunger or disease, and were buried in the mountains under the winter snow, we shall be understanding the number of victims of the Armenian massacres if we reckon it to be 100,000."

No reports have exaggerated these awful facts, which stand now as part of history, and all this Christian Europe permitted. To-day there is little left but orphans, and the support of these is taxing the charity of Christendom, though one dollar will support an orphan for a month, and $12 for a year. With all the many calls, this is one which should not be neglected.—Philadelphia Press.

Holidays in Colonial Times.

New York state celebrates nine holidays, namely: New Year's day, Lincoln's birthday, Washington's birthday, Decoration day, Fourth of July, Labor day, election day, Thanksgiving day and Christmas. Before the revolution New York had 26 annual holidays. Of these only Christmas, New Year's, Thanksgiving and election day still survive. The others were: The king's birthday, anniversary of the death of Charles I., Shrove Tuesday, Ash Wednesday, Lady day, Good Friday, Easter Monday, Easter Tuesday, Ascension day, St. George's day, Restoration day of Charles II., queen's birthday, Whitsun Monday, Whitsun Tuesday, prince of Wales' birthday, the day that King George landed in England, coronation day, All Saints' days anniversary of gunpowder plot, first day and commencement day of King's (now Columbia) college.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Spiral Arrow Heads.

Several chalcedony arrow heads are reported to have been found in New Jersey, which are so peculiar in form that, if they are genuine relics of Indian times, they seem to indicate that the red men may have sought, in some cases, to give their arrows a twisting motion, like that of a rifle ball. The arrow heads in question are cut in a spiral shape, and one of them makes a fifth of a turn in its length of two and a half inches. Dropped point down in water, it is said, it will perform a complete revolution in a space of about 30 inches.—Youth's Companion.

BUILDING A TUB SILO.

Plans for One Large Enough for Ten or Twelve Cows.

In constructing a tub silo, it is usual to cut out every other space between the hoops for the doors. A silo 16 feet high would need but two doors, and these should be put in as shown in cut. When the staves of the silo are put in place, the stave at one side of where the opening for the door is to be should be cut about one-half off so that the saw can be inserted when the silo is erected and the remainder of the door sawed out without making an auger hole. Saw the door at a bevel, making the opening larger on the inside, so the door will fit snugly in place when pressed home by the ensilage. The edges of the staves should be beveled so that, when set in place, they will form a tight joint along their entire edge. The silo need not necessarily be perfectly tight when empty, nor need it be water-tight when the filling commences. The hoops should be tightened before filling and the staves brought closely together so that no piece of ensilage can get between the staves. The moisture of the ensilage will cause the wood to expand so that, not only will the silo become tight, but the strain may become so great upon the hoops that, unless they be loosened slightly, they may be burst. A tub silo always needs close attention for a few days after filling, and the strain relieved if necessary. A silo 15 feet in diameter and 16 feet high would hold 34 tons of ensilage. For feeding 10 cows 30 pounds per day, this silo would hold an amount nearly sufficient to keep them one year. — Rural New Yorker.

MOVING FARM CROPS.

Their Primary Transportation Is the Farmer's Heaviest Tax.

Speaking recently at a meeting on the subject of good roads at Newburg, N. Y., Hon. G. E. Harrison (of the United States department of agriculture bureau of roads) said he had spent 50 years on a farm, in New Jersey and Pennsylvania, and ten years in his present position; he was therefore, he thought, qualified to speak. The road question had loomed up because it had been found that it takes a third of their value to move the crops, the cost of primary transportation being very large. On an average it costs 25 cents per ton to pay for primary transportation. In 1895 it cost $946,000,000 to move produce, to pay for its primary transportation. Farms could not be put on lines of railroads, and railroads will not go into farms any more than they now are. Investigation had shown that it costs 7 cents per mile to move farm products over country roads. Farmers do not think of this, or if they do, they figure that it does not really cost them anything, as they do the hauling with their own teams. The government found that the cost of transportation from the farm could be reduced two-thirds by having good roads, and had issued 24 bulletins giving information on the subject. New Jersey was the first to adopt the state aid law, and it is economical, and produces the best results. That law was started by farmers. The speaker gave the wheelmen credit, but remarked dryly that they don't move the national government. The wheelmen knew nothing about the state aid act, and it was passed without their help and hardly their knowledge. Being asked about wide tires on good roads, the speaker replied that the best rolling any road could be given was by wide-tire wagon. In New Jersey men who use wide-tired wagons are given a rebate of one dollar per wheel per annum on their taxes.

ORCHARD AND GARDEN.

Keep suckers from growing around the base of the trees.

There is no necessity for any kind of shade in the garden.

The time to shape the heads of the trees is when they are young.

While a sandy soil is best for the peach it is essential that it be rich.

The suds from the wash tub are a good fertilizer to use in the garden.

In selecting trees take those with a smooth, healthy-looking bark, with small fibrous roots.

To prevent rot in grapes commence spraying early, using the Bordeaux mixture, so as to kill the discase before warm weather sets in.—St. Louis Republic.

Hint for Apple Growers.

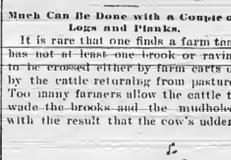
Valuable lessons may be learned from the experience of apple growers the past season. One is that fruit packed and placed in cold storage in too ripe condition will not turn out satisfactorily in the spring. Large quantities put away be fast fall as fine, and counted as long keepers, are turning out poorly. Such fruit as was stored in best condition is now selling at top prices of the season. If the rule holds that a year of great abundance and over-bearing is followed by a moderate yield the next season, the apple crop of 1897 will prove much more manageable. Spray your trees intelligently and thoroughly, that profits accruing from the sale of choice fruit next fall may make up for losses the past season.—Orange Judd Farmer.

LAWS OF THE ROAD.

Facts Not Known to All Who Go Upon the Highways.

The talk of the many thousands is often turned toward the law of the road, for there is no one who does not make use of roads either to ride, drive or walk upon. For the protection of the traveling public it is necessary that certain rules regulating travel upon the public highways be generally observed.

Our statutes do not require a traveler to keep upon any particular part of the road, nor to turn out in any certain direction, but it is universal custom in this country for vehicles and animals under the charge of man to take the right side of the road when meeting others, if it is reasonably practical to do so. A team should, in general, keep the right side, whether meeting another or not. Yet, when two are going in the same direction, and one wishes to pass the other, he should pass on the left side, as the first team has the right of way and cannot be expected to deviate from his course upon the right side. One passing another must use great care to avoid a collision, as nothing but necessity will warrant him in doing this, for both, going in the same direction, belong upon the right side, and by any deviation from his proper side one assumes all risk of the experiment. The rule must be very strictly observed at night, or when, by reason of storm or fog, it may be difficult to distinguish others approaching.



A traveler on foot or on horseback must give way to a vehicle, and a lightly-loaded team must give way to a heavily-loaded one, but a team with a heavy load ought, in certain cases, to stand still so as to allow a lighter vehicle to pass. The driver of a horse must use ordinary care in hitching it, for if a horse left unhitched starts and occasions damage the responsibility rests upon him who neglected to hitch it. But if a team is hitched with ordinary care and is frightened by some unusual disturbance, as by a runaway team running against it, and the team so hitched breaks away and in turn runs and causes damage, no liability rests upon him who carefully hitched his horse.

The movement of sleighs and sleds upon the snow being comparatively noiseless, it is customary to attach bells to them or to the horses, and the want of bells would render a person liable for damages. Bicycles are regarded as vehicles, and are subject to the same rules—they must give way to heavier vehicles, and foot passengers must in turn give way to them. Massachusetts laws require bells to be attached to all bicycles. As no one is obliged to build fences next the highway, the use of which is common to all people who choose to travel upon it, so drovers of cattle and other animals are not responsible for damage by their traveling herds, if reasonable care be exercised in their management.—Utica (N. Y.) Observer.

SIMPLE FARM BRIDGE.

Much Can Be Done with a Couple of Logs and Planks.

It is rare that one finds a farm that has not at least one brook or ravine to be crossed either by farm carts or by the cattle returning from pasture. Too many farmers allow the cattle to wade the brooks and the mudholes, with the result that the cow's udders are covered with mud and the milk endangered—for the ordinary milker is not careful to get all the dust and dirt off the cows' udders before beginning to milk. Bridge the pasture streams.

This can often be done by throwing a couple of logs across and placing planks crosswise upon them. Where the stream is a little too wide for this the plan shown in the cut can be used—a simple bit of engineering that can be put up by anyone who can wield an ax. To make the sides less steep, put a larger log crosswise under the lower ends of the planks. Notch the side logs so that the crosswise logs will be retained by them without slipping. Spike the planks to the logs and the bridge will last for a great many years. —N. Y. Tribune.

Koch's Rinderpest Serum.

Hitherto all efforts to check rinder pest, except by destroying the animals, have been futile. But now the farmers of South Afrien are rejoicing over the discovery by Prof. Koch, the great German scientist, of a remedy. It consists of serum from the blood of an animal which has recovered from the disease, mixed with a quantity of virulent rinderpest blood. Animals, when injected with this mixture, were able to withstand an injection of 20 cubic centimeters of rinderpest blood, a ten-thousandth of which is a fatal dose. One liter suffices for 50 head of cattle. A second important discovery is that one hypodermic injection of ten cubic centimeters of bile from cattle who have succumbed to the disease will render healthy cattle immune. The local result is merely a hard swelling, which soon disappears. This method of immuning cattle may enable a wide belt of those inoculated to be placed between healthy and infected areas. Prof. Koch urges cattle owners to unvail themselves at once of his discovery.

Worthy of Imitation.

Nineteenth century road-makers are recommended to study the methods of the Romans, which reveal modes of construction worthy of imitation.

CATCHING FLYING FISH.

An Important Industry Off the Coast of Barbadoes.

Off the coast of Barbadoes, where a species known as Exocetus Volitans is found, flying fish are very good food and form the staple of a considerable industry. The negroes go out in small boats and catch them mostly at night. After a good catch the boats come into shallow water, where they are met by negroes with large baskets, into which the fish are cast. These baskets are carried to the shore, where they are put on light single-wheel trucks—something between a railway porter's truck and a light wheelbarrow—and so conveyed by another set of blacks to the market. Here are gathered together a large number of negro women, all eager to secure good fish to hawk in the street. These women know their business thoroughly, and have a keen eye for a bargain. They affect indifference, and some will even smoke a pipe as if to show how little concerned they are in what is going on.

This, however, deceives no one; for every one concerned knows that each woman is trembling with impatience to secure the best fish at the lowest rate. Indeed as to bargains, they are as fond of making them as any lady shopping in the West End, and make them much better than their fairer sisters. Having secured as many fish as they require, they hoist the baskets on to their heads, and cry their wares through the town; and usually do not take very long to sell the lot. Clad in white, with short skirts showing bare shiny black legs, and with baskets on their heads, these sturdy fishwives present a very picturesque appearance; and when Sambo, the ever-obsequious waiter, serves you with a plate of flying fish at your dinner, you may be very certain that the fish has been bought from one of these dusky hawkers. You afterward learn from grinning Sambo that your wish to encourage their trade has been fulfilled, and there is no other source from which fish can be got except from these black, but comely, fishwives.

Flying fish are so called from the fact that they have the pectoral fins so large that they are enabled to make short flights or leaps from the water. It is a vexed question whether or not the flying fishes use their pectoral fins for flight, but the general belief is that the fins act merely after the manner of a parachute or of a kite. However that may be, these fish possess the power of rising from the water to a height of 20 feet, and often fall on the decks of ships. More frequently they skim along the water. There are several kinds of flying fish more than 30 species being known. They inhabit the seas of the warmer parts of the world. They swim in shoals, varying from 12 to 100 or more. It is a fine sight to see a whole shoal rise out of the water and dart through the air for a couple of hundred yards, and then drop into the sea together to continue the flight. The cause of the hurry is apparent when you see a hungry dolphin in hot pursuit of the shoal, taking great leaps after his prey. The flying fish take shorter and shorter flights, until at last they sink into the water, and fall easy victims to their pursuer.—London Graphic.

SILKWORMS OF LEBANON.

How They Are Cultivated in the Mountains of Tripoli.

Concerning the silk industry, which plays such an important part in the lives of the natives, Mr. Fenn says: As the time approaches for the silkworm to hatch out of the egg, the family move out of the house, and camp under the trees, giving up the entire establishment to the worms, after having placed the eggs on shelves made of a reed like bamboo. At first the young worms are fed on finely-chopped leaves; but as they grow larger the leaves need only be broken in two. The people have to feed and watch the worms night and day, or they wander in search of food and are lost; and in the silence of the night the sound of the worms feeding is like a gently falling rain.

The worms fast three or four times during this period, and about 24 hours is the length of each fast. A curious feature about their fast is their posture; they assume the attitude of a cobra snake about to strike, and remain rigidly fixed in that position for the entire period. When they are ready to spin, small branches are placed on the shelves, and as the cocoons are formed upon them the dead twigs seem to bear golden fruit. When the worms get through that part of the business the neighbors are called in—something as to an old-fashioned New England apple paring bee. They call it "qtaf" in Arabic—that is "picking;" and soon you see piles of pale-green, pure white and golden-yellow cocoons heaped upon the floor. Later they may be spun into hanks; but usually the cocoons are sent down the mountains to Tripoli or Damascus, and after their 30 or 40 days of toil, they too often have to sell the produce for next to nothing, as the Chinese are always ready to undersell them.

Another curious use Mr. Silkworm is put to is to soak him in vinegar for some hours, after which he is drawn out into so-called "catgut" to make spells or leaders for fishhooks.—Harry Tuttle, in St. Nicholas.

"I'm afraid," said the old gentleman, shaking his head sadly, "that you have permitted Mabel to acquire extravagant tastes."

GOOD HEALTH AT SIXTY-EIGHT

Mrs. Blair Tells the Secret of Her Recovery from a General Breaking Down of Her Health.

From the Leader, Cleveland, Ohio.

In Geauga Lake, Geauga County, Ohio, where farming comprises the principal industry of the inhabitants, Mrs. S. N. Blair, presides over an area of 200 fertile acres, a heritage from her late husband. She superintends the working of the farm and the sale of its products, and though she is 68 years old, she performs easily the work which would tire a much younger woman. Indeed, Mrs. Blair's appearance belies her age, and she seems to be much farther away than two years from the allotted three score and ten.

"Mr. Blair was sick for eleven months before he died," Mrs. Blair began in relating her story, "and I was almost constantly at his bedside, ministering to his wants, and trying to nurse him back to strength and vigor. His death left me about ruined in health. The reaction after the constant attendance during his illness came after he was laid away, and I was completely prostrated. I was troubled with violent headaches at first together with general prostration. Then came rheumatism, first in one place and then in another. Nervous prostration followed, and I was too weak to stand alone. I also had a severe and acute case of sore throat.

"My physician advised me to use Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, saying they were an excellent remedy. I followed his advice and began to take them. They were just as good as the doctor declared they were. The headaches and my extreme nervous condition began to disappear before I had used the pills a week, and gradually left me entirely. I felt myself growing stronger every day, and at the end of two months, I was sufficiently improved to take a trip east. On my journey and during my visit away from home I continued to take the pills and when I returned to my farm here I had completely recovered. I was as well and strong again as I had been previous to my husband's illness and death, and have remained so ever since.

"I can truthfully say that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have prolonged my life, and made it possible for me at the age of 68 years, to manage this large farm and do much of the work. I have three grown children—one, a son, who is connected with the First National Bank, of Youngstown, Ohio, and two married daughters. All have homes of their own. I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to many of my neighbors, and they have used them to their advantage."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain, in a condensed form, all the elements necessary to give new life and richness to the blood and restore shattered nerves. They are also a specific for troubles peculiar to females such as suppressions, irregularities and all forms of weakness. They build up the blood, and restore the glow of health to pale and sallow cheeks. In men they effect a radical cure in all cases arising from mental worry, overwork or excesses of whatever nature. Pink Pills are sold in boxes (never in loose bulk) at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, and may be had of all druggists, or direct by mail from Dr. Williams' Medicine Company, Schenectady, N. Y.

Mrs. Musicus—"Did you have much trouble in learning to sing so beautifully?" Miss Frankly—"Yes; especially with the neighbors."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

BROOKLINE, Mass., has taken steps in the way of teaching local history. A guide to the history and geography of the town has been prepared for the use of the public schools, the purpose being to give the children an acquaintance with their town, the chief events, leading characters in its history and historical buildings and points of interest. It is also intended to teach them something of the present conditions and to inspire them with respect and affection for it. This involves discussion of the various phases of municipal government and the plan, if carried out will make intelligent citizens.

SEEING AND BELIEVING.

Some of the Tricks the Eyes Play on the Understanding.

It is an old and wise saying that "seeing is believing," yet every body knows that very often what you see, and therefore believe, proves to be not really true at all. As we grow older, says a writer in St. Nicholas, finding that our eyes have so frequently deceived us, we are often not satisfied until we have verified it by touch or smell or hearing or taste, or by looking at some doubtful thing from different points of view, or under a different lighting.

We are not willing to believe that a conjurer actually draws rabbits from a man's ear or coin from the tip of his nose just because our eyes tell us such tales. Sometimes our deceptions are so lasting that things must be made wrong in order to look right, which seems rather contradictory. If we look at the letter S or the figure 8 as carefully as we can the upper and lower halves seem to be almost exactly the same size. If we turn them upside down, the difference in the size of the loops is quite astonishing, and we wonder how we could have been so mistaken; yet perhaps the truth is that the loops are neither so different nor so much alike as they seem to be, as we see when we look at them turned upon their sides.

The landsman, tourist or commercial traveler, speedily begins, and not only begins, but continues, to feel the extreme of human misery during the transit across the tempestuous Atlantic. But it, with wise prescience, he has provided himself with a supply of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, his pangs are promptly mitigated, and then cease ere the good ship again drops her anchor. This is worth knowing, and thousands of our yachtsmen, summer voyagers, tourists and business men do know it.

Harrison cows are not doing their duty. In Louisville one swallowed a clock because, as Will Hill says, she was probably considerably run down. In Fleming one lived for fifteen days in an ice-house and is expected to give ice-cream through the summer. Another gives butter and milk three times a day. Harrison cows do nothing but give milk and have calves and they don't have them any longer than farmers can get them to the express office. —Cynthiana Democrat.

The officers of the Kentucky River packet Falls City reports that the great fruit-growers along that stream say their peaches are safe beyond any further doubt. The massive orchards are in full bloom, and their owners are consequently happy. The Kentucky River Fruit Company have 70,000 trees; Woodstock Fruit Company have 30,000 and there are several others that have from 10,000 to 25,000 trees, all to bear this year—to say nothing of possibly 120,000 trees that belong to persons on that marine thoroughfare.

John Pendergast, who lives at Robards, this State, lost a hog the latter part of last January, and after looking around for several days failed to find it and gave it up as lost. On Saturday, April 25, Frank Hopgood, colored, was washing his buggy in the yard of an unoccupied house a few doors below Mr. Pendergast's house, and hearing a noise in the smoke-house found the lost hog. When the hog disappeared he was in good fix, weighing about 175 pounds, when found he would not weigh over thirty-five pounds. He was confined in the smoke-house for three months and three days without food or water.

It looks now as if there, would be a scarcity of hogs when feeding time comes next fall. The hog cholera swine plague, or whatever name the disease may bear was never so prevalent as this season. It is not local either, but affects the North, the West, and in fact all points where hogs are raised in quantities. In consequence hogs of all kinds and weights are being sent to market, and pigs of fifty pounds weight are not uncommon sights in the market. Other hogs that ordinarily would be fed until in the summer are being sent to the market. There is already a great scarcity of stock hogs in many places and this will increase.

The probable acreage which will, in the next few weeks, be set in Tobacco for the 1897 crop, is still a mooted question. The chances now are for a slight reduction as compared with 1896. Despite all that has been said in favor of a short crop, however, and the unanswerable arguments advanced by members of the trade on all sides, going to show the advantages which would result to all concerned by growing quality instead of quantity this year, it seems altogether likely that if the crop is materially reduced it will be as the result of unfavorable weather conditions and not from voluntary action on the part of the growers.—Western Tobacco Journal.

Calamity in a dreaded form rests on the household of Jack Brigman, a farmer, living in McCracken county. Four of the family of twelve members became insane within 3 days' time. Several weeks ago M. I. Barber had a visit from M. Ferigo, of Italy. He is a commissioner representing his government, his mission being to investigate the processes of curing and aging tobacco in this country. He had been to Virginia, and was there referred to Mr. Barker as an expert in the business. Mr. Ferigo examined everything closely and very intelligently. From here he went to Liggett & Myers, concern in St. Louis and inspected it, but the most satisfactory information he got was here. He went back to Italy and reported. He has now landed in New York again and writes Mr. B. that he will soon be here again and that he expects to do considerable business with him. It must be remembered that the tobacco business of his country is all in the hands of the government. Under their present system they get inferior tobacco, but have to pay good prices for it. They have to keep their money invested a long time too, in order to get aged tobacco. It is believed he will arrange some way through Mr. Barker to get good tobacco aged quickly and save his government much money. He directed Mr. Barker to save him forty pounds of tobacco seed, which would indicate that he expects to start tobacco culture in his own country.—Carrollton Democrat.

The tendency of the tobacco trade the past week has been more favorable and there was some advance. The limited offerings are causing a strongrr competion among the manufacturers' buyers, and while the increase in prices is small there is a better demand, and offerings are hardly sufficient to meet it. The season between the winter and summer order tobacco always cause some advance, as the shipments are limited and a large portion of the sales are old stock carried over, and it is always a good opportunity to close out before it goes into the second sweat and the redried new comes into competition.—Western Tobacco Journal.

Date of Primary Election Changed to June 5, 1897.

Pursuant to the call of the Chairman of the county Democratic Executive committee, the committee met in D. E. Castleman's law office in Burlington, last Monday afternoon. The following members were present: D. E. Castleman, chairman; B. L. Rice, Secretary, P. E. Cason, proxy for Elijah Parker; Reuben Conner, Richard Stephens, Robt. McGlasson, Geo. Ossman, proxy for J. C. Hughes.

The chairman stated the object of the meeting to be for the purpose of considering the propriety of changing the date of the primary election as fixed at the last meeting. A motion to reconsider the action of the committee on the second Monday in December was made and carried, and the order made on that date is now held for naught.

It was agreed by the committee to hold a primary election to nominate candidates for the various county offices to be filled at the regular election in November, 1897. It was further agreed that said primary election be held on the first Saturday in June, 1897, and the Executive Committee will meet in the Court-house in Burlington, at 2 o'clock p. m., on Monday, June 7th, 1897, and count the votes cast for each candidate for the respective offices, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes cast for any office will be declared the Democratic nominee for that office.

The committee adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That all persons who voted for Bryan and Sewall at the last November election, and all persons who did not vote but would have voted for Bryan and Sewall had they voted, and all young men who will be legal voters at the next November election, and will pledge themselves to support the Democratic party and the nominees of said primary election, shall be allowed to vote.

Resolved, That all persons who desire to be candidates before said primary election shall, on or before the 5th day of April, 1897, record their names with the chairman of the county committee, and pay their assessments to him.

Resolved, That only such candidates who pay their assessments to defray the expenses of said primary election, on or before the fifth day of April, 1897, shall be entitled to have their name placed upon the ballots to be voted for.

Resolved, That all candidates for precinct offices and for Coroner who wish their names to appear upon the ballots for said primary, shall pay to the chairman of the county committee one dollar, to help pay the expenses of said primary election.

The chairman and secretary were authorized to assess the candidates to defray the expenses of the primary election.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXII. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MAY 12, 1897. NO. 29.

THE legislature's sixty days expired yesterday.

THE salary list of the Court of Appeals is $45,000 per annum.

IT seems that the indorsements of Mr. Deboe do not go with Senator Deboe. He signed applications indiscriminately while State Senator, little thinking that they would every rise up to annoy him as a member of the U. S. Senate.

THERE is no probability of the gold Democrats uniting with the silver Democrats at the approaching State election, but there is very little doubt but what they and the Republicans will fuse and name the same candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals.

THE repeal of the Civil Service law is only a question of time. It is only an obstruction to the party in power, when the heads of departments desire to do the proper thing by those who made it possible for them to hold their positions. "To the victors belong the spoils," is a correct policy.

IT is said that Congressman Settle has been informed at the Postoffice Department that postmasters in Kentucky will not be disturbed until their full terms of office expire. This ruling on the part of the authorities at Washington is very unsatisfactory to those Republicans who are desirous of writing p. m. after their names.

THE official rottenness that is being exposed in Cincinnati's city government is causing considerable uneasiness among the leading Republicans in the State of Ohio. The revolting spectacle that is being brought to view in one of their strongholds, may operate greatly to the advantage of the Democrats in the coming State campaign.

THE Senate by a vote of 43 to 26, refused to ratify the general arbitration treaty between the United States and Great Britain negotiated by Secretary Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefote. The rules of the Senate require a majority of two-thirds for the ratification of treaties. Hence four more affirmative votes would have been required to secure a favorable result.

THE Dingley tariff bill, although greatly disfigured, is still in the ring, but its friends in the House are very much displeased at the treatment it has received in the Senate, and intimate that unless the principle features of the bill are restored they will not accept it when sent back to them for approval. The tariff is giving the Republicans about as much trouble as it gave the Democrats.

BRO. ORR, of the Owen News, has been nominated by the Democrats of Owen county as their candidate for representative in the next General Assembly. He has been one of the party leaders in Owen county ever since he was old enough to become interested in politics, and as a testimonial of the services he has rendered, the Democrats have presented him with the nomination for representative.

"THE business manner in which the Kentucky prison is managed," says the Western Argus, "has developed a peculiar state of affairs. Convicts have been counterfeiting, stealing from each other, making moonshine whisky, and last but not least one million feet of lumber has disappeared and with it its value," and the Capital, the Governor's personal organ, bobs up with the charge that Dr. Hunter and Mayor Todd have failed to account for between $30,000 and $40,000 of the Republican campaign funds.

SENATOR GOEBEL presented the following Election Law" Bill last week: "That whenever the County Judge of any county shall be a candidate for any office to be voted for in said county, all duties which by law he is required to discharge pertaining to the election in the year of his candidacy shall devolve upon and be performed by the Sheriff of the county, unless he is also a like candidate for any office, in which event the County Clerk shall discharge the said duties, unless he also is a like candidate for any office, in which event the Circuit Judge shall name, one of the Magistrates of the county who is not a candidate for office in the same year, or if none there be, some good citizen who is not such candidate."

If the above was the law at this time it would devolve upon some good citizen "to discharge the duties pertaining to the election," as all the officers named above are candidates in this county.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

(From Our Regular Correspondent.)

Washington, May 7th, 1897.

"Killed by an overdose of tariff," might be the epitaph on the tomb of the Republican party, if the tariff bill which was this week reported to the Senate is radically changed in many of the schedules. It has started a fight among the Republican party, although, of course, the chances are that the differences will be patched up in some way and a bill of some sort put through at this session of Congress. That the fight is now raging is shown by the open threats of the New England Senators to stay in Wasbington all summer rather than see the duty on hides, which the Senate Finance Committee has put in the bill, remain in the bill, and these Senators are already trying to get the Democratic Senators to promise to vote with them to strike out the duty on hides when the bill is voted upon by sections in the Senate. The western Senators who forced the duty on hides into the bill, have informed the New England Senators that they were not going to stand idly by and see that duty on hides struck out of the bill, when they could get even by combining with the Democrats and adopting an amendment providing for a horizontal reduction in all cotton, woolen and steel manufactures. Representative Grosvenor of Ohio, says of the new bill, for that is what it practically is: "So far as it relates to the wool schedule, the bill is unsatisfactory, and cannot be passed. I do not believe it can pass the Senate, and I know it cannot pass the House. The sugar schedule will be very gratifying to the American Sugar Refining Co., and unsatisfactory to the beet sugar producers in the country. The New England manufacturers are fully provided for. The bill will probably not reach the House in the form reported to the Senate, and if it should it would meet with very strong opposition. The duty on tea will be very unpopular." Those Republicans representing districts having large brewing interests are much worked up over the increase of 44 cents a barrel in the tax on beer and will fight it.

Senator Jones, of Arkansas, who is regarded as a tariff expert as well as one of the most careful political observers of the time, said of the present situation: "This tariff bill means the disruption of the Republican party. The taxes imposed by it will be resented by the people. New England will certainly go Democratic on the question of a duty an hides, but the lesson that will be taught by this one item might be applied to every other section of the country. The next House of Representatives will be Democratic by a large majority." Senator Jones, in reply to a question, said he thought the debate on the tariff bill, which is to begin on the 18th inst., would last until about the first of July.

It is the general disposition in Congress to regard the trip to Europe upon which Senator Wolcott, ex-Vice-President Stevenson, and General Paine will start this week, with credentials authorizing them to negotiate with European Governments in behalf of international bimetallism, as nothing more than a pleasant summer junket for those three gentlemen. There are not a dozen men in Congress who seriously think international bimetallism more than a dream, conocted to starve off an independent settlement of the financial question by this country.

In place of the retroactive tariff in the Dingley tariff bill the Republicans of the Senate Finance committee have inserted a clause making July 1st the date upon which the new duties will go into effect, and unless all the Congressional prophets are away off the date will have to be changed again.

* * *

The fact was made very plain by the assignments of Republicans to the committee vacancies made by the Republican caucus that boss Hanna isn't the whole thing in the Senate whatever he may have been in the campaign or may be with the administration. He didn't even get a chairmanship. The only other Republicans left without chairmanships are Penrose, of Pa., and Deboe of Ky., who took his seat this week. Boss Platt also got turned down by the Republicans. He wanted a place on the Finance Committee, and is doing a lot of kicking because he didn't get it.

The Senate rejected the arbitration treaty this week by a vote, of 43 to 26. Everybody is glad it is out of the way. The Senate also passed the free homestead bill.

Instead of increasing the issue of pie, Mr. McKinley is curtailing it, much to the disgust of the hungry herde. He is keeping it back because he thinks it will be needed to get the tariff bill through, and for the same reason he has not made the modification in the civil service rules that he has decided to make.

The department of agriculture has issued a statistical report showing the numbers and prices of farm animals in the United States on January 1, 1897. It is especially interesting and valuable in regard to the horse-breeding industry, which in the last few years has taken a downward course and continues to be much disturbed. This state of affairs is usually attributed to the rapid introduction of the trolly and the bicycle, but the figures submitted by the department prove these to have been but minor causes. Most of the decline in prices is due to the heavily increased production of horses on the newly opened ranges of the west, and the facilities afforded for handling the traffic by the transcontinental lines of railway. The world has never before seen so large a region suddenly made available for horse-breeding. Between the years 1889 and 1893 the number of horses in Montana, Wyoming, New Mexico, and further west, increased from 1,479,768 to 1,972,532, or about one-third. The surplus was shipped to outside markets.

In the year 1866 the average price of horses in the United States was $59,86. From 1883 to 1889 the average price ranged between $70,59 and $74,64, the latter price having been reached in 1884. By 1893 the average was $65,01. The rapid decline set in after 1893, in which year the average price was $61,22. The figure in 1894 was $57,83; in 1894, $36,29; in 1896, $33,07, and at the beginning of the present year, $31,51. On western ranges the prices are about the lowest on record. The average price of a horse there is but two-fifths of what it was in 1894, and of mules less than one-half. In some parts of the range country horses are rated at $2 a head. They have been given away or shot to save pasturage. Cheap western horses have reduced breeding in the east and south, and it is well known that their quality is inferior to that of the horses displaced.

As to its future the department of agriculture takes an encouraging view, and gives the reasons for it. Since 1893 the number of horses in the western division has declined from 1,972,523 to 1,626,402, or nearly 18 per cent. Our foreign exports of horses have grown from 3.000 a year prior to 1893 to 28,000 in 1896. The horse has lost much of its value as a product in western breeding areas, and they will be devoted to industries that pay better. An improving demand is reported for the better class of horses, especially young ones for draft and driving purposes. The department expresses the belief that "the depression in the horse market has already passed its lowest point." Probably there is no direction in which the breeder can look for better prices more hopefully than in that of good quality. At all events, the market for cheap horses of poor quality is greatly overstocked.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

INVESTIGATIONS set on foot in Cincinnati since the Republicans were defeated in the last city election disclose the fact that the city was systematically robbed by her officials to the amount of hundreds of thousand of dollars. As soon as the Republicans were defeated at the last election they commenced an investigation to head off any sensations that their successors might spring after being inducted into office, and they have surprised themselves by the amount of corruption brought to light in a few weeks.

THE indications are that the two wings of the Democracy in Louisville will flop together at the election this fall despite the efforts of the Post and Courier-Journal to prevent their doing so. The Democrats there are disposed to recognize the right of the proper authority to reorganize the party machinery when it has proven itself inefficient as has been the case in Louisville.

THE fight for Collcetor in this district is now on, and according to the dispatches from Washington it has narrowed down to two gentlemen, Leiberth and Comingore, with the chances in favor of Comingore.

Beauty Spot Don'ts.

Don't take too much spring medicine; its tendency is to thin the blood, and some women make themselves positively anaemic by its injurious use. Proper diet is more important than medicine.

Don't forget when drying the face after washing to rub upward toward the nose. This will prevent wrinkles and help smooth out to a great extent that crease alongside the nose.

Don't use either hot or cold water for bathing exclusively. A good rule to follow is a hot bath at night and a cold one in the morning, but be sure to take a bath daily if you wish to keep your skin in good condition.

Don't wear too tight shoes if you desire a graceful carriage; no woman can walk comfortably or well in a shoe that is too small. Besides, a small shoe distorts the foot in an unnatural manner that deceives no one.

Don't depend entirely on soap and water for cleaning the hands. Have a small brush to scrub them, a cake of pumice stone, the velvet kind, to remove stains, and some borax to whiten them.

Don't resort to artificial means to furnish what nature has denied you. Powder clogs the pores of the skin, and rouge is only fit to be used bebind the footlights. Moreover, it is not an improvement; nothing is pretty that is not natural.

Don't cut the skin at the base of the nails with the scissors. An inexperienced hand is apt to do more harm than good. Have an orange-wood stick and just push it down gently when it is soft after washing.

Don't fail to rub the scalp with the finger tips, and then brush the hair vigorously every night. This will remove the dandruff, which is particles of dead skin that rub off when the scalp is too dry, and obviate to a certain extent the tendency to get gray, for when the hair and scalp are in good, healthy condition, the hair retains its color longer.

Don't attribute the desire to preserve one's physical charms to personal vanity. The first element of beauty is health, and she who would be beautiful must have pure blood and be sound of mind and healthy of body.

THERE is a host of gentlemen who want to succeed the late W. S. Holman, as Congressman.

THE State tax rate this year is 52½ cents on each $100 worth of taxable property.

It is remarked that if Spain had not destroyed her forests she would not have become a decadent nation, depending on colonies for support. After the forests disappeared springs and small streams followed, and agriculture heavily declined.

In a theatrical paper we find that "Miss Katie Partington, who has played Topsy in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' for the last 35 years, has abandoned the part because she has grown too large to sustain it with ease." Too large, mark you, not too old; they never do that.

The Greek-letter fraternity craze has invaded the high schools of the land and chapters are being organized in many towns. One of them, Kappa Phi is a girls' society. Alpha Delta Sigma is boys' fraternity, is said to be extended throughout the United States.

Sunnyside, formerly the home of Washington Irving, has been closed to the public. The present owner declares that the worshipers of Irving have tramped over his grounds, chipped corners from his house, worn out his carpets, carried off his brie-a-brac, and so disturbed his household that his patience is exhausted and he has decided to fence them out.

Santa Rosa, Cal., has a Baptist church which holds over two hundred people built entirely from timber sawn out of a single redwood. Timbers, weather boarding and inner lining are all of wood, there being no plaster or bricks and mortar about it. The roofing, too, is of shingles cut from the same tree, and after it was all finished there were 60,000 shingles left.

A man hypnotized and buried in the ground at Simcoe, Ont., for three days had been disinterred. Great crowds followed the box containing the body to the opera house. As the man was being brought back to a normal condition he was restless and finally smashed the box he was in to pieces. It required five men to control him in his struggles until he was fully restored to consciousness.

A man who had once been tried for murder and acquitted walked into a New York court and said that his conscience troubled him; that he was guilty of the murder of which he had been accused, and that he wanted to be punished. The judge informed him that, having once been put in jeopardy of his life, he could not again, under the constitution, be tried on the same charge; but, being a wise judge and willing to accommodate, he ordered the man taken into custody and inquiry made as to his sanity.

The statistician of the United States mint in San Francisco has forwarded to the director of the mint in Washington the annual report of the gold and silver production of California during 1896. According to returns received at the mint the gold yield of this state last year was $17,181,582, which is an increase over 1895 of $1,847,245. The yield of silver was $422,436, a decreased production for the year of $177,353. The total gold and silver product of the state for the year was $17,604,025, which is a total increase over the previous year of $1,669,918. This is considered a very satisfactory showing.

THE AUTHORITIES

Of Paris Blamed for the Charity Bazaar Catastrophe.

One Hundred and Forty Dead Bodies Taken Out of the Ruins—Several Days Will Elapse Before the Exact Number of Victims Will Be Known.

PARIS, May 7.—The blame for the awful catastrophe at the Grand Bazar de Charitic Tuesday afternoon is being put upon the administrative authorities of the city, because such a combustible structure was allowed to be erected.

No sort of inspection seems to have been made in advance by the prefect of police.

A thorough investigation is promised. Michael Heine, the manager of the bazaar, said last evening: "We ought to have foreseen that such a disaster as this was possible, but the stalls have been increasing every year and we were very anxious not to lose an inch of ground."

President Faure has received telegrams of condolence from Queen Victoria, the Emperor Nicholas, the Emperor William, King Humbert and other sovereigns, all couched in terms of the deepest sympathy.

One hundred and forty bodies have been taken out of the ruins of the charity bazaar fire, and it is believed that still more will be found. It is believed that several days will have elapsed before the exact number of victims is known.

The Matin publishes a report of an interview with a lady designated as "Mille de L.," who described the death of the Duchesse d'Alencon at the fire which destroyed the Charity bazaar on Tuesday. The duchesse was conversing with her son, the Duc de Vendome, in front of the stalls when the cry of fire was spread. The due turned to his mother and said: "Let us go, madame; come immediately."

The duchesse replied: "No, give the visitors time to escape."

"The lady, continuing her story, says:

"I then saw the crowd rush toward the exits. The flames were spreading raidly and the burning tar from the roof was falling upon us. I seized the duchesse about the waist and dragged her a few paces, saying, 'You must come,' but she escaped from my grasp with a brusque movement, saying, 'No, I will remain.'

"I was choking and the flames had already reached us so that I was compelled to abandon her. The duchesse stood motionless with her eyes raised heavenward."

BERLIN, May 7.—The Duchesse d'Alencon was the 18th fiancee of the unfortunate King Ludwig of Bavaria. Ludwig erected in his winter garden a kind of altar with her bust upon it. Before this he passed those hours which he was obliged to spend without her.

The most renowned artists were commissioned to immortale her both in stone and on canvas. A celebrated copper engraver was instructed to draw her in the presence of the king. Immediately afterward Ludwig heard of her fickleness and coquetries with a Munich photographer. Thereupon he destroyed the copper engraving. Next he threw the bust of the princess through the window. These delusions undoubtedly contributed to his subsequent insanity.

PARIS, May 7.—The American chamber of commerce of Paris Thursday adopted a resolution setting forth that the chamber is "deeply pained at the terrible misfortune which has just caused the premature death of so many prominent persons and expresses its most keen and most sincere sympathy and sends to the families of the victims who gave their lives in the cause of charity and benevolence the assurance of its deep and respectful condolences."

NEW YORK FIREMEN

Overcome by Smoke in a $500,000 Fire in New York—One Dead.

NEW YORK, May 7.—The interior of the large cold storage warehouse of the Merchants Refrigerating Co., occupying the upper floors of the five-story brick and stone building, 159 to 163 Chambers street, running to Reade street, was almost completely destroyed by fire Thursday night. The loss will probably amount to more than $500,000. Three alarms called 16 engines to the scene and 30 or more firemen, who entered the basement of 161 Chambers street, where the fire started, were overcome by smoke. Fireman John Rheinhardt missed his way in leaving the cellar and was finally taken out unconscious. He died in an ambulance on the way to the hospital.

Rheinhardt was taken from the cellar by Firemen John J. Murphy and John O'Connell. They were both overcome by smoke while rescuing Rheinhardt and had to be taken to the hospital.

The first floor of 161 Chambers street, in the basement of which the fire started, was occupied by Robert Gair as a paper warehouse. As soon as the firemen got into the cellar they were immediately overcome. Rescuing parties were formed of policemen, citizens and firemen, who carried the unconscious men across the street to engine house No. 29, which was formerly old Chambers street hospital. The horses there were turned out and a hospital made of the place again.

Claim a Majority of Two.

NEW YORK, May 7.—The Herald's Washington correspondent, after a poll of the senate, finds that 45 senators will vote for the reconstructed Dingley bill as now shaped, a majority of two, as the senate is at present constituted.

Farmer Burns Wins.

DAVENPORT, Ia., May 7.—Farmer Martin Burns Thursday night defeated Dan S. McLeod in the wrestling match for the world's championship, $1,000 a side and 75 per cent. of the gate receipts. Burns won the second and third bouts. Time 27, 18 and 10.

A FARM HAND

Kills a Farmer and His Wife Near Waukesha, Wis.—The Hired Man and Hired Girl Probably Fatally Wounded.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 8.—A double, and what may yet prove a quadruple murder, occurred at the farm home of Alexander Harris, who resided about five miles south of Waukesha, at an early hour Friday morning, the victims being Mr. Harris, his wife, hired girl and hired man. The crime was committed, it is supposed, by a farm hand named Wm. Pouch, who had been sheltered by the farmer over night. The dead and wounded are:

Alexander Harris, aged about 45 years, killed outright.

Mrs. Harris, aged 44 years, killed.

Hired girl, fatally wounded.

Hired man, probably fatally wounded.

Early Thursday evening William Pouch, a farm hand who had worked for Mr. Harris about two years ago, called at the house and requested lodging over night. He was taken in, given supper and assigned a room.

After concluding his breakfast, Pouch arose from the table and started to walk toward the door, but suddenly wheeled around and before the women realized what was about to happen he shot Mrs. Harris in the breast and then fired at the hired girl. The farmer's wife fell to the floor with a fatal wound and expired soon afterwards. The hired girl has a chance of recovery.

About 5 o'clock Mr. Harris and the hired man arose and went to the yard to milk the cows. Mr. Harris and the hired girl remaining to prepare breakfast for the family. Pouch left his room quietly, and going to the yard where the men were milking the cows, bade them good morning. Harris and the hired man were sitting on stools near each other and before they were aware of any evil doing Pouch drew a revolver and fired at the farmer, killing him almost instantly. The murderer then turned the weapon upon the hired man and shot him in the body, inflicting a probably fatal wound. The man fell motionless to the ground and Pouch evidently supposed him dead also.

After finishing his bloody work the murderer mounted a bicycle and rode away. He started in a southwesterly direction over the Mukwanago road, and the supposition is that he is headed for Burlington. A posse of farmers are in hot pursuit, and the chances are he will be captured before night. They openly vow that they will lynch the murderer.

The supposition of the authorities is that the man is either insane or that he committed the terrible deed in order to hide evidence of another crime. The manner in which the murders were committed show plainly that he had been deliberate in arranging his plans and had carried them out to the letter.

Mr. Harris was one of the best known farmers in the county and was quite well to do. Pouch had worked for him some time during the summer of 1895 and nothing occurred so far as known to cause any enmity between them. He is described as about five feet in height, 20 years of age, wears a mustache and has blue eyes. The name of the hired man is Nelson McHolt. He is 25 years of age. The girl is Helen Vesbach, aged 26.

It transpires that after shooting his victims Pouch went upstairs and robbed the house.

Latest reports from Mukwanago state that Mrs. Harris was not fatally shot as first stated and may recover. There is little hope for Nelson McHolt, the hired man, and Helen Vestsach, the girl, their wounds being considered fatal.

BRANCH AT INDIANAPOLIS

Of the Railway Mail Service—The Subject Under Discussion.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Senator Fairbanks, of Indiana, Friday had a long conference with Second Assistant Postmaster General Shallenberger on the subject of establishing a branch division of the railway mail service at Indianapolis and pleasing Chief Clerk W. F. Hitt in charge. A special law is required for the establishment of a division of the railway mail service and it is not unlikely that a law is required for the establishment of a branch division. The problem is being seriously considered. It is certain that if a branch division is established in Indianapolis Chief Clerk Hitt will be placed in charge.

Andrews and Jenkins Indicted.

CHICAGO, May 8.—Friday afternoon the grand jury returned seven indictments against Dwight W. Andrews, state grain inspector, and Benj. F. Jenkins, ex-cashier of the state grain inspector's office. Both are accused of embezzling state funds. Andrews is accused of embezzling a total of $11,450 and his bonds are fixed at $9,500. Jenkins is charged with embezzling $3,200.

Tax Reported Strike Unfounded.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., May 8.—The report sent out that a general strike has been declared throughout the East Tennessee coal region was utterly unfounded. The most serious situation is at Jellico, where 2,000 men are waiting settlement as to the wage scale. The strike has not been declared, however, and no trouble is apprehended.

Was Buried Alive.

BROWNSTOWN, Ind., May 8.—Charles Hawn was at work digging a deep trench when it caved in and he was buried alive. As it chanced a number of clods which fell on his head left a space which furnished him air until friends dug him out.

An Underground River.

UPPER SANDUSKY, O., May 8.—A subterranean channel connecting with the immense cave recently discovered in Seneca and adjoining counties is believed to exist in the southeastern portion of this county. At least an underground stream has been discovered on the Ensminger farm. The bottom dropped out of two wells dug about 30 feet deep on the Ensminger farm. An underground river was discovered that is eight feet deep and no one knows how wide. Eyeless fish were taken from the stream, which flows to the north, and it is thought to connect with the Flat Rock cave.

PHARSALAS BATTLE.

The Greek Troops Fought With the Courage of Despair.

The Turks' Endurance and Dash Were Magnificent—There Was No Firing of Volleys, No Bayonet Assaults, But a Leisurely Advance in Good Order.

CONSTANTINOPLE, May 7.—Edhem Pasha, the Turkish commander-in-chief in Thessaly, has sent the following dispatch to the ministry of war, dated Thursday morning:

"The Imperial army, while marching to Pharsalas met the enemy in the village of Soubathi, Souledji, Turcomanli and Lamia. After a severe engagement lasting 15 hours we dislodged them from their positions and advanced to Pharsalas, which the Imperial army has just victoriously occupied."

ATHENS, May 7.—Fighting is proceeding between the Turkish and Greek force at Velestino. It is presumed that the Turks, noticing that Gen. Smolenski was preparing to retreat, attacked him in force. The Turks have burned two villages.

LONDON, May 7.—The Daily Mail's correspondent at Palias, under date of Wednesday, says:

"The Greek battalion Thursday attacked the Turks near Philippiada. The Greeks fought well, but their ammunition was soon expended and they were compelled to retire.

"Officers and men in Spirus are bitterly displeased with the headquarter's staff, and lately the soldiers have been plundering their compatriots. A very unsatisfactory condition of things exists."

LONDON, May 7.—The Daily Mail's correspondent with the Turkish forces at Pharsalas, telegraphing Thursday morning, says:

"Wednesday's battle was the most decisive of the entire war. It was not intended at the beginning that the fight should be a regular pitched engagement, but on the arrival of Edhem Pasha at the outposts a furious firing began.

"The weather was cool and the sky somewhat clondy after a thunderstorm. The village of Pharsalas could be seen, huddled, as it were, under a line of low-peaked hills. Higher and roundabout were black hills rising behind the others, while between us and the village ran the small stream known to the ancients as the Raipeus, crossed by a bridge at the railway.

"Between the stream and the village were the Greeks in an excellent position well defended by earthworks. Their advance line consisted of two brigades, and their reserve of two half brigades, altogether about 20,000 men. As against these were 50,000 Turks.

"The artillery began the engagement, the Greek practice being much better than usual, but after about two hours they began to retire across the river. This was a great mistake, as they were thus inclosed between the river and the mountains, with no room to deploy.

"The sight was supurb. In many cases the Greeks fought with the courage of despair. The great black masses forming the rear guard to hold the bridge, covered the whole rich green plain. The endurance and dash of the Turks were magnificent, too. I reached the battlefield with a regiment whose men began to run forward, dancing under fire, and shouting like children when they saw the enemy. The Greeks repulsed them vigorously and followed up the repulse.

"The Turks had formed in a semi-circle of thundering batteries and crackling battalions. The division on the extreme right tried to cut off the retreat to Domokos, while the remainder of the forces flung itself upon Parsalas.

"The battle was but little like the battles described in books. There was no firing of volleys, no bayonet assault, no rush, no cheering, but only a steady, leisurely advance into the open in perfect order. There was some individual firing and the soldiers shouted "Allah" till the constant repetition swelled into one monotonous shout. I saw some men suddenly fling up their hands and fall face downward, but the Greek fire in the main was ineffective.

"Before 5 o'clock the last village north of the river had been taken. Then the village of Vasili and the entrenchments near the river were stormed, with considerable loss to the Turks, and the battle ceased at nightfall, the flanking division having established itself behind the Greeks and cut off the best line of retreat to Athens."

SHORT OF FUNDS.

Payment of Cleveland Police Court Officials' Salaries Shut Off.

CLEVELAND, O., May 7.—The city auditor has shut off all payment of police court officials' salaries. About a year ago the police court, running short of funds, induced Director Abbot to loan it $2,000 from the police contingent fund. Since that time Abbot has been unable to collect the debt. The matter was taken to Auditor Rossiter, who in person demanded payment of the debt. He was refused, and he informed the police court officials that their salaries would be stopped until the debt is paid in full. The officials under the auditor's ban include Judge Heller, Prosecutor Kennedy, Assistant Prosecutor Schindler, Assistant Prosecutor Brinsmade, Clerk Honecker and seven others. They have no recourse except to seize the money in some way.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., May 7.—The International Association of Machinists at their convention Thursday adopted the report of the committee on resolutions favoring an eight-hour day law.

THE CAPITAL.

Michigan Naval Militia Want the Loan of the U. S. S. Yantic—The Question of Transit of Mail Through Intermediate Countries.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The failure of the senate to make public its action on the arbitration treaty, has created an unusual condition of affairs. There is no official information that the senate has taken any action, or that the treaty has been rejected, or that the defeated treaty was different from the one originally submitted. All that is known officially is that a treaty was concluded by Secretary Olney and Sir Julian Pauncefote and sent to the senate. It then went into executive session, so that no official information has been given as to the amendments made and final action taken. The secrecy of executive session does not permit the state department or the British government to be notified as to what has occurred. It is felt to be due to the other contracting party to the treaty that some notice should be given as to what has been done, and as to the form of the treaty when rejected. In case the senate should never make its action known, the last official record on the treaty would be its submission to the senate four months ago.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The naval militia of Michigan, having put in an earnest request to the navy department for the loan of the U. S. S. Yantic for their use as soon as she returns from the South Atlantic station, Secretary Long has been looking into the possibilities of getting the ship up the canals connecting the lakes with the ocean, and also into the stipulations of the treaty of Washington to ascertain whether or not the latter would stop the entry of the Yantic into the lakes if she were dismantled of her guns. The doctrine laid down during the last administration of President Cleveland, in the face of an earnest brief in the negative by his friend, Don Dickinson, was so broadly adverse to the construction of anything in the semblance of a warship on the lakes that there is no doubt that the present application would be included in its inhibition, although it is, of corse, possible that the present administration may take a different view of the matter. However, the case is not likely to go that far, inasmuch as the construction bureau has reported that even if all movable weights are removed from the Yantic, she could not be brought up to a draft of nine feet and so could not pass the canals.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The question of transit of mails through intermediary countries was threshed over again Friday at a meeting of the subcommittee on transit of the "ways and means" committee of the Universal Postal congress. The committee met early and spent several hours in going over the subject. Mr. Havelarr, of Holland, the representative of a country which, perhaps, would have more reason than any other to oppose the projected transit reforms, presided. The deliberations gave the delegates an opportunity to present their several views, but developed no definite result.

Congress itself is taking a recess until next week, when it will meet probably to receive the report of the subcommittee upon the latter's notification that it is in readiness to communicate its findings.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Postmaster Brown, of Cincinnati, called on First Assistant Postmaster General Heath Friday and asked for ten new letter carriers, four new clerks and four new street railway postal cars for Cincinnati.

Brown urged the rapid growth of Cincinnati and the annexation of five suburbs as reasons for the increased facilities, which, he said, were absolutely necessary. Heath and Brown will have another conference Saturday.

THE CUBAN WAR.

Negotiations for a Peaceful Solution of the Troubles, Pending by Purchase or Otherwise.

NEW YORK, May 8.—A special to the Journal from Havana says: Your correspondent is able upon high authority to confirm the Journal's recent Washington reports as to negotiations pending there between Secretary of State Sherman, Dupoy de Lome and Estrada Palma, looking to a peaceful solution, by purchase or otherwise, of the island of Cuba.

The story is the topic of conversation in all the clubs.

El Diario de La Marina, the reformist organ here, in a leader sounds an ominous note of warning by intimating that the so-called reforms that Premier Canovas has offered to the island will be little more than a farce should Cuba be left to pay the cost of the war. Spain must pay it, El Diario declares, otherwise, the paper adds, she can not hope to keep the colony and continue to monopolize its trade.

Murder and Suicide.

LEADVILLE, Col., May 8.—A woman known as Miss Belle Walker was shot and instantly killed by her lover, who called himself George Ratliffe, after a quarrel. The assassin then took his own life. A letter was found on the person of the dead man addressed to the coroner, and stated that his real name was Gardner Marchbanks, and his home was in Ouray. The woman's name was Laura Belle Lantz. Marchbanks said he sacrificed everything in the world for the woman and she deceived him.

Call's Name Withdrawn.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., May 8.—Call was withdrawn in the race for United States senator Friday and J. N. C. Stockton, a Jacksonville banker and supporter of Call, was placed in nomination. The result of the ballot Friday was Chipley, 37; Stockton, 33; Raney, 20; Hocker, 3; Burford, 1.—Total, 94. Chipley's friends have driven Call from the race and hope soon to effect Chipley's election.

Cheapest and Best.

Very few shooters load shot gun shells now that factory loaded shells can be bought so cheap. It is cheaper and easier to buy than to load shot shells, and there is no question thus the machine loaded are better than the hand loaded. The shells loaded by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co., New Haven, Ct., are the standard of the world for reliability, uniformity and strong shooting qualities. They are used by all the best shots in preference to any others. Winchester loaded shells can be bought of all dealers in all gauges and loads. Results show them to be the best on the market. A Dangerous Lethargy.

The forerunner of a train of evils, which too often culminate fatally, is inactivity or lethargy of the kidneys. Not only is Bright's disease, diabetes, gravel, or some other dangerous integral disease of the organs themselves to be apprehended, but dropsical diffusions from the blood, rheumatism and gout, are all traceable to the non-removal from the blood by the kidneys of certain impurities. Hostetter's Stomach Bitters depurates the blood, renders the kidneys active and prevents their disease.

MIRACLE AND CONDITION.

The Eloquent Dr. Talmage Draws a Parallel Between Them.

The Ravens Fed Elijah, and So the Toiling Millions Must Look to the Hand of God for Means to Support Themselves and Families.

Talmage's sermon Sunday was to the last degree appropriate to all who are trying to achieve a livelihood. Text: I. Kings, xvii., 6: "And the ravens brought him bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening."

The ornithology of the Bible is a very interesting study. The stork which knoweth her appointed time. The common sparrows teaching the lesson of God's providence. The ostriches of the desert, by careless incubation, illustrating the recklessness of parents who do not take enough pains with their children. The eagle symbolizing riches which take wings and fly away. The pelican emblemizing solitude. The bat, a flake of the darkness. The night hawk, the ossifrage, the cuckoo, the lapwing, the osprey, by the command of God in Leviticus, flung out of the world's bill of fare.

I would like to have been with Audubon as he went through the woods, with gun and pencil, bringing down and sketching the fowls of heaven, his unfolded portfolio thrilling all Christendom. What wonderful creatures of God the birds are! Some of them, this morning, like the songs of Heaven let loose, bursting through the gates of Heaven. Consider their feathers, which are clothing and conveyance at the same time; the nine vertebrae of the neck, the three eyelids to each eye, the third eyelid an extra curtain for graduating the light of the sun. Some of these birds scavengers and some of them orchestra. Thank God for quails' whistle, and lark's carol, and the twitter of the wren, called by the ancients the king of birds, because when the fowls of heaven entered into a contest as to who should fly the highest and the eagle swung nearest the sun, a wren on the back of the eagle, after the eagle was exhausted, sprang up much higher and so was called by the ancients the king of birds. Consider those of them that have golden crowns to be feathered imperials. And listen to the humming bird's serenade in the ear of the honeysuckle. Look at the belted kingfisher, striking like a dart from sky to water. Listen to the voice of the owl, giving the keynote to all croakers. And behold the condor among the Andes battling with the raindeer. I do not know whether the antiquarium or aviary is the best altar from which to worship God.

There is an incident in my text that baffles all the ornithological wonders of the world. The grain crop had been cut off. Famine was in the land. In cave by the brook Cherith at a minister of God, Elijah, waiting for something to eat. Why did he not go to the neighbors? There were no neighbors; it was a wilderness. Why did he not pick some of the berries? There were none. If there had been they would have been dried up. Seated one morning at the mouth of his cave the prophet sees a flock of birds approaching. Oh, if they were only partridges, or if he only had an arrow with which to bring them down. But as they come nearer he finds that they are not comestible, but unclean, and the eating of them would be spiritual death. The strength of their beak, the length of their wings, the blackness of their color, their loud, harsh "cruck! cruck!" prove them to be ravens.

They whirr around about the prophet's head, and then they come on fluttering wing and pause on the level of his lips, and one of the ravens brings bread, and another raven brings meat, and after they have discharged their tiny cargo they wheel past, and others come, until after awhile the prophet has enough, and these black servants of the wilderness table are gone. For six months, and some say a whole year, morning and evening, a breakfast and a supper bell sounded as these ravens rang out on the air their "cruck! cruck!" Guess where they got the food from. The old rabbins say they got it from the kitchen of King Ahab. Others say that the ravens got their food from Obadiah, who was in the habit of feeding the persecuted. Some say that the ravens brought the food to their young in the trees, and that Elijah had only to climb up and get it. Some say that the whole story is improbable; for these were carnivorous birds, and the food they carried was the torn flesh of living beasts, and, therefore, ceremonially unclean, or it was carrion, and would not have been fit for the prophet. Some say they were not ravens at all, but that the word translated "ravens" in my text ought to have been translated "Arabs;" so it would have read: "The Arabs brought bread and flesh in the morning, and bread and flesh in the evening." Anything but admit the Bible to be true.

Hew away at this miracle until all the miracle is gone. Go on with the depleting process, but know, my brother, that you are robbing only one man—and that is yourself—of one of the most comforting, beautiful, pathetic and triumphant lessons in all the ages. I can tell you who these purveyors were—they were ravens. I can tell you who freighted them with provisions—God. I can tell you who launched them—God. I can tell you who taught them which way to fly—God. I can tell you who told them at what cave to swoop God. I can tell you who introduced raven to prophet and prophet to raven —God. There is one passage I will whisper in your ear, for I would not want to utter it aloud, lest some one should drop down under its power—"If any man shall take away from the words of the prophecy of this Book, God shall take away his part out of the Book of Life and out of the Holy City."

While, then, we watch the ravens feeding Elijah, let the swift dove of God's spirit sweep down the sky with divine food, and on outspread wing pause at the lip of every soul hungering for comfort.

On the banks of what rivers have been the great battles of the world? While you are looking over the map of the world to answer that, I will tell you that the great conflict to-day is on the Potomac, on the Hudson, on the Mississippi, on the Thames, on the Savannah, on the Rhine, on the Nile, on the Ganges, on the Hoang-Ho. It is a battle that has been going on for 6,000 years. The troops engaged in it are 1,600,000,000, and those who have fallen by the way are vaster in number than those who march. It is a battle for bread.

Sentimentalists sit in a cushioned chair, in their pictured study, with their slippered feet on a damask ottoman, and they say that this world is a great scene of avarice and greed. It does not seem so to me. If it were not for the absolute necessities of the cases, nine-tenths of the stores, factories, shops, banking houses of the land would be closed to-morrow. Who is that man delving in the Colorado hills, or killing in a New England factory, or going through a roll of bills in the bank, or measuring a fabric on the counter? He is a champion sent forth in behalf of some homecircle that has to be cared for, in behalf of some Church of God that has to be supported, in behalf of some asylum of mercy that has to be sustained. Who is that woman bending over the sewing machine, or carrying the bundle, or sweeping the room, or mending the garment, or sauce-tending the washtub? That is Deborah, one of the Lord's heroines, battling against Amalekitish want, which comes down with iron chariot to crush her and hers. The great question with the vast majority of people to-day is not "Home Rule," but whether there shall be any home to rule; not one of tariff, but whether there shall be anything to tax. The great question with the vast majority of people is, "How shall I support my family?" How shall I meet my notes? How shall I pay my rent? How shall I give food, clothing and education to those who are dependent upon me?" Oh, if God would help me to-day to assist you in the solution of that problem the happiest man in this house would be your preacher! I have gone out on a cold morning with expert sportsmen to hunt for pigeons; I have gone out on the meadows to hunt for quail; I have gone out on the marsh to hunt for reed birds, but to-day I am out for ravens.

Notice, in the first place in the story of my text, that these winged caterers came to Elijah direct from God.

"I have commanded the ravens that they feed thee," we find God saying in an adjoining passage. They did not come out of some other cave. They did not just happen to alight there. God freighted them, and told them by what cave to sweep. That is the same God that is going to supply you. He is your Father. You would have to make an elaborate calculation before you could tell me how many pounds of food and how many yards of clothing would be necessary for you and your family; but God knows without any calculation. You have a plate at His table, and you are going to be waited on, unless you act like a naughty child, and kick, and scramble, and pound saucily the plate and try to upset things.

God has vast family, and everything is methodical, and you are going to be served if you will only wait your turn. God has already ordered all the suits of clothes you will ever need, down to the last suit in which you will be laid out. God has already ordered all the food you will ever eat, down to the last crumb that will be put in your mouth in the dying sacraments. It may not be just the kind of food or apparel we would prefer. The sensible parent depends on his own judgment as to what ought to be the apparel and the food of the minor in the family. The child would say, "Give me sugars and confections." "Oh, no," says the parent, "you must have something plainer first." The child would say, "Oh, give me these great blotches of color in the garment." "No," says the parent, "that wouldn't be suitable."

Now, God is our Father and we are minors, and he is going to clothe us and feed us, although he may not always yield to our infantile wish for the sweets and glitter. These ravens of the text did not bring pomegranates from the glittering platter of King Ahab. They brought bread and meat. God had all the heavens and earth before Him and under Him, and yet He sends this plain food, because it was best for Elijah to have it. Oh, be strong, my hearer, in the fact that the same God is going to supply you. It is never "hard times" with Him. His ship never breaks on the rocks. His banks never fail. He has the supply for you, and He has the means of sending it. He has not only the cargo, but the ship. If it were necessary, He would swing out from the heavens a flock of ravens reaching from His gate to yours, until the food would be flung down from the sky from beak to beak and from talon to talon.

Notice again in the story of the text, that the ravens did not allow Elijah to hoard up a surplus. They did not bring enough one morning to last until the next morning. They came twice a day, and brought just enough for one time. You know as well as that the great fret of the world is that we want a surplus; we want the ravens to bring enough for 50 years. You have more confidence in the Washington banks or the Bank of England than you have in the royal bank of Heaven. You say: "All that is very poetic, but you may have the black ravens; give me the golden eagles." We had better be content with just enough. If in the morning your family eat up all the food there is in the house do not sit down and cry and say: "I don't know where the next meal is to come from." About 5, or 6, or 7 o'clock in the morning just look up and you will see two black spots on the sky, and you will hear the flapping of wings, and instead of Edgar A. Poe's insane raven alighting on the chamber door, "only this and nothing more," you will find Elijah's two ravens, or two ravens of the Lord, the one bringing bread and the other bringing meat —plumed butcher and baker.

God is infinite in resource. When the city of Rochelle was besieged and the inhabitants were dying of the famine, the tides washed up on the beach as never before, and as never since, enough shellfish to feed the whole city. God is good. There is no mistake about that. History tell us that in 1555, in England, there was a great drought. The crops failed; but in Essex, on the rocks, in a place where they had neither sown nor cultured, a great crop of peas grew until they filled a hundred measures, and there were blossoming vines enough, promising as much more.

But why go so far? I can give you a family incident. Some generations back there was a great drought in Connecticut, New England. The water disappeared from the hills and the farmers living on the hills drove their cattle down toward the valleys and had them supplied at the wells and fountains of the neighbors. But these after a while began to fail, and the neighbors said to Mr. Birdseye, of whom I shall speak: "You must not send your flocks and herds down here any more, our wells are giving out." Mr. Birdseye, the old Christian man, gathered his family at the altar, and with his family he gathered the slaves of the household—for bondage was then in vogue in Connecticut—and on their knees before God they cried for water; and the family story is that there was weeping and great sobbing at that altar that the family might not perish for lack of water, and that the herds and flocks might not perish.

The family rose from the altar. Mr. Birdseye, the old man, took his staff and walked out over the hills, and in a place where he had been scores of times, without noticing anything in particular, he saw the ground was very dark, and he took his staff and poked up the ground and water started, and he beckoned to his servants, and they came and brought pails and buckets until the family and all the flocks and the herds were cared for; and then they made troughs reaching from that place down to the house and barn, and the water flowed, and it is a living fountain to-day.

Now I call that old grandfather Elijah, and I call that brook that began to roll then, and is rolling still, the Brook Cherith, and the lesson to me and all who hear it, when you are in great stress of circumstances, pray and dig, dig and pray and pray and dig. How does that passage go? "The mountains shall depart and the hills be removed, but my loving kindness shall not fail." If your merchandise, if your mechanism, if your husbandry, fail, look out for ravens. If you have in your despondency put God on trial and condemned him guilty of cruelty I move to-day a new trial. If the biography of your life is ever written I will tell you what the first chapter and the middle chapter and the last chapter will be about if it is written accurately. The first chapter about mercy, the middle chapter about mercy, the last chapter about mercy. The mercy that hovered over your cradle. The mercy that will hover over your grave. The mercy that will cover all between.

Again, this story of the text impresses me that relief came to this prophet with the most unexpected and with seemingly impossible conveyance. It had been a robin red breast or a musical song thrush or a white turtle dove, or a sublime albatross that had brought the food to Elijah it would not have been so surprising. But no. It was a bird so fierce and inauspicate that we have fashioned one of our most forceful and repulsive words out of it—ravenous. That bird has a passion for picking out the eyes of men and of animals. It loves to maul the sick and the dying. It swallows with vulturous guzzle everything it can put its beak on, and yet all the food Elijah gets for six months or a year is from ravens. So your supply is going to come from an unexpected source.

Do you think some great-hearted, generous man will come along and give you his name on the back of your note, or he will go security for you in some great enterprise. No, he will not. God will open the heart of some Shylock toward you. Your relief will come from the most unexpected quarter. The Providence which seemed ominous will be to you more than that which seemed auspicious. It will not be a chaffinch with breast and wing dashed with white and brown and chestnut; it will be a black raven.

Here is where we all make our mistake, and that is in regard to the color of God's providence. A white providence comes to us, and we say, "Oh, it is mercy!" Then a black providence comes toward us, and we say, "Oh, that is disaster!" The white providence comes to you and you have great business success, and you have 100,000, and you get proud, and independent of God, and you begin to feel that the prayer, "Give me this day my daily bread," is inappropriate for you, for you have made provision for 100 years. Then a black providence comes, and it sweeps everything away, and then you begin to pray, and you begin to feel your dependence, and begin to be humble before God, and you cry out for Treasures in Heaven. The black providence brought you salvation. The white providence brought you ruin. That which seems to be harsh, and fierce, and dissonant, was your greatest mercy. It was a raven.

An interesting development of the present war in Europe is the surprising military strength of the small Balkan states, Bulgaria, Servia and Roumania. Bulgaria, a principality with an area of 37,800 square miles, nearly the same as Indiana, has an active war strength of 175,000 men. The monarchy of Servia, with an area of 18,787 square miles, half the size of Indiana, has 125,000 regulars and 63,000 reserves, while Roumania, with an area of 49,000 square miles, has a war footing of 175,000 officers and men.

FIRE AT SEA.

Flames Break Out in the Mallory Line Steamer Leona.

The Vessel Puts Back to New York With Sixteen Corpses on Board.

Thirteen of the Steerage Passengers and Three of the Crew Suffocated by Smoke —The Former Were Penned Up Below Decks—Efforts to Save Them.

NEW YORK, May 10.—The Mallory line steamer Leona, which left her pier on Saturday bound for Galveston, took fire at sea, put back and arrived in port Sunday night with 16 corpses aboard. The dead were thirteen steerage passengers and three members of the crew, who succumbed to a terrible fire which occurred off the Delaware capes at an early hour Sunday morning. The horror of the story can hardly be told Sunday night. Those who are dead were penned up below decks, and although frantic efforts were made by the officers of the vessel to save them, the fire had gained such terrific headway before the danger was discovered that all escape was cut off. The steamer carried in her cargo many bales of cotton. It is not certain how the fire originated, but when it was discovered it burst forth with such fury that it was impossible to reach the steerage. Even then the steerage passengers apparently were unmindful of the danger, rise the smoke and flames had not reached them. The saloon passengers were first aroused, and in such a manner as to occasion little alarm. When it became apparent that the fire had cut off the steerage, the captain and his men poured great quantities of water down the ventilator, and the most frantic efforts were made for the escape of those penned up. In this way eight of the steerage passengers made their escape.

The dead are: Steerage passengers—Bridget Sullivan, R. Cotiane, Mrs. C. Guzza, Miss Guzza, Miss Hannah Solomanson, Mrs. Valcieks, Miss Valcieks, Sophie Schwart, Myra Wades, two unknown children, two unidentified. The crew—Alfred Ilardy, waiter, 41 years old, New York; Alfred Lang, waiter, 19 years old, New York; H. Hartmann, butcher, 27 years old, New York.

The passengers were all transferred to the City of Augusta in safety and the work of fighting the fire was continued. About 9 o'clock in the morning the flames were under control and the steamer out of danger. The passengers were sent back to the Leona and the City of Augusta continued on her way to Savannah. The Leona put about and returned to port under her own steam.

The Leona is a schooner rigged steel screw steamer of 3,329 tons gross and 2,351 tons net register. She was built in 1889 at Chester, Pa. Her dimensions are: Length, 314 feet; breadth, 46.2 feet and depth of hold 20.3 feet. She has three decks and six bulkheads. She was last surveyed in September, 1896.

GEN. WEYLER

Will Be Allowed in Cuba Two Months More to Complete His "Reforms."

NEW YORK, May 10.—A dispatch to the World from Madrid says: It is officially stated that the government can see no grounds to listen to the arguments of the Madrid press or the opposition politicians and has determined to allow Gen. Weyler to remain at the head of the forces in the field in Cuba and at the same time to continue to act as governor general to carry out the reforms gradually, as he may deem that the circumstances and conditions of the colony permit. It is expected that fully two months, if not more, will be required to make preparations for the elections and the first installment of reforms. Gen. Weyler will also be allowed to determine after complete pacification of the island the conditions on which political exiles will be permitted to return to the colony or how their treatment shall be modified in the Spanish fortresses and penal settlements on the coast of Africa, where about 2,000 separatists or Autonomists are at present detained by virtue of decisions of the colonial authorities without trial of any kind, but simply as suspects. Every mail steamer is still bringing over some "deportados," as they are styled. The Madrid opposition press persists in advocating some amelioration of their condition, and liberal, republican and Cuban autonomist representatives have often interposed in their favor, sometimes obtaining permission for them to remain in Spain or to go to less unhealthy depots. In official circles it is stated that there is no idea of proclaiming amnesty yet.

Farmer Harris' Murderer Still at Large.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 10.—The report that the murderer of Farmer Harris, near Mukwannano, had been captured at Lake Beulah proves to be unfounded. A stranger struck the vicinity Friday night, but disappeared about 11 o'clock without an attempt having been made to arrest him.

FIFTY-FIFTH CONGRESS.

Extraordinary Session.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—SENATE.—The executive session of the senate Monday, was devoted largely to the consideration of the Anglo-American arbitration treaty, which is to be voted upon Wednesday. The question was brought up by Senator Morgan, who again announced his opposition to the agreement. He spoke at length, maintaining that it was a mistake for this country to enter into such an alliance with Great Britain as was involved in the ratification of the treaty even in its amended form. The tariff bill will soon be taken up in the senate.

HOUSE.—A senate resolution appropriating $50,000 for the congress of the Universal Postal union was adopted and Mr. Snowwalter, the republican chosen at a special election to represent the 25th Pennsylvania district, was sworn in. "The issue was made," as Speaker Reed put it, in the house on Monday, on the speaker's policy of postponing the appointment of committees. Mr. Simpson, of Kansas, brought it on by another attack upon the speaker, which moved Mr. Reed to challenge to propose a resolution instructing the speaker to appoint the committees. When the vote was taken on the proposition the speaker was sustained by practically the solid vote of his party, assisted by 23 democrats under the leadership of Mr. Bailey. The resolution was defeated, years 82, nays 124, present 13.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—SENATE.—Senators Lindsay (Ky.) and Foraker (O.) had a lively tilt in the senate late Tuesday during the consideration of the sundry civil appropriation bill. There was added interest in the controversy from the fact that Mr. Foraker is a newcomer and this was his maiden effort, while Mr. Gorman is one of the veterans of the senate. It occurred when Mr. Foraker offered an amendment appropriating $400,000 for the Tennessee river. This gave Mr. Gorman a text for a severe criticism of reckless extravagance in appropriation. Mr. Foraker finally withdrew the amendment. A final vote on the free homestead bill was taken at 3 o'clock and the bill passed, 42 to 21. The tariff bill was reported early in the day and Mr. Aldrich gave notice that it would be called up on the 18th inst. The Morgan Cubar resolution again went over. The sundry civil bill was considered, but was not completed.

HOUSE.—Not in session.

WASHINGTON, May 6.—SENATE.—The open session of the senate Wednesday was devoted to the sundry civil appropriation bill, which was not completed up to the time of adjournment. Mr. Deboe, of Kentucky, took the oath of office. Considerable civil service discussion followed the introduction of an amendment of Mr. Wilson (Wash.) requiring the appointment of commissioners to classify Northern Pacific land in the northwest "by and with the consent of the senate." Mr. Morgan offered an amendment appropriating $5,000 for the improvement of Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Mr. Aldrich (rep., R. I.) said he sympathized with the purpose of the amendment, but it should not be put on this bill, as a similar item had been rejected by the house last year. Mr. Morgan felt that the house might change its attitude. The amendment was agreed to. The senate, by a vote of 43 to 26, refused to ratify the general arbitration treaty between Great Britain and the United States.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—SENATE.—The senate Thursday agreed to an amendment to the sundry civil bill, revoking the order of President Cleveland, made on February 1 last, establishing forest reservations aggregating 17,000,000 acres. The debate brought out much criticism of Mr. Cleveland's order. Senators Pettus, Vest, Wilson, Turner, Kyle, Jones and White speaking against it. Mr. Gray (Del.) defended the course of the president, pointing out that it was the result of an inquiry authorized by congress and conducted by the National Academy of Science. Mr. Allison endeavored to have the amendment restricted so as to leave the question of revocation to the president, but he was defeated on a yea and nay vote, 14 to 32. Mr. Gorman made a point of order against the amendment, but this, being submitted to the senate, was defeated—23 to 23. The amendment was then agreed to without division. The sundry civil bill was passed late in the day. It carries an aggregate of $43,000,000. During the day Mr. Hacon, of Georgia, introduced a joint resolution deprecating war and announcing the policy of the government in favor of arbitration. The resolution was referred to the committee on foreign relations.

HOUSE.—The republicans of the house Thursday followed up their recent endorsement of Speaker Reed's policy of postponing the appointment of committees by establishing the policy of bi-weekly meetings through the adoption of a resolution reported by the committee on rules providing that the house shall meet on Mondays and Thursdays until further action. On this resolution the democrats and populists were solidly arrayed against the republicans and it was adopted during the day by a vote of 161 to 83 after a partisan debate. The opposition, led by Mr. Bailey, of Texas, was based on the ground that the programme would prevent consideration of the bankruptcy bill. Adjourned until Saturday.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION

Favor the Immediate Enforcement of Shorter Hours for Labor.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 6.—The committee of the International Typographical union, in session here, made a partial report Wednesday stating that the depression at present existing throughout the country made the time most propitious for the immediate enforcement of the suggestions, relative to short hours, contained in the proposition adopted by a referendry vote of the membership consisting of the compositors, electrotypers, stereotypers, mailers and photo-engravers. They realize, they say, that shorter hours can only be secured by united action and a vigorous and carefully planned campaign.

PROF. BARNARD

Makes a Journey in an Airship Constructed by Himself.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., May 7.—Thursday, at the Tennessee Centennial Exposition grounds, Prof. Arthur Barnard, physical instructor of the Y. M. C. A., of Nashville, began a journey in an airship constructed by himself. The officials of the exposition and the people attending witnessed the ascent of the aerial voyager.

The ship moved off in perfect order and passed out of sight in a few minutes. Prof. Barnard promised to sail against the wind after rising into the air and he did so. The airship will be continued in use at the exposition. Prof. Barnard said he would land at the starting point Thursday night. The airship is 40 feet long and 20 in diameter.

SEATTLE, Wash., May 7.—United States revenue cutter Bear has sailed on her annual cruise to the Arctic. She will stop at Unga island and Ounalaska, and then proceed to Point Barrow, returning to the sound next November. Aboard the Bear is the coast and geodetic survey party, which is to make a survey of the Pribyloff islands, at the head of which is W. W. Duffield, son of the chief of the United States coast and geodetic survey service. With him are Fremont Morse, G. R. Putnam and George L. Putnam and six college boys, mostly from Chicago.

A FORECAST

Of the Business to Be Transacted in Congress this Week.

The Morgan Cuban Resolution Will Be Considered in the Senate.

The Committees Will Be Filled the First Part of the Week—Three Day Adjournments in the House Will Be suspended—The Sundry Civil Bill.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 10.—There is no certainty as to the line of proceeding in the senate during the present week. The Morgan Cuban resolution probably will be taken up Monday, and it may lead to a long and spirited debate. Senate Morgan is quite determined to press the resolution to an issue and Senator Hale just as determined to prevent its passage. Mr. Hale ultimately will move to refer the resolution to the committee on foreign relations, and an effort will be made to enlist the friends of the administration against it. The committees will be filled Monday or Tuesday, but as this will be done on the basis heretofore agreed upon there will be no friction over the proceeding. The conference report on the Indian appropriation bill may cause some debate, but the probabilities that the agreement of the conferees will be generally acquiesced in.

The house programme of three day adjournments will be suspended this week. The sundry civil appropriation bill has passed the senate and now returns to the house for action on the amendments. The programme pursued when the Indian bill came back to the house will probably be followed in the case of the sundry civil. That is, the amendments will be considered in the house before the bill is sent to conference. There is a good deal of bitter feeling among the house factions, which may break out as soon as opportunity for debate is given, and some lively oratorical displays are expected. The conference report on the Indian appropriation bill also will be ready for consideration before the week closes. The questions involved in the opening of the Uncompahgre reservation in Utah will, of course, furnish the main source of contention in the debate on this report.

A vigorous policy of extending mail facilities for the suburbs of the large cities as far as possible by both steam and electric cars has been adopted by Second Assistant Postmaster General Shallenberger. Many of the big cities will be given material additional service for the outlaying districts if the citizens of those points co-operate with the department to make it a success and this statement will be a welcome announcement to numerous places where feeling is evidenced that the demands of the suburbs are not met. Mr. Shallenberger is giving the matter careful attention, and, as an initiative, has just made contracts at Pittsburgh, Pa., for additional train service to various suburbs there, within a range of about 30 miles from the city, whereby from one to three extra mails a day will result from the use of accommodation trains. Electric cars will figure largely in future postal operations, owing to the large number of settled districts where the steam roads do not touch.

TEXAS RAILROADS.

Improvements to the Aggregate Cost of About $4,000,000 to Be Made.

AUSTIN, Tex., May 10.—According to the testimony adduced before the railroad commissioners in the investigation, which has just closed, the railroads of Texas expect in the very near future to make improvements, the aggregate cost of which, taking their own statements and figures will be about $4,000,000. If these statements are true, and there is no reason to doubt them, the roads evidently anticipate an early era of prosperity in this state and propose to help good times along by expending large sums of money, which will be scattered among the people.
